The Hustling Committees Get Down to Work and

Will Win.

Metropolitan Papers in Every Digection Indorse
St. Paul and Predict for It a Great Victory.

Every member of the citizens' committee is now in the harness, and each comes to the front with a solemn promise to exert every possible energy to secure the Democratic convention. They met at the chamber of commerce last evening, and the only absentees were the few who happen to be out of the city. Determination, vigor and confidence, and both were illumined in every face that met the eye of Mayor Smith as he tapped the table with the gavel and called the gathering to order.

Necessarily, the discussion was at first of a desultory character. All sort of propositions were offered as feelers, or set to the discussion that would develop fixed methods. A great deal of good work was effected. The proper committees were appointed, and their respective duties assigned, and the question of a site was given a pretty thorough exposition. The general trend was in favor of remodeling the market house, and extending it so as to cover the entire property owned by the city there, and the improvement, it was agreed, should be paid for by general taxation, so that the auditorium shall be public property, open to the guests of the city for all time to come for conferences, and other purposes where a large seating capacity is required. And even in the event of the market house, there does not seem to be any proposition more improbable—this agitation seems certain to give St. Paul just what it has suffered for in the past, a magnificent auditorium that will accommodate 15,000 people or more.

Mayor Smith, in calling the meeting to order, explained what had already been accomplished and what was due at the Saturday night meeting. He also stated that a conference had already been held, and a committee on guarantee fund, the latter to be divided into several sub-committees.

The Market Site.
Ansel Oppenheim was the first speaker of the evening. He considered the first question to be disposed of is the building in which a national convention should be held. No committee will vote to call a national convention for a city not provided with a suitable auditorium. Mr. Oppenheim favored the market house, and he made a stirring and patriotic speech in support of that position. He argued that the market house is a mighty power for good in the city, and that any action should be taken on the part of the city officials at once to provide St. Paul with a large auditorium. He held that the matter of site is a question that can be easily disposed of. Under the charter of the city the expense of doing this can be met by a tax levy of 1822 the present month, and 80 per cent of the whole can be made available at once. The market house probably from $100,000 to $125,000. This will increase the tax levy to 21 mills. He held that it is proper that every taxpayer contribute to the cost in this way—that is where the labor belongs. This will avoid all the charge and burden that would be entailed by going through the usual process of raising the funds, and would have the committee on guarantee fund practically free to prosecute the market house work—raising money enough to guarantee the convention proper and ample accommodations and entertainment.

On Resolutions.—The same theme, but be differed in the point of location. Col. Allen is embued with a great deal of patriotic feeling, and the old market house for the good it has done in the past, and he extolled these things as considerable length. He amplified his remarks by telling the needs of a big auditorium, and he pointed out the things that had been lost in the past because of the want of a place to hold monster meetings, while Minneapolis had profited by them. The other twin has an admirable auditorium in the exposition, and the whole country knows it.

Col. Allen's Stand.
"I want to say, and say it frankly, for there is no use of trying to deny it, I have had a conversation with Mayor Smith, and I have had a long time to think about it. I have had to go to the market house, and bring out the money to bring them here and then to take care of them the best we could. Were it not for the market house, we could have had a great many conventions here that would have done us a great deal of good all over the world. This is the way the thing stands, and now we must provide a place, not only for the market house, but for all sorts of conventions for all time to come. Now I am not an accommodation man, and I do not want to see the market house, as I have said. We must take care of the market house, and the deniers and the farmers that bring in their provisions for sale, and the present site is the best place for it. It is a question of a few dollars more. Let us say there is just a vacant space, and the column would drop up its spine and break in two. I am not a Democrat, and would result from such a course, and maintained that the title to the property would not be endangered so long as it was kept for public use.

Lane K. Stone suggested that there was nothing before the meeting, and in order to get down to business in a right manner, he moved the appointment of two committees by the chair, one on promotion and one on guarantee fund, the latter to be divided as the chairman had suggested, into various sub-committees.

Judge Flindran here came forward with several suggestions. He had an Oppenheim. He was unqualifiedly in favor of the market house plan. "It is the clearest financial scheme I have heard of," he exclaimed. "The market house brings in practically no revenue, and here a project is proposed that would profitably invest in the entire city. As a Republican, I insist upon contributing to the cost of the market house. I will need the hall, and St. Paul doesn't want to be pensioned on the Democratic party. Every citizen ought to be glad to see the market house ought to be paid for by taxing him. I don't want to see the market house go to year for all time. There is time to rebuild the market into a commodious and complete auditorium that will reflect credit upon the city."

This motion prevailed.
On the Guarantee Fund.
H. P. Hall stated that $50,000 must be raised to guarantee the committee, and there is little difficulty in this if the building is provided by the city.

Mr. Oppenheim suggested that a plan of the proposed auditorium be drawn to take on to Washington, and he wanted to include as one of the duties of the auditorium committee the project of a new capitol site, but this received no second.

Mr. Stevens stated that he positively knew that unless a hall is provided St. Paul will never get another state Republican convention.
Mr. B. Frederick addressed the meeting in favor of providing for a commodious public library in the auditorium. He stated that the market house is a mighty power for good in the city, and that any action should be taken on the part of the city officials at once to provide St. Paul with a large auditorium.

SIX FELL TO DEATH.

A Bridge Span Drops, Taking Down Nine Workmen With It.

Three Picked Up Dead, and Three Others Mangled Fatally.

Heartless Cruelty Is Alleged Against the Officials of the Road.

Special to the Globe.
HELENA, Mont., Nov. 30.—Saturday morning the great span of the Great Northern bridge across the north fork of the river, six miles from Columbia falls, fell, carrying with it nine men, three of whom are dead and six injured—three fatally. The killed are: JOHN POOLEY, PATRICK LANE, LEONARD HENNINGER, leg and arm broken; NEIL STUART, arm and skull fractured; WILLIAM WHELAN, head and internally injured; recovery doubtful; WILLIAM GILLAN, arm and leg broken; head cut; WILLIAM McANALLY, skull badly fractured; and DAVID WYMER, leg broken and head cut.

The accident was caused by the four large guy rods falling from the top and striking the false work. The framing was nearly completed and only the last span was to be bolted. John Pooley was the man who was on the top of the span when it fell. He was pinned under a huge timber, which was twisted into the false work. The entire span was covered with frost, and the dolly got unmanageable and went over the side, striking one of the supports of the false work.
