SARAH'S BAD BREAK.

Mrs. Webster Gets a Prominent Business Man Into Hot Water.

A Wife Made Jealous on Receiving a Telephone Message.

An Attempt Was Made to Head Off the Ellis Abduction Case.

In Which a Minneapolis Police Sergeant Takes a Prominent Part.

Sarah Webster, indicted for keeping a house of unlawful resort at the Southern lodging house, is still languishing in jail. Her efforts to secure bail have been ineffectual. One of her efforts seems to have stirred up a heaving domestic brawl. The story related is that she went to the jail telephone and called up a certain business house in the city and asked for the proprietor. Receiving the response that the gentleman asked for happened to be out, she telephoned the message that Mrs. Webster, of the Southern, wanted him to go her hall, and to come up to her.

The receiver at the other end was hung up with a bang, and shortly after a woman appeared before Sheriff Bean and stated she was the wife of the above-referred business man, and that she was at the other end of the phone and heard the message. She further stated that she wanted to see the Webster woman to give her a piece of her mind. The sheriff, to avoid a commotion, refused the latter request. The wife of the business man made two additional visits yesterday with the avowed purpose of seeing the Webster woman, but was refused admission to the jail. She then visited the court room with the expectation of seeing the woman should she be there. The judge, however, notified her he would not be appealed to go bail. The wife is, however, still on the war path, and Mrs. Webster is probably not so anxious to get out of jail for a day or two as she would be under other circumstances.

MAY REGRET IT. Assaulted a Detective While Serving a Warrant.

Detective Tom Horan had a severe tussle yesterday while serving a warrant on the premises of a stolen trunk. W. Jacobson made a complaint in the municipal court that one E. Simons detained his trunk and contents, valued at $87. The detective went to Simons' store, 378 Minnesota street, and proceeded to read the warrant to Simons. As soon as he started in, Simons and two companions, named A. Shickman, and the public has reached its own conclusion, and that conclusion is that such a case, where the question of guilt and knowledge does not enter, should be tried in the civil, and not the medical courts. Doctors, as a rule, are a jealous class, and in this case did a larger job than than evidence. Advertising is against the ethics of the profession, and when it is smirched down the verdict is not surprising. Successful business men who have built up their trade by judicious use of printers' ink have no sympathy with this piece of persecution, and are not slow to say so.

Dr. Blair and Hutton will continue business at the Old Stand.

No little public indignation has been created by the verdict of the state medical board against Drs. Blair and Hutton. It is true that every one expected that board of doctors find such a verdict, evidence or no evidence, but the indignation is no less general. Simmered down, the board has found the two doctors guilty of what? Simply of being built up a tremendous practice by advertising. They did not find that Drs. Blair and Hutton were not good and capable practitioners, but, on the other hand, many witnesses testified to have been confessed by the public, and the public has reached its own conclusion, and that conclusion is that such a case, where the question of guilt and knowledge does not enter, should be tried in the civil, and not the medical courts. Doctors, as a rule, are a jealous class, and in this case did a larger job than than evidence.
