

SAINT PAUL.

Additional City News on Page 8.

GENERAL PICK-UPS.

Two births and four deaths yesterday. Scarlet fever is reported at 56 East Seventh street.

No. 685 Arkwright street, occupied by J. Connel, was slightly damaged by fire yesterday.

J. Ross was locked in the county jail last night to answer to a charge of selling liquor to Indians.

Rev. J. S. David, of Minneapolis, last evening addressed the Nationalist club on "Co-operative Industry."

Miss Baldrige and pupils gave a piano recital last evening at Whitney's music store, on East Third street.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to William Mosley and Sophie Hornum, Joseph Bernatsky and Annie Sattler.

James W. Warner was admitted yesterday to practice law in the territory of Dakota, on a certificate from the territory of Dakota.

Henry Villard, T. F. Oakes and others visited the Union stockyards, South St. Paul, yesterday as guests of A. B. Stickey and James Lindquist.

A musical and literary entertainment is being prepared by the children of St. Margaret's school. The affair will be held at the West Side opera house May 1.

At the Clinton Avenue Methodist church a carnival of seasons is in progress, and a large attendance marks each evening's progress. The carnival closes on Monday.

A slight accident to the motor train yesterday morning at the foot of Jackson street, caused a momentary excitement among the passengers, but no damage resulted.

W. H. Kiefer, general vice president of the carpenters' brotherhood, will address an open meeting of carpenters at the hall, corner of Third and Exchange streets, next evening when the schemer, supposed Mr. Leit-hauser was to retire, in favor of the syndicate candidate.

There will be a Republican meeting in Lucas hall, Second ward, corner of Margaret and Forest streets, Friday evening. J. W. Bank will be the speaker of all the classes.

The State bank of Jackson has sent to the public a certificate of organization, and in return has received $25,000 from the bank to do business. The capital stock is $25,000.

The West side building boom opens this spring. The new St. John's building, on the building on South Washburn street, by Mr. Martin. The plans for the structure were approved yesterday.

A reception will be tendered the clergy of the city by the ladies of St. John's parish, in honor of Rev. and Mrs. H. S. Clapp. The event will occur in the parlors of St. John's church on the evening of May 1.

Again yesterday the board of public works wrestled over the question of widening Broadway street, and listened to the opinions, pro and con, of property owners. The matter will come up again Friday next.

James French, a scavenger, was arrested last night by Special Officer Fisher while in the act of spilling a lot of gas pipes into his cart in the rear of a third street store. He was locked up on a petty larceny charge.

The Y. M. C. A. Evangelistic club will meet in the evening at 7:30 o'clock, and all young men interested in Bible study are invited to meet with it and take up the study of the Sunday school lesson.

Mayor Krepper, of Parkland, Ky., has sent out a circular letter to mayors in other cities asking aid for the cyclone sufferers in his town. Mayor Smith received one yesterday. It is claimed that Parkland suffered far more in proportion than Louisville.

Inquiring teachers have written to the state superintendent of public instruction asking whether Good Friday was a legal holiday, and whether they might collect pay for that day. The superintendent answers that they cannot. It is only a commercial holiday.

There will be a meeting for men only in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, at 500 Central street, and song and prayer service, accompanied by an orchestra. A pleasant and profitable time is expected. A welcome is extended to all comers.

Yesterday morning Judge Burr sentenced Little Annie Rooney and Mrs. Kelly to the workhouse for thirty days each. Last evening the many of Little Annie, at the head of Westminster street, was destroyed by fire. The loss is small.

The first fire engine ever built in St. Paul is now in course of construction at the National Engine company for the new fire station to be opened on Randolph street in May. The board of fire commissioners has decided to name the new engine the Robert A. Smith, after Mayor Smith.

Weather Agent Lyons predicts for to-day fair weather, with slightly cooler temperature. There are no storms indicated, but it is probable at present, though at this season the advent of wind and rain storms of more or less severity are liable to come up with refreshing abruptness and unannounced.

A communication has been received at the Educational association headquarters from W. H. Shibley, superintendent of schools at York, Pa. He announces therein that an excursion has been arranged to leave St. Paul for the Pacific coast on July 1. It is expected that many of our young men will take advantage of the cheap rates to visit the slope.

An after Easter hop was given last evening at the Portland hotel to the members of the Young Irish-American club. 500 cents were secured in the dining hall, which had been decorated for the occasion, and about forty couples were in attendance. A very pleasing dance program was given, and the best of music was discoursed by Kleist's orchestra.

The annual wall from the Sixth ward, in support of the detainer strike, is now within its limits, as has been even this early in the season. As a matter of fact, the condition of South Robert street in dusty weather is, and always has been, a reproach to the city, and the residents there are determined to take the matter up in earnest, and make it an issue in the spring election.

There was a meeting of the board of managers of the state reform school at the Merchants yesterday. The only business done was the confirmation of the contract of Mr. Mather, of Mendota, Wis., to erect a new building of the reform school at Red Wing by May 1, 1891. The other buildings will be completed until the finances of the state will permit.

Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday with the secretary of state by the Title Insurance company of Minneapolis. The company's capital stock is fixed at $500,000. The incorporators are Clinton Morrison, Henry F. Brown, Elwood S. Corser, Louis F. Menager, E. B. Weston, Geo. Heisch, J. E. Vander Hook, Charles P. Lovell, Samuel Hill, Samuel F. Pray, David P. Jones, Joseph R. Kingman, John E. Peterson, Willis A. Janssen, L. A. Condit, Joseph D. Johns, William H. Danwohy, James W. Griffin, John B. Atwater, all of Minneapolis, and A. B. McGill, of St. Anthony Park.

At the meeting held yesterday of the park board there were present Commissioners Hendrickson, Ludden, Wedge, Schiffman, Van Slyke and Estabrook. Superintendent Hendrickson submitted a report showing the progress being made in tree planting in the various parks about the city, which was adopted. In the matter of grading Metcalf street, a report to Lincoln park it was decided to ask the council to defer action in connection with the street at present. In the matter of appointing a special policeman for duty at "Congo park," Commissioner Hendrickson nominated a man named Edward Lendig for the place, and the board decided on recommending his appointment by Mayor Smith to fill the place.

The object of the management of the Heeger concert in placing the price at 50 cents for the Heeger matinee, to be given in the afternoon at the People's church, should certainly be realized by completely filling last night's auditorium. The price of admission being thus placed within the reach of all, it is expected that all lovers of music and students of the piano will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear the phenomenal young artist who so captivated his hearers on Thursday evening. But more than by any other reason, the management was influenced in placing the price at this very low figure in the hope that parents especially would give their children the benefit of hearing the famous pianist, who is to appear at the Church Choir church, last night. The programme this afternoon will in some respects be even better than Thursday evening. The soloists will be Misses Mary Poney Crostman and Charlie Heisterhark will both appear.

MATT WAS ON DECK,

But the Syndicate Candidate Failed to Make His Appearance.

"The Friends of L. E. Reed" Will Hold a Secret Meeting Later.

How Col. Kiefer Would Divide Up All the Public Offices.

Political Notes - Gathered From All Parts of the Capital City.

Ald. Matt Leithauser did not take kindly to the proposition of the syndicate candidate, aided as the latter was by Capt. Joe Burger and his paper, and so the "friends of Matt Leithauser and L. E. Reed" did not meet at Lucker's last evening, as Mr. Reed's friends expected.

The "friends of Matt Leithauser" did meet upwards of 300 strong at Lucker's hall last evening and the syndicate candidate's name was not mentioned. Here is the notice which appeared in Mr. Reed's paper, and which was read by the schemer, supposed Mr. Leit-hauser was to retire, in favor of the syndicate candidate.

There will be a Republican meeting in Lucas hall, Second ward, corner of Margaret and Forest streets, Friday evening. J. W. Bank will be the speaker of all the classes.

What a strange contrast between that notice and the one that was issued yesterday by Mr. Reed's backers, and which appeared in the Reed organ last evening.

The meeting heretofore announced to be held at Lucker's hall, at the corner of Margaret and Mendota streets, this evening, was postponed until Monday evening next, when the independent voters will be addressed by L. E. Reed and others. "There will be no meeting."

The first was issued when Mr. Leit-hauser was expected to retire gracefully in favor of Reed, the second was published when it was learned that Ald. Leithauser had made up his mind to stand "pat" with the "friends of L. E. Reed" and not to support the syndicate candidate when they said there would be no meeting at Lucker's hall last evening. But the meeting was held and it demonstrated that Mr. Leit-hauser will not retire to please either Mr. Reed or the powerful syndicate.

At the meeting last evening when Committee man Peter H. Kirk, of the Republican city committee, called the assembly to order, Darius F. Reese reported on the speakers who had given the address, and as he had served a time as clerk of a court in Houston county, he hoped he would not suffer in comparison with the other candidates for municipal office. He seemingly unintentionally pronounced the word monopoly, and then, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the flag of our country. He said his superiors gave him high praise while in office, and proceeded to explain that he had never spent a day in the office of mayor, and declined to be the workman's candidate two years ago. But he now stood as a candidate, and, in referring to the syndicate as a "big object" or that it was peculiarly applicable to Republicans, he spoke of the Democratic city administration as being "stamped out," and men placed in power who regard "public office as a public trust."

Col. Kiefer next spoke. He thanked the club for baptizing it with the name, "Kiefer and Newson Fifth Ward club." He said he should not have referred to his early days, when he held office as wharfage collector, was a member of the legislature, and went South to fight to protect the