No answer came but the shriek of the wind. Crouching closer to the unfeeling wall, he wiped an icicle from his eye and murmured:
"Well, there is some satisfaction in knowing that it is a cold day when I get left."

Wasn't Dr. Wells hard upon the good people of Plymouth church Sunday night when he told them he had come to Minneapolis because he could find here greater opportunities for doing the work of the Lord? The people of Plymouth have always been looked upon as among the quietest, most law-abiding people in the city of Minneapolis.

II. Jay Smith's idea for a Minnesota building at the world's fair may be all right, but is it safe to give the world a chance to say that "barrei houses" form the chief industry of the great state that owns Ignatius Donuelly, Kittel Halvorsen and Sam Kirkham?

If the evening annex of a local morning aper continues to publish these "early day" tories with such persistency, some one may equikind enough to say that the sheet is in

The new tactics are en-tirely different from the old. In view of the current talk of war with the poor little Chillans, this change in grow of the current talk of war with the poor little Chilians, this change in army tactics is an interesting question. Some time ago a commission was appointed to revise and improve where possible the tactics in use in the United States army. The result of the labors of that commission is the new system. The commission took as a basis the tactics of one Lieut. Reed, and made such additions and changes as they deemed necessary. The new tactics have been adopted by the new tactics have been adopted by the national guard. Now an old member of the national guard, a prize-drill win-ner, can drill about as well under the new tactics as a ground hog can keep books. He must learn the business of soldiering all over again.

To begin with, the new tactics prescribe "setting up" exercises, that is, calisthenics for the development of a soldierly carriage, of twenty-four move-ments. Those members of the Minne-apolis militia companies who have been put through all the movements say that an apprenticeship at swinging an old-fashioned cradle through a New Eng-land oat field. But it develops a man's muscles and makes him stand up muscles and makes him stand up straighter than a ward politician before a bar. One of the most important changes from the old tactics is the manner of falling into line. Under Upton's rules, the men fall in with arms at the side, and so close to one another that the elbows touch. Under the new tactics the men fall in with the left hand on the hip, and the projecting elbow touching. hip, and the projecting elbow touching lightly the right arm of the man next. Then the arm is dropped and the soldiers are in line with a space of nearly twelve inches between the men. That makes it harder for them tokeep in line but it gives them more room for line, but it gives them more room for the execution of the movements of the manual. A man has almost twice as

Several of the movements of the old manual that were more ornamental than anything else have ments of the old manual that were more ornamental than anything else have been stricken out. And so the changes go through the whole list of movements in the manual of arms. The changes have all been made with a view to increasing the ability of the men in the ranks to do quick work. The new drill manual was not designed for the exclusive benefit of dress parade commanders and peacock martinets. The idea of the men who compiled it seems to have been to prepare a manual that will enable an officer to tell his men what to do and leave them to do it in the what to do and leave them to do it in the best and quickest manner possible. The Minneapolis militia boys like the new manual, but they hope that Jim Blaine will hold off the war until they have mastered it.

City Attorney Russel and the city engineer, of Minneapolis, went over to St. Paul yesterday afternoon to see J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern. They were closeted with Mr. Hill for two hours preparatory to the meeting in Minneapolis to-day. Two months ago the president of the Great Northern wrote to the city council of Minneapolis asking for a conference in regard to lowering the tracks of his road through the city. The matter has been under consideration by that august body for some time, which finally resulted in their arranging the meeting. Mr. Hill's proposition to them will be to grant the privilege of lowering the tracks of his line. lege of lowering the tracks of his line from Main street to Central avenue, a distance of seven blocks. In other words, he proposes to tunnel this distance, in order to relieve his road from any liability that may be caused by crossing the streets at grades. Mr. Hill thinks that it is only a question of time when the city will compel the Great Northern to do this for protection against the loss of life and property in the city.

The question to-day, which will be an important one both to the company and to the city, will be that of standing the expense in the carrying out of the prans. It is understood that the Great Northern people are willing to expend half of the amount, providing the council will authorize the expenditure of the other half.
