The Honored Blue Flag Goes Aloft for Another Grand Victory.

Princeton Played Nobly and With Matchless Courage Fought.

But the Unbeatable Gladiators in Blue Would Not Be Denied.

Forty Thousand Enthusiasts Sit Out the Game in a Heavy Rain.

MANHATTAN FIELD, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The greatest athletic event of the year is over. Yale and Princeton have fought their battle for supremacy on the football field, and long will it be remembered by the thousands who saw one of the finest games ever played in this country.

For weeks the general public have been drilling their forces for today's work. The struggle was one of the events in the sporting world which lovers of sport have faith in.

It was a fight of the titans. The best team won, and the better who lost will pay over his cash knowing that he had an honest run for his money. The gates were not opened until 10 o'clock, but by that time great throngs of persons had gathered at the adjacent entrances.

When the gates were opened there was a rush that would have done credit to the members of either eleven.

By 11 o'clock a great throng had gathered in the grounds, and very much of it was augmented by late arrivals. All manner of vehicles began to arrive at that hour. Tallyho, crowded with people, were to be seen on every thoroughfare leading to the grounds.

They were draped in blue and orange, and in great numbers they were waving blue and orange flags and blue and orange banners. The noise was just the same. Many were the ways in which the students chose to show their preference. As was to be expected, the free stands filled up first.

From every row of seats blue and orange and black flags and blue flags. It was difficult to tell which color was the more prevalent.

The wearing of blue covers appeared to be the mode of expressing a preference on the part of the women who were present, and they formed no inconsiderable portion of the throng.

AT FEVER HEAT. Individual Plays Lost in the Grounds.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The second five minutes opens with great applause for Capt. McClung, who makes a gain of twenty yards with a run around the left end.

By midday the grandstands were full up. The first row to take a seat in that portion was a handsome young woman who wore an immense yellow dress.

As the game progressed, the noise increased. The rain of last Monday had left more marks than could be covered up by the little snowfall on hand.

THE GAME YESTERDAY BETWEEN Wesleyan and University of Pennsylvania had left the turf in a badly cut up condition, which was not improved by the rain of the afternoon did not help in the least.

At 1 o'clock a steady stream of humanity flowed in upon the stand. Pretty much all the other available space had been taken by that time.

The Yale line was hoisted on the northern end of the grounds, where there was much hurrahing and blowing of horns. It was repeated when a tiger skin representing Princeton was hung from the grandstand.
