Minneapolis is to have her list of "400" of the creme de la creme of fash ionable society. A committee of five ladies and five gentlemen has undertaken the arduous task of compiling the hist, but the names of the committee are kept quiet for prudential reasons. Up to last Saturday evening it is said that 128 had safely passed the trying scrutiny of this recherche committee and had their names enrolled on the pink-colored and perfumed paper upon which the list is being made out.

Judge Emery-The state law requires that all beensed saloons must close and be kept closed between the hours of 11 p. m. and 5 a. m., and a penalty of from $10 to $30, with the cost of prosecution, is provided for a violation of the law. MINNEAPOLIS. THE JURY STILL OUT.

The Collom Case Is as Much of an Enigma as Ever.

The Twelve Men "Good and True" Sleep on It Once

The Location of the Bloomington Bridge Said to Be Legal.

"Sayer's Place" and What It Was Like--A Pen Picture.

At 10:15 yesterday morning Judge Hooker opened court, and the jury in the Collom case, which had been out since 6:05 Saturday evening, filed in, took their seats, and the roll was called by the clerk, who said: "Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?" Foreman Arnold rose up and said:

"We have not." Judge Hooker asked: "De you need any instructions or explanations from

Mr. Arnold replied: "No, your honor, I believe there is no misunderstanding regarding the instructions or the evidence."

"Gentlemen of the jury," said Judge Hooker, "I have no doubt that you are nearly worn out by the long continuance of this trial and the close attention ance of this trial and the close attention which you have paid to it. If I could discharge you now consistently with the duty which I owe to the state I would gladly do so, and thus relieve you; but, under the circumstances, I think that it will be best for you to give some farther consideration to the case, and I therefore direct that you return to the jury room for that purpose."

The twelve "good men and true" who had solemnly filed into court solemnly filed out again and returned to the place from whence they came, and there they remained all day.

have from whence they came, and there they remained all day.

Many rumors are in circulation as to how the jury stands. One is that a 5allot showed ten for conviction and two for acquittal. Another is that it stands eleven for acquittal and one for conviction. The Globe is in a position to say that neither of these rumors is true so tion. The GLOBE is in a position to say that neither of these rumors is true so far as anybody outside of the jury knows. The jury has conducted its deliberations with secrecy and the dignity which the importance of the case de mands.

There is very little probability that the jury will agree upon a verdict. All of the indications point to that conclusion sion.

The court will open at 10 o'clock this morning, unless it should sooner find a verdict, and if it is still unable to agree it will probably be discharged from any further consideration of the case. It will then have spent sixty-four hours in deliberation, and if it is still unable to agree there will be little hope left that it will ever be able to do so. In that event the case will go little hope left that it will ever be able to do so. In that event the case will go over to the December term. Whether it will be retried on the same indictment or upon one of the other ones is, of course, not yet determined. It is hinted, however, that the next trial, should one come off, will be on a charge of uttering a forged note.

The state claims to have in its possession some new and important evidence on the question of forgery, but what it is has not been disclosed.

THE LOCATION LEGAL.

So Says George P. Wilson About

the Bloomington Ferry Bridge. George P. Wilson made his report yesterday morning to the board of trade on the legality of the action of the board of county commissioners in the Bloomington ferry bridge matter.

He stated that the act of the legislature last winter empowered the commissioners to issue bonds for $85,000 for two bridges one of which was to con-uect Hennepin and Dakota counties, and the other to connect Hennepin and Scott counties. The first of these two bridges was located at the Cedar avenue location, and the second at Bloomington ferry.

In regard to the location of the Bloomington ferry bridge, the one over which the board of trade have been worrying for the past weeks, he stated that it was left with the discretion of the commis-sioners to locate it at Lyndale avenue sioners to locate it at Lyndale avenue or Bloomington ferry, or at any intermediate point. The act conflicted in its parts in the fact that the bridge was to connect Scott and Hennepin counties and that it might be located at Lyndale avenue, which would not make it exactly join the two counties, and for this reason if the bridge had been located at Lyndale avenue it would have not been in accordance with the word of the act. But it had not been, and was located at Bloomington ferry, and as this was left wholly to the discretion of the commissioners of Hennepin county, it was legal, whether it meet with the favor of their constituents or not. But relative their constituents or not. But relative to the giving of contracts, it was the opinion of the attorney that the com-missioners had exceeded their authority. The purpose of the act was that neither of the two bridges was to be built unless both were. The bonds were to be issued for both after both contracts were made. The commissioners had gone ahead with the Bloomington ferry bridge, and the contracts for the Cedar avenue bridge were not yet signed. avenue bridge were not yet signed. Mr. Wilson stated, as it was now thought that this Cedar avenue bridge would be for the benefit of a rival city, St. Paul, it was probably a fortunate thing for Minneapolis that the bridge had not been built, and that it might not be built now.

The report of Mrs. Wilson was adopted and the board took up the consideration of the Soo canal. The following resolution, which was sept to the board by H. W. Seymour, and which was pre-sented to congress by him, with the various indorsements it might receive.

was read;
"That the commerce of Lake Superior, amounting now to upwards of $100,000,000 per year, is of vital Interest to the Northwest, and its safety should not be imperiled by possible accidents to the old canal at Sault Ste. Marie, and our representatives in congress are our representatives in congress are therefore requested to unite in an effort for an immediate appropriation by con-gress for the purpose of expediting the work upon the new lock and canal at work upon the new lock and canal at that place in order that the thread which binds the producers of the Northwest to the consumers of the East by a cheap waterway may not snap and leave our commerce stranded, if not wrecked."

H. G. O. Morrison stated that he believed H. W. Seymour all right and moved the adoption of the resolution.

Capt. Reno seconded the motion.

Judge Atwater saw a "nigger in the wood, pile" and said he would vote for no st ch resolution until it was investigated, and moved as a substitute that the resolution be referred to the committee on water power and navigation.

in the locality of the canal, explained how the work on new locks had been pushed so far that the dams which held back Lake Superior were leaking, and that it was imperative that the new works be completed at once, so as to prevent the great head of water from bursting its bonds and sweeping away all the work that had been done as yet and not only a vast amount of property but commerce as well. But Judge Atwater would not be comforted, and his substitute was carried.

An invitation from Corpus Christi, Tex., requesting the presence of the members of the board Dec. 5 at a "deep waterway convention," was read, and on the motion of Judge Fish was referred to the waterway committee.

"SAWYER'S PLACE."

The Third Street Resort Closed by the Police. The revocation of George W. Saw yer's liquor license at 48 South Third street, by Judge Emery on Saturday, has created in the minds of many a curiosity to know something about the place. Sawyer's saloon was a little two-story brick building on the east side of Third street, a short distance side of Third street, a short distance above First avenue south. A lamp post outside bore the sign, "Ladies' Oyster Parlors Up Stairs." The first floor was fitted up as a bar room of more than usual pretensions. On the second floor were a number of private rooms, each containing three or four chairs. The floor was covered with a handsome Brussels carpet, and there was a neatness and quietude about the place which was attractive to the pople who went there. The entire establishment was quasi-respectable. That is, the tough, or rowdy element, was carefully excluded, and its patrons were all well-dressed, and were required, while in the place at least, to behave themselves like ladies and gentlemen. Sawyer's upper rooms were patronized by the early described of the letter element. Sawyer's upper rooms were patronized by the demi-monde of the better class, men about town, and men and women who are not bound by the strict rules of propriety as laid down by the usages of good society. Frankie Smith, the woman who alleges she was drugged in the place, is a fair sample of the women who fre-quented Sawyer's ine rooms Young, well dressed, and of pleasing address, dash and vim in Jeankie Smith cast iron rules, she was accord-she was, accord ing to her own statement on the stand, a frequent visitor. Another class of visitors were married men out tor a lark, who were attracted by the girls, who could always be induced to enter one of the private rooms to get a drink. Not that any indecent act might be com-mitted there, for Sawyer would not al-low it. To the men about town it was a convenient place to take female company for a glass of beer or a bottle of wine. That the police have been perfectly familiar with the wine rooms and the people who frequented them for several years is beyond the question of a doubt. A short time ago a married woman complained to the police that woman complained to the police that her husband had been sent for by a noted St. Paul courtesan and that the trysting place was the wine rooms kept by Sawyer. The wife had followed her husband there without being discovered and hastened to inform the officials. A captain of police went to the place and told Sawyer about it, and he promised to keep the woman away. promised to keep the woman away. Sawyer's was no worse than half a dozen other places of its kind in Minneapolis. If anything, it was better kept and catered to a better class of people than do the notorious Washington avenue resorts. When Washington avenue resorts. When compared with those places, Sawyer's wine rooms at 48 Third avenue south were eminently respectable. But the police have suffered all the alleged dives to run in full blast, while the outraged law required that Sawyer must be punished.

A HIGH HONOR. The First Criminal Sentenced to the St. Cloud Reformatory. Leopold Smith, a youthful Minne apolis burglar, enjoys the honor of being the first prisoner sentenced in Henne-pin county to the St. Cloud reformatory. He was indicted for breaking into the office of the Northern Mill company in omee of the Northern Min company in Minneapolis, and on being arraigned before Judge Hooker yesterday morn-ing he pleaded guilty, whereupon he was sentenced to the St. Cloud reformatory for an indefinite period as the law refor an indefinite period as the law requires in all cases where prisoners are sent to that institution. They cannot be compelled to serve longer than the maximum time fixed by law for the crimes of which they are convicted, and the length of the time which they do serve is determinable by the board of trustees, depending on their conduct and the probability of reformation.

A provision of the law deprives sheriffs of the power to take the prisoners to St. Cloud, as it is made the duty of the court to notify the warden of the reformatory of all sentences so passed, and officers of the institution are sent to gather the prisoners in.

JUDGE WELCH "RILED."

He Thought the Erwin Case Was Being Trifled With.

When the case of criminal libel against W. W. Erwin, of St. Paul, was called in Judge Hooker's court yesterday morning, a little colloquy arose between Judge Hooker, County Attorney Jamison, and Judge Welch, the complaining witness. When the case was called Mr. Jamison said: "Mr. Erwin is at Redwood Falls trying a murder case, and I suppose it will have to be continued to the next term."

"Yes," said Judge Hooker, "I see that they commenced taking evidence only on Friday, and I suppose the case will consume all of this week. Judge Lochren informs me that he will dismiss the jury this week."

Judge Welch was a silent but interested listener to this conversation, and it seemed to "rile" him. At any rate he jumped to his feet and remarked in an emphatic manner, "Your honor, this case has been trifled with long enough. I think it is time to dispose of it."

Looking at the venerable but irrepressible Welch in a sort of surprised way, Judge Hooker said: "I do not know what you mean, sir, by saying that this case has been trifled with!" "I mean," said Welch, "that the defendant's bail was forieited and nothing done about it. He is now under indictment and out without bail." "Oh, no," replied Mr. Jamison. "His bail bond was renewed, and I am ready to try it as soon as it can be reached. The length of the Collom case compelled the state to put over a number of criminal can be reached."

Mr. Welch thereupon explained that he had been misinformed, and that he meant no reflection upon the court.

The case was put over until the next term.

Dr. Kilvington Discovers Genuine Case of Small-Pox.

The Health Department Remoyes Four Men to the Pest House.

The Sick Men Said to Have Visited a Number of Homes.

Heroic Measures Taken to Prevent the Spread of the Disease.

Dr. S. S. Kilvington, the commission er of health, was yesterday treated to a disagreeable surprise. He had just been congratulating himself on the freedom of the city from disease, when a man walked into the office of the health department in the city hall and inquired for the commissioner. Fortunately the doctor was alone in the office. One glance was suffi-cient to show him that the man was sick, and the evidence man was sick, and the evidence of the dreaded malady small-pox was plainly visible. Dr. Kilvington immedeately locked up his office and questioned the man. He said that his name was George Bliss, and that his home was in Chicago. Three weeks ago, in company with L. Collinger, Joel Miller, James Dillon and Samuel Neuman. be came to Minneapolis. They secured a room in one of the blocks near Washington avenue, and commenced to canvass room in one of the blocks near Washington avenue, and commenced to canvass the city. Their business is enlarging portraits, and they commenced a house to house canvass for work. They visited quite a number of residences and secured considerable work. Last week Bliss says he commenced to feel sick. He was troubled with pains in his head and back, but paid but little attention to it, as he thought they would soon wear off. On Friday, however, the pain increased and he discovered that a rash had broken out all over his body. He went to bed and remained in his room until Sunday, when he felt somewhat better, and in company with his room until Sunday, when he felt somewhat better, and in company with his companions he walked around the streets, visiting two popular restaurants at meal times. Yesterday morning the rash had not disappeared and he commenced to feel alarmed. His companions advised him to consult a physician, and to get some medicine to cool his blood. He went to the office of a well known physician, who at once pronounced it a well-defined case of small-pox and sent him to the health office. Dr. Kilvington quarantined the man in his office and immediately sent an inspector to nail up the room which had been occupied by Bliss. The ambulance was called and Bliss was at once removed to the pesthouse. A search was immediately commenced for Collinger, Mueller, Dillon and Neuman. They were found at 9 o'clock las night and sent to the small-pox hospital in charge of the santary inspectors. In the rooms occupied by the pital in charge of the santary inspectors. In the rooms occupied by the

The entire medical staff of the department was summoned to Dr. Kilvington's office last night for consultation. It was at once resolved that heroic treatment was absolutely necessary to prevent the spread of the loathsome disease. Each physician was assigned to certain houses, with orders to have the inspectors fumigate the premises which had been exposed, and to vaccinate all the inmates at once. The policemen were instructed to see that a strict quarantine of the houses they were sent to

Dr. Kilvington was a very busy man last night. He was found by a Globe reporter superintending the funigation of a house on First avenue south. "You can't come in, old man," was his greeting as he gently pushed the scribe ont into the fresh air. I have sent the five men to the pest house, and the department is doing all it can to prevent the spread of disease. I know it is not pleasant for the people who live in the houses to have us come in and fumigate them, but it is an absolute necessity. Fortunately we have discovered the disease before it has had chance to spread. The only trouble is that there is no telling where these fellows have been, and I will consider it a personal favor if the people who have been called on by the men who were engaged in enlarging portraits will notify the health office at once."

"Is there any danger of an epidemic?" was asked.
"That we cannot tell. We cannot af-"That we cannot tell. We cannot afford to take any chances. We may not have another case, and we may have thousands of cases. We are now going on the theory that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. This would be a very bad season of the year for small-pox to obtain a foothold here, and we are determined, if possible, to stamp out and exterminate any germs of the disease which we may find. These men have been to a great many homes in Minneapolis, and consequently, a great many persons have been exposed to the contagion. If the people who have had these men call at their homes let us know of it, we will take all the precautions known to science to protect them. While the fact that there is danger from the disease cannot be disputed, ger from the disease cannot be disputed, I wish to say that there is positively no necessity for a small-pox scare."
