IMPORTANT NOTICE. During the week commencing Aug. 25, the population of St. Paul is to be recounted. For that purpose the enumerators will visit every house and building in the city. Meet the enumerator cordially; help him all you can; be prepared to give him the names of every member of your household, including children, servants and boarders, whether present or absent; answer all his questions promptly. If any neighbor or acquaintance is absent from the city, please send the name and address to J. J. McCardy, Secretary Census Committee, Council Chamber, City Hall. Don't forget this. DO IT AT ONCE. It is of the highest importance that every man, woman and child be counted, who is a legal resident of St. Paul, on Aug. 25, whether at home or absent. To accomplish this YOUR help is needed. Do all you can yourself and stir up your neighbors. Make it your chief business for the next ten days to see that everybody is counted.

For any further information you may have to ask or give, address J. J. McCardy, Secretary Census Committee, City Hall, St. Paul. St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16, 1890.

THE WEEKLY REPORT. United States Signal Office, St. Paul, Aug. 17, 1899.—For the week ended yesterday, Fergus Falls and Fort Ripley reported .73 and .40 inch, respectively, of rainfall. These stations are situated to the northwestward from here, on the watershed of the upper Mississippi river. There was no rain reported from any station on the shed of the Minnesota river. SOUATTING ON QUAY. Having tried to read BLAINE out of the party and failed, Boss REED and ociates are now making an effort to hurl QUAY over the battlements, to leave him to perish on the outside. The Republican party could not get along without BLAINE. He has too firm a hold on the masses to be forcibly ejected from leadership. And while the moral tone of Republicanism would be vastly improved by getting rid of QUAY, still he is so much of a necessity to the party it would be suicide to displace him from the perch of bossism he now occupies. The one thing most needful for Republican supremacy is a good boodle distributor; and, as QUAY is without a rival in that line, his services are absolutely indispensable to his

Mr. Quay has not been actuated by good motives, as all of us know, in thwarting REED's schemes; but he has rendered such important service to the country in that respect, the people of the United States are willing to condone many of his political sins. It takes fortunate for the public interests that QUAY was in position to put the brakes on REED's reckless legislation. It may have been a bit of vanity on the part of QUAY to show that he is really a bigger ss than Tom REED, or he may have had some particular ax to grind in sidetracking the force bill: but, whatever motives, he has done a good thing for the country, and has helped his party out of a mudhole. It is not likely, therefore, that the REED gang will succeed in their scheme to excommunicate QUAY. It looks now as if BLAINE and combination against the REED-MCKIN- tions. USEFUL CONSULS.

Some do not quite understand the full cope of the activities of consuls to unimportant posts in other countries. There may be some incidental little matters to look after in connection with fellow countrymen straggling about, but of late years many of the consuls have done excellent service in gathering information pertaining to the people, productions and methods in vogue in the countries where they are located. These reports are published by the government often, perhaps generally, and many of them afford the most reliable and serviceable information obtainable in regard to interests that are useful to know. A recent report of this kind from the consul at Mayence, in Germany, treats of the use of American pork in Germany. The prohibition against its introduction into that country is only nominally based on sanitary grounds. Ample evidence has been furnished the authorities that the American hog is as free from disease as the European animal. Before the interdiction there was a large and increasing consumption of American pork. There was some protest on the part of local growers and dealers who were able to keep the home product at high prices on account of its insufficient amount; but the chief inducement to Europe. The occasion of the visit is to

But, as this consul relates, the interdiction of the American was but partially effected. Holland does not exclude it, and the meat from Holland suspected to be diseased. #### MOODY IS SCORED.

Tho Louisville Courier-Journal is in discriminative in its treatment of the Black Hills senator, Mr. Moody, in relation to his recent tariff deliveries. The impulsive Kentuckian would do military title, just what is not recalled, derived from the war, when he feels impelled to designate him as a "lunatic" and "the champion idiot of the sen-atorial body." He adds further: "Moody could be acquitted of murder in any court in the country, if his speech were put in evidence as demonstrating that he was non compos

I go so far." he said, "as to declare that I would absolutely exclude the foreign product when it could be successfully supplied by home labor." Senator Moony is undoubtedly for protection. He may carry it somewhat to an extreme for an agricultural state to be easy to stand before intelligent people, but he is in the direct line of the Republican platform. He would have the importation of tin entirely prohibited to give a monopoly to the corporation for which he may be an attorney. The tariff bill is to impose a duty of 4 cents a pound, $90 a ton, on the ore. The people of the country are to be taxed $20,000,000 for the benefit of mines that Mr. Moody says are the "richest in the world," and can develop tin at half the expense of the Cornwall mines. This may be rough on the people, but it is a mal of protection. The paper quoted looks at the matter in this light: "If instead of these tin deposits, with iron and coal alongside, the friends of Moopy had found a ready-made deposit of tin cans filled with fruit and vegetables, tons of corrugated iron roofing, millions of household itensils ready for service, tin buckets for the laborer, and some steel rails ready for new railroads, the consequences would have been so disastrous that the only adequate relief would have been to declare a boycott against the world, to blockade our own ports, to fill our harbors with torpedoes, and double and quadruple the price of all articles they found. Thus we see what a narrow escape we have had from utter financial ruin. As it is, if we discover another deposit of tin, or find a few more ore beds rich in metallic iron, we will be utterly undone. Indeed, as a precaution against any further abundance of the good things of life, we might even now execute half a hundred explorers, and

GET IN PLACE. The Le Saeur News is more honest than most of the Republican journals in the state, in declaring that the Republi-can party is committed to a protective tariff, and that the Pioneer Press and its satellites are playing a game of deception in trying to persuade the voters into a contrary belief. It is the grossest hypocrisy for Gov. MERRIAM and his organs to profess to be favorable to free trade, or even to tariff reform, and yet work in Republican harness. The issue between the Democrats and the Republicans on the a rogue to catch a rogue; hence it is tariff question is too well understood for either Republicans or Democrats to sail under false colors. It is a case where the leopard is known by his spots. Tariff reformers have no more place in the Republican ranks than protectionists have in the Democratic ranks. The man who professes to be a Demoerat and a protectionist in the same breath is a deep-dyed hypocrite. And it is the same case with a Republican who professes to be a free-trader. Oil and water will not mix. There is only one course for honest men to pursue, and that is to array QUAY may yet pool issues and form a themselves according to their convic-

Those who believe that the protective tariff is unjust and unnecessarily burdensome can find no lodging place outside of the Democratic party. That is all there is to this tariff question, and the person who talks otherwise either mistakes the people for fools or is one himself.

THE KAISER'S BLUFF.

There will probably be some history made in Europe to-day, and the old town of Narva in the Russian empire will gain celebrity. It is there the meeting of the autocrats will take place at high noon, when Kaiser WILLIAM and the Muscovite czar will shake hands with an outward show of friendliness, while rancor burns in each heart. It will be enforced Russian hospitality that will be extended to Germany's emperor. He is not a welcome guest, notwithstanding the grandeur of the Russian empire will be on exhibition in honor of his coming.

The Emperor WILLIAM visits Russia on his own invitation. He intended to take the empress along with him, but the czarina turned up her nose at the suggestion, and gave it out in cold Russian words that the German empress would not be entertained by her at the royal palace in St. Petersburg. Consequently WILLIAM left his wife at home, and has gone over by himself to talk business with his brother autocrat.

It was a bold stroke of diplomacy in he young emperor to force himself upon the czar, but it is a bit of audacity Europe. The occasion of the visit is to bring about an understanding between Germany and Russia relative to some matters that the czar has heretofore evaded a discussion of. It is important to German interests that this business should be closed at once: and as the czar could not be induced to visit Germany, the emperor took the bull by the horns by visiting Russia, and will demand a full settlement of all differences quits Russian soil.

The Retort Conrteous.

Buffalo Courier. Mr. Blaine's criticism of the McKinlev bill, to the effect that "there is not a section or a line of the entire bill that will open a market for another bushel of wheat or another barrel of pork," is having a large circulation. It is un-derstood that in order to break the force of the criticism the Reedites and the McKinleyites will call the attention of the farmers to the fact that it was the same James G. Blaine who said: "Trusts are largely private affairs."

How to Improve the Bill.

Washington Post.
The Massachusetts senator discovered the bayonet in the force bill, and recommends in the subotitute measure that it be taken out and sheathed. The bill is not mended much by this elimination, for the principle underlying it and the inspiration that gave the unclean thing birth are still there. These can only be eliminated by the amputa-tion process sometimes applied to a dog's tail—cutting it off just behind the beast's ears. The bill with nothing left but the enactment clause would be comparatively harmless.

Incurably Odious. Itica Observer,
The Buffalo Commercial says: "The federal election bill has been so amended as to deprive the Democrats of every as to deprive the Democrats of every decent pretext for further opposition." Nonsense! Democratic hostility is directed less against the methods of the bill than against its principle and purpose of establishing federal supervision of elections that belong properly to the states. The law would be incurably edious whether enforced with or with odious, whether enforced with or with-out bayonets. No coating of sugar can render this nauseous pill palatable.

The People and the Force Bill. an Francisco Examiner.

If the very people who are to be pro-ected do not want the force bill, who does want it? The only demand for it comes from the reckless politicians who care nothing about the sufferings of the negroes, but who feel the need of some-thing to fire the Northern heart for the sake of keeping themselves in office. But they have made a miscalculation this time. The Northern heart will fire, but the desperadoes who are touching off a can of nitro-glycerine will find nothing of interest in the subsequent proceedings

In these days no one defends Alexiander Hamilton's scheme of government, but we are sure if Hamilton were incarnate once more he would recoil from the scheme of Reed and Lodge. His was centralization, proposed at the foundation, when no institutions had been built on the constitution and no rights had accrued under it. Theirs is the overthrow, the revolution of a system that has endured for more than a century, and has fostered the growth off a great nation, which in its prime these men propose to subject to a change men propose to subject to a change that will afflict it with disorders to which the colonial condition was a tolerable state.

the Republican party is strikingly ex-Chairman Joel P. Heatwole's little scheme of giving the farmers all the nominations for the legislature throughout the state, thinking that by so doing the Farmers' Alliance can be weakened, is received by the people generally. During the past week it has been discussed by the politicians, the farmers and the local papers, and all unite in declaring it an absurd proposition. The politicians of the party are against it because some of them want the legislative nominations for themselves. The farmers denounce it because it looks as though some of them want the legislative nominations for themselves. The farmers denounce it because it looks as though it were a proposition to buy them off with office, and they are not in the field with that end in view. The local papers are against the scheme for the simple reason that they fail to see any reasons why local tickets should be sacrificed or put up to carry through an unpopular nominee for governor. The Glencoe Enterprise states the case very clearly in the following:

The chairman of the Republican state central committee, Joel P. Heatwoie, probably acting by dictation of Merriam, proposes that all kepublicans shall stand aside this year for Merriam's sake, and that only farmers shall have the legislative offices. Republican politicians who have been in training for such positions will scarcely take kindly to Mr. Heatwole's idea, but if they do, it will be well for all good people to put on their coronation robes and prepare for the end of the world. When Republican politicians surrender the machine for Merriam's sweet sake, the indications are very strong that Gabriel is about to blow his horn. Mr. Heatwole evidently entertains a very peculiar idea of the Minnesota farmer. His proposition would seem to prove that his theory of the farmers' movement is that they are only after the empty honor of holding a few poorty pand offices. The truth is that what tifle farmer wants and demands is not office, but the establishment of a new system which shall be radically different than that created and controlled by Merriam and the millionaire monopolits. There is a principle at stake, about which Mr. Heatwole seems to know and care nothing; so, forsooth, he expects to bribe the farmer, and to steal away the bribe again, a little later on. It is safe to millionaire monopolists. There is a principle at stake, about which Mr. Heatwole seems to know and care nothing; so, forsooth, he expects to bribe the farmer, and to steal away the bribe again, a little later on. It is safe to say that Joe! Heatwole's "idea" was actuated by a desire to gratify the overweening self-concil of the man with whose name it is associated. He hopes to make himself talked about, and without observing the flimsy and shallow character of his plan, and being himself surprised that his mind had conceived of anything novel, he hastened to promulgate it. But the "idea" is a monument of political asininity and not of political sagacity, as Heatwole supposed.

Editor Stacy, of the Howard Lake Herald, keeps pounding away at Gov. Merriam, whom he has denominated the millionaire vote broker. From the amount of space devoted to denouncing his course by his Merriam contemporaries, it is evident that the bosses are afraid that the people will prefer to follow the lead of this independent newspaper man rather than that of the machine. The last issue of the Herald contained the following rather caustic deliverance in answer to the criticisms of a contemporary:

of a contemporary: So far as we can recollect, there hasn't been a political nomination made since Stacy took charge of the Herald which has given him any degree of satisfaction. We recommend a change of duet.—Litchfield News-mend a change of diet.—Intended News Ledger.

The one Republican candidate whom the Herald during its present administration has opposed is Merriam, the millionaire votebroker. The News-Ledger possibly finds the political "diet" at the Merriam "barrel" so good that it recommends to its neighbors a similar feed. We are candid in saying that the Merriam "diet" does not agree with our political digestion, nor do we believe it to be made of good, sound Republican No. 1 hard wheat.

Now that the brilliant (?) scheme of making the campaign on "state issues" in Minnesota this year has fallen so flatly, the Republican newspaper organs ought "to get together," and that very quickly. In many counties of the state Republican papers can be found on both sides of the fence on the tariff question. Out in McLeod county, for instance, Editor Tallboys, of the Glencoe Register, is fighting for the McKinley bill and claiming that the tariff taxes are paid by the foreign manufacturers and not by the American consumers. A dozen miles northwest of Glencoe, in the beautiful little city of Hutchinson, there is published a staunch Republican paper—the Leader—which declares that Blaine is "all right," and that the McKinley bill ought to be laid on the shelf. Both are supporting Gov. Merriam, and the Glencoe Register is trying to climb upon the Hall band wagon. So it is in every portion of the state. The evasive platform adopted by the late Republican convention has placed the party organs in a bad place. They would like to be in a position to support their party's congressional candidates, but if they do so they will be going back on Blaine, and this is just what a great many are afraid to do.

But they have got to "get together," Now that the brilliant (?) scheme of afraid to do.

But they have got to "get together," and how will they do it, is the question.

Now that the "state issues" campaign is to be given up, but one style of cam-paign can be made, and it is one of mud-slinging and abuse. On this common ground Chairman Heatwole will gather the party organs. The tariff and silver questions will be ignored entirely. Of course this sort of a campaign is a little out of date, but so is the party whose five members of congress from this state voted to raise tariff duties formulated to wool Republican journal though it is, sees clearly through the schemes of Donnelly and Fish, and makes the following remarks about these gentlemen and their peculiar manner of "support-ing the Alliance ticket:"

ing the Alliance ticket:"

Donnelly and Fish are after Secretary Lathrop, of the State Alliance, and the next issue of the Great West promises to be a scorcher. If Donnelly had been elected president of the Alliance, and Fish secretary, and Donnelly had been nominated for governor, and Fish had carried out his campaign boodle-fund scheme, all of which these twain endeavored to accomplish, but were thwarted by the bona-fide farmers, the Great West would now be singing low-scented ditties, Donnelly would have been cracking jokes instead of frowning frowns, and every Alliance man would have been classed among the angels. As it is, it is otherwise.

The Preston Times, edited by an official of the Minnesota state's prison, follows the lead of the Munkato Register and "roasts" the sage very severely. It asks: "Why doesn't the Farmers' Alliance take a tumble and everlastingly bounce or ignore the old sorehead and chronic dissension propagator, Ignatius Donnelly? The Alliance has no use for men whose sole ambition and delight, when things don't seem to be coming just exactly their way, is to bust everything to smithereens, or at least to attempt to. Donnelly's oral expositions, gibberish is the proper caper, at the recent meeting of the Alliance executive committee in St. Paul, wherein Secretary John Lathrop was his anterior mark, to create distrust and dissension in the ranks of the Alliance his ulterior aim, was impudence pure and simple, and leaves it very relain upon the face of The Preston Times, edited by an offi aim, was impudence pure and simple, and leaves it very plain upon the face of it that the old sage of Nininger is running away very fast with the idea that what he doesn't know isn't worth knowing, and that what he discountenances and disapproves must go to irremediable smash."

The Glenwood Herald, although very friendly to the Alliance movement, has no time for Fish and Donnelly. Last week, after quoting an article from the Willmar Argus to the effect that Donnelly. Willmar Argus to the effect that Donnelly would probably get enough signatures to secure him a place on the state ticket as a candidate for governor, the Herald comments on Fish and Donnelly after the following fashion: "These two rogues are loud in their cries for purity in politics, but about the best way for these cusses to purify politics is to get down and out. They are both rascals—separately and collectively rascals—separately and collectively— and hardly worthy the name men-but custom makes it necessary for be ings who wear pants and coats to be called by that name. Their motto is rule or ruin—particularly the latter."

Col. C. H. Graves, the speaker of the Col. C. H. Graves, the speaker of the last house of representatives, is out of politics temporarily, at least, and will not be a candidate for the state senate this year. The colonel wanted to be a candidate for lieutenant governor, it is said, and failing to receive the nomination for that office he prefers to remain under cover during the coming campaigh. His letter declining to be a candidate for the legislature is as follows: didate for the legislature is as follows didate for the legislature is as follows:
"I feel obliged to say at once that the engrossing nature of my business affairs this year makes it impossible for me to spare any time for legislative or political duties. It happens that I can probably do more for Duluth by attending to the grain business this next year than in any other way, and others can fight for her in the legislature just as well. I trust they will send men of ability and honesty whose influence will be felt there."

She Persuaded Him. "One of the funniest things I have seen for some time in the line of married life occurred the other night," said a prominent officeholder to a re-porter. "Five of us were standing in porter. "Five of us were standing in front of a saloon endeavoring to per-suade one of our number that it would be a pretty good idea to make a night of it. Why have the Republican managers dropped the cry of "make the campaign on state issues exclusively, and don't touch the tariff?"

For several reasons. Chiefly because the people, ground down as they are at present under oppressive and unjust tariff. Secondly, because a campaign on state issues may become decidedly unpleasant. The management of the Stillwater prison, it is said, will not bear the light of day, and there are a number of other state institutions an investigation into which will place the present "business administration" in a very bad place. Just to start this ball arolling the present "business administration" is requested to answer the following questions relative to affairs as they exist at the Stillwater state's prison:

First—Why is it that all the old and competent guards have been discharged and their places filled by new and incompetent guards have been discharged and their places filled by new and incompetent guards have been discharged and their places filled by new and intended to the score of economy, why is it that there are at present five more guards on duty than ever before, when, as a matter of fact, there are 100 less prisoners confined in the prison?

Third—Is it a fact that the convicts tell their guards what they will and what they will not do?

Why is it that wounded and disabled soldiers have been dismissed to make way for political heelers at the prison?

If the present business administration will answer these questions, the Gross was frequent by smoothing care the moon of the state institutions.
