MUST CLOSE EARLY.

Another Phase in the Regulation of the Saloons.

A new move toward the regulation of the saloons was made Tuesday, when Supt. Henderson issued orders to all patrons to see that the saloons on their beats were closed promptly at 1 o'clock, and in case any saloonkeeper or barkeeper should fail to close at once when directed to do so, to make complaint against him in the municipal court. This order affected only a small proportion of the downtown saloons, as it is the general custom for the saloonkeepers to close promptly at midnight and to close entirely between that time and 12:30.

Some places, however, have been running over the 1 o'clock limit, and several of these failed to observe the new rule, to their sorrow, as it is understood that complaints are being prepared.

The Grand, on Fifth street, near Nicollet, is one of these. Tuesday night Officer Averill found the saloon open at 1:30, and notified the barkeeper in charge to close at once. He did not act with sufficient promptness to satisfy the officer of good intentions on his part, and a misunderstanding ensued which resulted in his arrest.

When brought to the lock-up the barkeeper was released by Capt. Hein, who instructed the officer to take out a complaint in the municipal court against the proprietor of the place.

In the matter of complaint, complications have arisen which may somewhat retard the object of the police. It was intended to draw the complaints under the city ordinance, but upon looking the matter up yesterday the city attorney found that the ordinance does not specify any hour for closing the saloons, but simply provides that no liquor shall be sold between the hours of midnight and 5 o'clock a. m.

This would make it necessary to prove actual sale, which would be extremely difficult in any case and utterly impossible in some.

The complaints will therefore have to be drawn under the state law, which specifically forbids the keeping of a saloon open after 11 o'clock p. m.

Under the state law a defendant may demand a jury trial, which will still further delay and complicate the proceedings. No warrants have as yet been issued, but it is expected that several arrests will be made today.

This determined stand taken by the police department against late hours is directly brought about by the striking match which took place in the hall-way of Johnson's place on Bridge-square last Tuesday night, and by the fact that John was knocked down and, he alleges, robbed by three young men with whom he had been drinking in the saloon.

AND HARRIS LAUGHS. Escape of a High-Priced Crook Through an Officer's Negligence.

Through reprehensible and unpardonable negligence on the part of one of the municipal court officers "Kid" Harris, one of the most noted crooks in the United States, has been liberated from the county jail on the paltry bail of $30, notwithstanding that there now stand against him in this city three very serious charges, all of which are well supported. To make matters worse, there is serious cause to believe that the bail furnished is not absolutely worthless, of what is known as a "straw" bond.

Harris, it is recalled, was arrested on Wednesday, Dec. 16, with Bob Comstock. They tried to rob bookkeeper James C. West of a $2000 cash box, and were fined $1,000 in currency. The pair had been under surveillance of the detective department for about two weeks and were known to be crooks, although up to the time of the year they were regarded as honest men. They were definitely connected with any crime in this city, they were caught through the agency of Mr. Willis and Charles Trask, also an employee of the West. Mr. Willis following some of the "straw" bonds over to Inspector Lawrence, and Mr. Trask trailing Harris to the Loan and Trust building, where he also was arrested.

The day following their bold attempt at robbery they were arraigned in the municipal court on the charge of grand larceny in the second degree, and, waiving examination, Comstock was held in $1,000 bail, and Harris in $50. They were then committed to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury.

When these men were arrested it was thought that they were implicated in other crimes committed recently in the city. There was almost proof positive that they were the men who were surprised while going through rooms in the West hotel, and that they were caught through the chase by Charles Willis and another employee of the house. Three shots were fired at Willis by the retreating thieves, passing dangerously near his head. The detectives

MAKING A MURDER.

Frank Newell Dangerously Wounded Last Night by Albert Weese.

They Quarreled Over a Pair of Skates and Then Fought.

Loss of a High-Priced Crook Through an Officer's Carelessness.

C. M. Foote on Politics and Convention--District Court News.

Frank Newell, a farmer residing on Forty-second street, near the Lake Harriet pavilion, was shot, probably fatally, in his own doorway last night by Albert Weese, a railroad laborer, who has been working for the Great Northern road. Weese is a single man, twenty-two years of age, and makes his home with his parents, who reside west of Lake Harriet. For some time past he has been keeping company with Miss Bertha Olson, who lives at Newell's house, and calling there last evening became engaged in a quarrel with Newell, which led to the shooting.

Weese delivered himself into the hands of one of the officers of the Fifth precinct, telling what he had done, and was locked up in the court station on the charge of assault in the first degree, which later developments may change to murder.

The story of the shooting and the circumstances which led to it are related by Weese as follows:

"I had been keeping company with Miss Bertha Olson, who resides with the Newells, and frequently took her skating. I used to leave my skates at her home, and she would bring them to the lake than mine and made it very handy for me if I came up from town. Last Tuesday night I went to her house and left my skates under the front porch, with Miss Olson's permission. Tonight I called there at 7 o'clock and finding the skates gone I went to the door and asked the girl if she had seen them. She said she had not, then Newell came to the door and asked me if I thought his women folk had nothing better to do than to look after my skates. I said of course I didn't, and we had a quarrel, and he ordered me out of his lot, calling me a d--d son of a b--t. I started to go, saying that I did not want to have any trouble with him on my own ground, and he followed me and struck me in the back of the neck with his fist. He then went to the walk I dropped my overcoat and drew my revolver, and he said, 'You've got a gun.'"

"I said, 'yes, I have, and it's loaded.'"

"I fired in the air to show him that I was loaded and to scare him back, but he still followed me, and made a motion as if he was going to strike me. I fired in the air again, but he still followed me, and picking up my coat, started off with it. I fired in the air again, but not very high, and I guess the ball came pretty close to him. Then I fired again and hit him. As soon as I saw he was hit I ran to him and said, 'Frank, where are you hit?'"

"He said, 'Loin, go and get a doctor, quick.'"

"I looked him if he did not want me to help him into the house, but he said no; he wanted me to go after Dr. Russell at once. I got Dr. Russell and went home. I told my mother what I had done and that I was going to go to myself up to the officers. I changed my clothes, putting on some things I thought I would need, and then started for the police station, but on the way I met a policeman and he said to me, 'I'm telling you that I was and what I had done.'"

"I suppose from the way Newell acted tonight he did not want me to go with the girl any more; but he never said anything about it before and never told me to keep away from her. I had no other trouble with him before, but about a year ago my twelve-year-old brother died. Newell slapped my father and he said he would tell my brother and me. Newell told him then he could lick both my father and me, and my brother told me, but I never said anything about it."

"I have never had any trouble with the girl, Bertha Olson, and she encouraged me to come there and to leave my skates there."

"On being asked how he happened to have a loaded revolver with him, Weese said that he had bought a revolver, but did not generally have it loaded. He happened to go to a friend's house to play cards yesterday afternoon, and seeing some cartridges in a stand drawer which fitted his revolver, a 38-caliber, he loaded the weapon and replaced it in his bag. He had no intention of using the revolver when he loaded it."

Weese told his story in a straightforward manner, but at times his eyes filled with tears and his voice wavered. When asked if he intended to hit Newell when he fired the last shot he said:

"Now you've got me. I was so excited that I don't know whether I did or not."

Newell was taken in the Central patrol wagon to the city hospital, where an examination revealed the fact that the bullet had entered the body just above the left hip. The ball itself was located in the abdomen, just below the skin. Dr. Russell, who is attending the patient, advances the theory that the course of the bullet was turned by one of the ribs, which acted as a wedge, penetrating the wall of the stomach, and expresses very strong hopes of his recovery. Newell is about thirty-two years of age and married. He has declined last night to talk of the affair.

FOOTE HOME AGAIN.

What He Heard in the Way of Politics While Aways.

C. M. Foote, looking as fresh and strong as if he had just emerged from a course of training in some foreign army, returned to his home in Wisconsin, and a few places further east. Mr. Foote went away on business, but those who know him well do not think that he has returned to everything he heard in the way of political discussion. He was in the city for a few days, but when he returned to his home in Wisconsin, he had a long interview in the Evening Wisconsin, of Milwaukee, almost as soon as he struck that city. The interview related to the speaker ship fight. It is needless to say that Mr. Foote was favorable to the candidate, Mills. Mills did a good deal for the Democracy of the Northwest last year when he came up to speak, and Mr. Foote was one of the active part in the campaign of his home in Wisconsin. Last night the December entertainment of the Hennepin Athletic club came off at the club rooms. It was the most successful entertainment given by the club since its organization. There were several good contests for points. The boxers ranged from featherweights up to heavy weights. All of them were lively and most of them were scientific. The best were those between Murray of Minneapolis and Cummings of St. Paul, and Schoenberg and Peter Bordeaux.

Nearly a week after the publication of the information in the Globe an evening paper discloses that the recent advance in the insurance rates by the Underwriters union is likely to result in the appearance in the Minneapolis field of non-board companies.
