THIRD WEEK OF LENT.

Numerous Weddings the Prominent Feature of Minneapolis Sociability.

Lenten Skies Are Brightning at the Approach of Easter Morn.

Numerous Balls and Parties Announced for the Near Future.

Club Socials Contribute Animation to the Week--Personals.

Social life for the last week has broken down the barriers of Lent in several places, Cupid doesn't believe in it at all and has played havoc with numerous hearts that beat just as joyously as if it wasn't the week before Palm Sunday, and the hearts are in the breasts of some of the society people of Minneapolis. Wednesday and Thursday were the days on which weddings were particularly fashionable. The darkest hour they say is the hour before the dawning, but the rule is broken in Minneapolis society this Lental season for the beams of the light beyond are breaking through and the murky clouds are already beginning to disperse. The ladies of the churches in which Lent is most rigorously observed, can with perfect propriety busy themselves with the floral decorations of their temples for Easter, and the next week they will be busily engaged in the work. Those of lighter thought are looking beyond with happy anticipation to the Easter balls and parties. During the week that is past Curtiss hall has twice been gay with the monthly meetings of state society organizations—happy gatherings like unto families coming together for reunions, where children and old people dance along with the chivalry and beauty.

A HOST OF WEDDINGS.

Max Segelbaum and Miss Georgiana Weiskoph were wedded on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock with the most happy ceremonies, at 2111 Chicago avenue, the home of Mrs. L. Weiskoph, the mother of the bride. The party present consisted of the relatives of the two families only, but the wedding was a most brilliant one. Jacqueminot roses, calla lilies and smilax in rich profusion decorated the parlor most handsomely. The bride was most tastefully dressed in a cream faille silk Francaise en traine with point lace, diamond ornaments, tulle veil. Lillies of the valley added grace to the handsome apparel, a bouquet of white roses in the bride's hand completing the whole. Rabbi E. Hess, of St. Paul, performed the ceremonies. When the knot had been tied an elegant supper was served by Dorsett, and at 6:30 the happy couple bid farewell to friends and Minneapolis and started for an extensive eastern tour. Many handsome and valuable gifts were received. The couple will be at home after May 1 at 1419 Chicago avenue.

A wedding which proved to be quite a surprise party to the friends of those connected with it, and which, therefore, awakened quite a tremor in society circles, occured Thursday evening. It was that of Miss Senuta Fiske and Arthur Whitten, cashier of the telephone company, both of them well known in society. The lady arrived in the city from Chicago and, taking a carriage, met Mr. Whitten at the Holmes hotel, and together they drove to a minister's and were quietly married. The courtship has been going on for some time, but the wedding, from its suddenness, aroused quite a flutter.

Villads B. Skov, who recently graduated at the Luther seminary, was married Monday evening to Miss Kusten Jenson, a young lady of Minneapolis. Rev. O. P. Vangsues officiated, the ceremonies taking place at Our Savior's church. After the knot had been tied the company repaired to the prettily decorated school room adjoining. An excellent supper, and music from the seminary orchestra made the reception a happy occasion. On Wednesday the couple left for Port Amboy, N. J.

At 1400 Ninth avenue south on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Frank C. Metcalf and Miss Sadie C. Elliot, the daughter of Wyman Elliot, were joined in wedlock. A few relatives and friends were present, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank P. Woodbury. Charles T. Reed acted as best man and Miss Jennie Elliot as bridesmaid. The floral decorations were very beautiful, and naught could have been added to the ceremonies. The couple departed for an Eastern tour at 6 o'clock.

One of the largest social gatherings during the week and one of the most delightful occasions of the social season was the crystal wedding of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Harris, given at their pleasant home, 1507 Clinton avenue. The residence was very prettily decorated with flowers and the guests—about one hundred in number—made merry during the evening. Music, reading and social enjoyment filled the first part of the evening and then refreshments were served by Dorsett.

Miss Leslie M. Mulvey and W. S. Bell, both of Minneapolis, were married at the Highland Park Presbyterian church Wednesday evening last, Rev. A. K. Harsha officiating. Miss May Parcher was bridesmaid and E. D. Rockwell best man. After the ceremony a pleasant reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, 1019 Twenty-first avenue north. Mr. and Mrs. Bell will be at home at 1904 Bryant avenue north.

Miss Elizabeth Peckham Brooks, of Minneapolis, and Charles Phelps Williams, of New York city, were married in that city last Thursday at the Collegiate Dutch church, Rev. Dr. E. Coe officiating. Miss Anne Brooks and W. S. Brooks, of this city, were present to take part in the ceremonies. A reception was given afterward at the Hotel Brunswick.

Another Wednesday wedding was that of Miss Cora E. Cross and William W. Vader at the home of A. M. Cross, 719 Northeast Madison street. The young people are great favorites in their circle of friends, who extend wishes of great joy to them at their home on Fourth avenue northeast.

Loyd Wooders, of Minneapolis, and Miss Etta F. Dow, of Red Wing, were married Wednesday at the home of the bride. The wedding was largely attended and was a brilliant affair. After a California tour the couple will make their home in Minneapolis.

LAST WEEK'S HAPPENINGS.

The New York association had a very pleasant time at their monthly meeting held in Curtiss hall Wednesday evening. A very entertaining musical programme, in which the singing of Miss Rippe and the violin solos of Miss Bragg are to be particularly commended, was first enjoyed. This programme, however, was finished early in the evening, and a dance of twelve numbers furnished pleasure for the remainder of the evening. These monthly meetings of representatives of one's native state are delightful occasions, and the New Yorkers find fully as much enjoyment in them as people from any other state.

On Monday night about 200 of the Minneapolis Michiganders gathered at Curtiss hall for an evening of social enjoyment. It was a thoroughly informal affair and for that reason all the more enjoyable. Dancers filled the main portions of the hall, and tables, at which were grouped the players or cards, were in the alcoves. Refreshments were served in daintiest style by the ladies. The evening was one of rare enjoyment.

An informal reception given by Mrs. James Pye, of 924 First avenue north, Friday afternoon, to friends of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Satterlee, was very largely attended during the afternoon and evening. Mr. Satterlee returned from the south on Tuesday, after his first year as professor at Grant memorial at Athens, Tenn., where he met with great success.

The monthly entertainment for business women given by the Woman's Exchange in their hall Wednesday evening was a social occasion probably enjoyed as much by the participants as any party of the week. The ladies always manage to have a good time, guitar and mandolin music this time added variety to the reception.

Miss Bessie Nichols entertained about thirty young couple Wednesday evening, in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Harvie Strong, of Beatrice, Neb., who are on their wedding tour, and arrived in Minneapolis Wednesday. Cards, social chat, music, and, later in the evening, refreshments, were the evening's features.

Miss Lulu Rogers, of Pleasant avenue, gave a farewell party Tuesday evening to thirty or forty of her young friends. Music, dancing and singing were enjoyed till a late hour, and then an excellent supper was served. Miss Rogers leaves Tuesday for New York, where she will study music.

Mrs. Mollie Nestlewaite gave a dinner party in honor of her sister, Mrs. M. H. Hurd, of St. Louis, on Tuesday afternoon. Refreshments at 6 o'clock, and an elaborate dinner at 10:30 were regally spread. Dancing to the music of the Italian harpists was much enjoyed.

The ladies of the Twenty-fourth Avenue M. E. church on last Monday and Tuesday evenings gave a very origional and pleasing entertainment. The six days of the week were represented at different parts of the room in most unique style.

Mr. and Mrs C. E. Plant entertained their friends at tea Wednesday, in honor of Mrs. Halstead Murry, Mrs. Plant's sister, who is visiting here from Cincinnati. Miss Carrie Fulton, of Chicago, gave several charming vocal selections.

A birthday party for Miss Hattie Snyder was a happy occasion among the little people last week. Miss Annie Snyder directed the games and made the party a wonderful success.

An entertainment under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E., of the Westminster church, was given in the lecture room Wednesday evening, for the benefit of the Albert Lea college.

The Stevens Library association had a basket social at Labor Temple last Thursday evening, and a pleasant and profitable evening they made of it.

Plymouth Lodge No. 82, O. A. U. W., gave their annual dramatic and musical entertainment Tuesday evening.

EVENTS FORESHADOWED.

The second annual reunion and banquet of the Methodist state association at the Holmes hotel, to be given May 10, will be a social occasion of much note. A number of prominent speakers will add to the social programme of the evening. Methodists are expected from all parts of the state. The committee making preparations consists of: Hon. F. W. Hoyt, president; J. T. Wyman, chairman; S. Sherin, secretary; James Suydam, treasurer; George H. Hazzard, A. C. Dunn, A. C. Hickman, J. W. Wheeler, Dr. D. W. Edwards, Dr. J. F. Force, A. W. Bradley and M. G. Norton.

The Merry Eight will give their fourth social ball of the season at Windom hall on Monday evening, April 22. Beautiful cards announcing the event are in the hands of the guests. It is expected to be one of the most enjoyable social events of the season. W. D. Hunt, S. E. Humes, L. H. Dement and T. J. Abbott are a committee preparing for the evening. The party will be a very select one.

The La Grande circle are preparing for an Easter ball at Berglund's, Tuesday evening, the 23d of April. It will, undoubtedly, be a most pleasant social party. Music will be furnished by Danz's orchestra. The committee of arrangements will consist of Lester Swaria, W. H. Leeker and Nate Burdick.

The Minneapolis cavalry troop will give their third grand military ball at Armory hall Thursday evening, April 25. The music will be furnished by Thyle & Ringwall's full orchestra. Capt. A. W. Guild, First Lieut. A. M. Diggles and Second Lieut. R. F. Jones form the committee on arrangements.

The St. Paul and Minneapolis Pressmen's Union No. 14 are looking forward with pleasant anticipation to May 4, when they are to have their first annual ball at New Turner hall, St. Paul.

The invitations are out for the twelfth annual ball and May party of Division 180, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, at Odd Fellows' hall Friday evening, May 2.

Next Wednesday evening the Ladies' Aid society, of the Calvacy Baptist church, will give an Easter supper and musical entertainment in the church parlors.

The ladies of the Bryant W. R. C. are preparing to give a social at the residence of P. M. Mathews, 2714 Nicollet avenue, Tuesday evening.

The twelfth annual ball of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is to be held on May 2 at Odd Fellows hall.

The Sons of Temperance will hold an open meeting at their hall, 125 Nicollet avenue, Wednesday evening next.

The Swedish Emanuel academy will close April 27 with an entertainment.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Hon. Loren Fletcher and wife, who have spent the last four months in Europe, returned home last Tuesday. They left Minneapolis in company with Hon. and Mrs. C. M. Loring last December, whom they parted with at Paris, Mr. Loring and wife going to Spain, thence to Algiers, Greece and other lower countries. YOURS FOR HEALTH.

Health Officer Kilvington Makes His Annual Report to the Council.

A Document That Is Liable to Set People to Thinking.

Village Methods Followed Under Metropolitan Conditions Heretofore.

Something Has Been Accomplished, but More May Be Done.

Health Officer S. S. Kilvington has completed his annual report to the city council, and the same will be presented at the next meeting. The document is a long one and is full of good points as a nut is of meat. In his introductory, Dr. Kilvington speaks of the natural advantages of the city, and then goes on to say: Her people have come to a point where they cannot ignore the facts that the chemistry of nature is no longer sufficient for the task of waste disposal; that the earth and air are suffering pollution from the accumulated waste products of human and animal life and from the remains of human and animal dead. The rapid growth of population, the multiplication of factories, mills and slaughter houses, and of apartment and tenement buildings, the progressively increasing number of privy vaults, garbage pits and cesspools, the inclusion of cemeteries within the city limits, each and all are the influences which have contributed to this result. Village methods have been perpetuated under metropolitan conditions. Sanitary improvements have not kept pace with material progress, and the health record of the city suffers in consequence. Therefore I ask to carefully consider this transitinoal epoch in our sanitary history and to study fully the needs of the hour. While we may sympathise most heartily with the popular idea of retrenchment at this stage of our municipal affairs, we must realize that the health interests of a large city cannot be sustained upon the financial basis which was ample for their needs a dozen years ago. The truest economy suggests some degree of active expenditure toward the preservation of those natural health conditions which have done so much to give the city the prestige of the past. All of the reforms needed press with present urgency upon us. The last five months, I am happy to say, have seen the solution of some of the problems they present, but the greater part still remain to be solved.

CONSIDERABLE PROGRESS,

Considering Drawbacks and Opposition During the Past Year.

The report continues: The annual report which was issued from this office twelve months ago, closed the first year's existence of the new board of health, constituted under the state law. For a lack of trained and efficient force of inspectors, the work of nuisance and house inspection had been confined merely to the investigation of actual complaints. The reorganization of the department has been gradually effected, and was still necessarily incomplete at the opening of the present year. Under the head of the "personnel of the department," the names of the gentlemen who have been and are now connected with the department are given and their services commented on at some length in detail. Speaking of statistics the report says that as a bureau of statistics the department has taken some progressive steps. Recognizing the inadequacy of the mortuary tables commonly in use, its medical members have made a revised classification of the causes of death, which is based on the modern principles of pathology and preventive medicine. The necessity for a careful regulation of these records is constantly demonstrated by the receipt of certificates of death which cite insufficient and ill-defined, not to say impossible causes. A glance at these documents would often be of curious interest, not only to the medical profession, but to the general public. The terms "premature birth," "still-born," "peritonitis," and "septicæmia" sometimes cover the loss of a child or mother as a consequence of induced abortion. In fact the percentage of dead infants is an unpleasantly large factor in the death rate of Minneapolis, A quiet, but persistent inquiry into these doubtful cases is gradually leading to a more careful statement of death causes, and the results of the revision will be manifest in the increased scientific value of the statistics of the year. The manner of keeping other important records has been further improved. All nuisance complaints are registered, together with the action upon them by the officers of the force. Blanks have been provided for use in the inspection of houses, which are returned fully itemized, and are placed on file for reference in correspondence with a series of maps which give the location and relations of every building in the city. It is the intention of the department to carry forward the work of perfecting its statistical bureau until a sanitary history of every house and building in the city can be found in its office, to which public or private reference can be made.

In speaking of the sanitary inspection, the report states that during the year 644 written notices were issued in regard to complaints received, and that of this number 379 were issued during the first nine months, and the remaining 265 during the last quarter of the year. These notices were sufficient in all but seven cases, and in these warrants were sworn out, and the offenders tried in the municipal court. In connection with the sanitary inspection the report prints a copy of the report used in the house inspection. During the past three months 613 house inspections have been made and the reports filed. Especial attention has been paid to the slaughter house and rendering works of the city, with the result of abating to a measurble degree the sanitary evils which are almost inevitably attendant upon these enterprises.

DISPOSING OF REFUSE.

A System of Licensed Scavangers Strongly Recommended.

Another very interesting point in the report is the collection and disposal of refuse. The report states that to find and to order the removal of nuisance is an easy task as compared with the duty of disposition of the waste material which constitutes that nuisance. The absence of a regulated scavanger system adds complexity to the problem. Again and again the present board of health has sought to simplify the question, so far as the collection of refuse is concerned, by recommending to the council the adoption of a licensed scavanger system. Up to the present time these suggestions have not borne fruit In consequence the scavangers conduct very much as they please, at their own prices, at their own homes, according to their own methods, and to such points for its disposal as their own convenience or pleasure may dictate. Under such circumstances, it is imposssible to secure that sorting of waste materials which would go far to solve the problem of their possible utility, or their necessary destruction. The department has submitted your honorable body a plan for the regulation of scavenger service of the city, which, if adopted, would remedy the evil. It ventures to hope that this, or some similar method of licensing those engaged in this useful but ill-regulated occupation will receive your favorable consideration.

ALL SORTS.

The absence of cars will furnish an excuse for not attending church to-day, and the claim will doubtless be worked for all there is in it.

By a decision in the district court, Patrolman Paul Mousso comes into possession of land worth $25,000. According to some Bridge square statements, he can buy the whole police force for that—if he wants it.

City Clerk Haney has had the desperate courage to question the reliability of the Pioneer Press because it quoted him as saying that Tom Lowry was trying to play even for the $10,000 plum he threw into the Republican campaign fund. In fact, he says the man who wrote it is an infernal liar.

The strike will probably be declared off today. Jake Barge says he is going to build the cable lines and Tom Lowry is not. In that case Mr. Lowry won't need to save all that money.

The first ball game of the season was played on the South Minneapolis grounds yesterday, and no startling depreciation in the price of real estate in that section had been reported up to 11:20 last night.

Bill Merriam signed the police commission bill, and Minneapolis shouted "The king is dead, long live the king."

THE ALDERMANIC ALBUM.

It may seem wrong, but the most distinguished-looking member of the council is named Smith. His first name, in place of being John, is Vernon, which is much more patrician than one would expect. He is a tall gentleman of rotund proportions, and wears heavy chin whiskers and a soft Stetson hat. His clothes fit him and are built of aristocratic blue-black material that accords well with his general air of elegance. He is evidently a man of dollars, and quite as surely of sense.

Ald. Smith has just returned from the flame-swept regions of Dakota, and thinks that if the Hennepin delegation could have been with him and seen what he saw they would not have refused to place the city in a position to aid the sufferers who have lost all they had.

TWICE TOLD TALES.

Yesterday afternoon as Chief Brackett was sitting in his private office at the city hall wondering "What next?" an attenuated individual, with long hair, came into the outside office walking with a sleuth-like tread, his face blanched with fear and his voice trembling with suppressed emotions. He turned and looked up and down the corridor to see if he was being shadowed and then leaning over the rail and asked for the chief of police, and Clerk George showed him into the chief's office and departed. When he had gone the mysterious visitor strode stealthily across the floor, closed the door, and, returning, laid his trembling hand on Supt. Brackett's shoulder and gasped, "Dynamite."

"What?"

"Dynamite."

"No?"

"Yes."

Mr. Brackett then bade the stranger to be seated, and after trying the door into the telephone office he returned, drew a chair close to that of his listener, and in a low, passionate whisper with occasional glances over his shoulder he detailed a wild, untamed anarchist plot in two acts, stating that some of the striking street car men had tons of fearful explosives store I in an out of the way place, and were pledged to use it in either defensive or aggressive warfare against the police if the latter should interfere with their plans in any way. "A second Haymarket," said he, "would be the result if the police come into any controversy with these desperate men. But I—I have traced the plot to its origin, and if a massacre is attempted I can lay my hands on the perpetrators of the awful crime."

He wanted 1,500 or 2,000 detectives sent out with him immediately to discover the bombs and arrest the plotters, but Mr. Brackett was too busy just then and contented himself with taking the gentleman's name and address and promising to have the matter investigated.

And then "Old Sleuth" departed, reading the very mind of every one he met as if he expected to be assassinated before reaching Washington avenue for having revealed the plot.

* * *

There was quite an important real estate sale the other day, and the reporter on a great morning paper who keeps tab on transfers of realty heard of it. For some reason, however, the parties interested in the deal refused to reveal their identity, probably because of the peculiar location of the property. The purchaser happened to be one of the proprietors of the great daily paper aforesaid, and after he had put his signature to a contract, the consideration named in which was the very neat sum of $95,000, he carelessly asked the reporter "Why didn't you get the particulars of that real estate sale?" The man of many deeds thought it would not do to admit for a moment that there was anything on earth he didn't know, so he answered impressively: "I have learned the full particulars, but unfortunately I promised not to divulge them." "Did you learn who the parties to the deal were?" "Yes, sir." "Who were they?" asked the proprietor of the great daily, much amused. "You must excuse me, but I promised I would not tell where I obtained my information," unblushingly replied the reporter, unconscious that he was talking to one of the purchasers. He yet remains a great man in his own estimation, but just where he stands with the proprietor is uncertain.

Married a Minneapolitan.

Special to the Globe.

RED WING, April 13.—The marriage of Miss Jennie Carlson, of this city, to Otto Newstrom, of Minneapolis, took place this evening at the residence of the bride, on Fourth street. Rev. Newstrom, of Minneapolis, brother of the groom, officiating. An informal reception followed the marriage.

SOME BIG LITTLE MEN,

Who Make Up in Deeds Their Lack in Stature.

BRAINS VS. AVOIRDUPOIS.

Intellectual Giants and Physical Midgets Well Known in Minneapolis Circles.

It is a shame the way some men are imposed upon, especially small men. Emanuel Cohen is a small man, but a big lawyer, in his line, and Frank Shaw and Stanley Kitchel are tall men and his partners. Mr. Cohen has been bald for a long time, though quite a young man yet, glaringly bald on the top of his head, and, being an unassuming man, he does not try to conceal it. The members of the bar look back to the time when those two tall partners, in the early days of their partnership, when luxuries were not as plentiful as now, used to look down on the top of their partner's head, as they left the office, to see whether their hair was parted or not, with the words ringing in their ears, "necessity is the mother of invention." They have a looking-glass now.

People often wonder who the very small, neatly dressed man with the black mustache and dark complexion, with a tall silk hat to help out his dimensions, is—a man who drives a neat little team of ponies, that he can uncheck without a stepladder, with a buggy to match. That's Charles M. Green, and he has his office on the second floor of lumber exchange so he would not be pressed down any shorter by the compression of air in going higher on the elevator, and he is one of the busiest men in the building. He sees a way through everything—probably it is easier for him to see a way through a place for himself than it is for Grover Cleveland or Mayor Babb considering that the way doesn't need to be so large.

There is a gentleman whom every one who frequents Nicollet avenue knows, but there are few men who know his name, and of all the little men in Minneapolis, he is, probably, the smallest. His name is Joseph P. Wallace, and he is business from the soles of his number one shoes through the entire three feet and a little over of his height, and people who know him say he is worth his weight in gold, and that is saying a good deal despite the fact that his weight can't be much over fifty pounds. Now there is a story circulated of how Mr. Wallace one evening was missing from his place on the high stool at the desk in Dyer's music store and this is a rare thing for he is almost always there and at business, and was only found on lifting a big bass horn from the counter, where it had been placed by a German customer, after trying it with the bell mouth toward the little gentleman's stool. But Mr. Wallace denies this, firmly asserting that it merely blew him out of the window, and that it took him some time to come in from Thirteenth street.

F. W. Booth is another big lawyer and small man that locates in lumber exchange. He also prefers the second floor. He is not seen at the court house so much as formerly, as he finds it difficult to break in all the new judges to observing him. He hates to climb on the table, and so finds a large practice outside of the courts. He thinks that if he could get some large-size university graduate who wanted to practice law for a partner, he might go to the courts again, for he has a man's size of voice, as well as a man's size of head.

Maj. William Bickley is not much bigger than a fourteen-year-old boy, but can grind a lead pencil in spicy reading matter with the best of 'em.

C. N. Dickey, of the district court, will never be drafted into the army, but what there is of him goes a long way, and he knows the routine of the clerk's office like a book.

E. S. Corser, the real estate man, is one of the big little men of the town, and sees a good speculation a long distance off.

Tommy Leftwitch, the municipal court practitioner, is so fat that he really looks broader than he is tall. He puts on enough dignity, however, for a full grown man.

Lac Stafford, of the Manhattan combine, has never been known to speculate on change for fear he might get caught short on the market.

The Saengerfest Zeitung.

The initial number of the Saengerfest Zeitung, a publication which will be issued regularly each week until the close of the great musical festival in June, was issued yesterday. It is a handsome sixteen-page publication, with an engraved title page, containing much interesting reading matter. The leading feature of this number is a history of the Harmonia society. It also contains a number of articles relating to the coming festival, all printed in German. Hereafter, however, the reading matter will be printed in both English and German. The names of the different societies are given, together with a full list of the committees in charge. Following are the societies, number of members and locations as given.

Liederkranz, 48; Allemannid Maennerchor, 28; Freie Gemeindi, 24; Liedertofel, 40; Deutscer Maenneroerein, 20; Harmonie; 24; Bardeh Maennerchor, 40; Eichenkranz, 40, all on Milwaukee; Liederkranz, 24; Frohsinn, 16, of La Crosse, Wis.; Concordia, 24, of Watertown, Wis.; Concordia, 12; Janesville, Wis.; Concordia, Sheboygan, Wis.; Orpheus, 40; Teutonic Maennerchor, 20; Sennefelder, Tilderkranz, 40, Chicago, Ill.; Lake View Maennerchof, 40, Lake View; Germania, 16, Freeport; Germania, 16, Rockford; Drinden Maennerchor, 12, Rock Island; Concordia, 16, Berlin; Maennerchor, 12, Davenport, Ia.; Maennerchor, 12, Winona, Minn.; Saengerbund, 28, Dubuque, Ia.; Gesangssection Germania Turnverein, 20, St. Paul.

This gives a total of 668 voices, and, in addition, it is expected that the Germania, Fidetia and Junger maennerchor, of Chicago, the Musikeerin, of Milwaukee, and all the Minnesota societies will assist. The publication also contains a sketch advertising Minneapolis as the Queen city of the Northwest.

Changed Their Names.

A number of people yesterday went into the court house bearing one name and came out with another, and it was not through marriage or marriage licenses, either, but through their antidote—divorce.

Minnie C. Rainey petitioned Judge Young that her name be changed to Winthrop. She was divorced from her husband, Thomas G. Rainey, last May because of his drunken habits. Judge Young decided that she need not carry his name any longer.

The divorced wife and the children of one Maschke, by name, were decreed to change their name to Most by Judge Rea.

WILL BLOOM IN THE SPRING

Olson's Millinery Opening Proclaims the Fact That Flowers Are the Thing for Trimmings This Season.

As an eloquent writer in an evening paper put it the other day: "The present is pre-eminently the season of flower trimming. The feathered songster, whose cheery note was once silenced by the demand of some fair one for his gorgeous plumage, is spared to chirrup his medley of tones. Ostrich plumes and fancy tips, too, have taken a second place in the estimation of the leaders of fashion."

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the past week were three very important days at the establishment of S. E. Olson & Co. They were set apart for a grand Millinery opening, and the success which attended the efforts of the managers makes it a pleasing memory, both to them and to an appreciative public. It would be impossible here to give even a faint idea of what was shown—such a vast array of beautiful goods simply defies description. A fashionable world would not fail to be delighted at an inspection of the stock. There is so much to see and the variety is so great, that there seems to be nothing left for the mind to suggest.

To quote once more from the able writer spoken of:

"Violets and modest field daisies, the commonest of flowers in nature's vast conservatory, were selected by the milliners to open the season. They have been all the rage, and but for the cheapness with which they have been dispensed, their popularity would still be increasing. But the woman's vanity will never allow her to wear what everybody else wears, and the milliners report that the manufacture of violets has ceased. After the present supply is exhausted the violet will have its day. But 'sweet violets' and daisies could only have been supplanted by the queen of the flower kingdom, the rose. Roses never grow out of fashion, and their beauty is a joy forever."
