The great fire which wiped the yards of J. W. Day & Co., at Twenty-fourth avenue north and First street, out of existence on May 21, 1891, is to be thoroughly discussed before the district court judges. On Wednesday J. W. Day & Co. and fifty-four insurance companies brought suit against the H. C. Akeley Lumber company to recover

The complaint sets forth that the fire was caused from the sawdust consumer of the Akeley mill. The Akeley company, the complaint alleges, should have had the consumer in perfect re-pair; also that it should be one from which no sparks could escape. The fifty-four insurance companies are interested because they have paid Day & Co. insurances amounting to $126,500. Day & Co.'s real interest in the case is, therefore, $80,634.31.

H. C. Akeley & Co. do not think that the complaint is sufficiently explicit. The attorneys for the firm, Stratton & Kellogg, accordingly filed a motion yesterday asking that the complaint be more thorough in statements. They want to know the quantity, quality and value of the lumber destroyed, and the alleged defects in the machinery of the Akeley mills specified. The motion will be argued next Saturday.

HOPE FOR ALL.

Workhouse Prisoners Will Be Given a Chance to Reform in

The unfortunate inmates of the workhouse are at present the objects of considerable interest to certain well-known philanthropists of the city. The great majority of the unfortunates are victims of the liquor habit, and owe their tims of the liquor habit, and owe their disgrace and present condition to their appetites. There is a move on foot now to introduce the bichloride of gold treatment into the workhouse with a view to bringing about a complete physical and moral metamorphosis of the patients. The prisopers have all signified their desire to be treated, and it is likely that their wishes will be realzied. Judge Mahoney is actively engaged in their behalf, and has prepared a communication to the board of charities and corrections. He recommends that the board provide the necessary that the board provide the necessary he bichloride of gold treatment, and have it conducted at the workhouse. The move, he says, will be in the right direction, and will be humane, wise and economical. The cost of treating each patient will not be over $10, and pos-sibly a great deal less. Yesterday Nora Sexton, an old-time offender, whose appetite for strong drink has brought her to the very sewer of vice, was brought back from the workhouse at her own request and given in charge of a certain well known physician. He took the poor woman to his own residence, where he will treat her with chloride of gold. He does this at his own expense as an experiment and for the sake of humanity.

MIDNIGHT PROWLERS.

They Make Life Miserable for Residents of the Eighth Ward.

The residents in the vicinity of Twenev-eighth and Thirtieth streets and Hennepin avenue are having their lives burdensome by burglars and eneak thieves. Scarcely a night passes but an attempt is made to enter one or more houses, much to the discomfort and terror of the occupants. Dr. Rinker, who resides at 3011 First avenue south, was awakened Friday night by some one who was attempting to force open the lattice of his bedroom window, and on the same night Andrew Gessler found it necessary to abandon his seance with Somnus and chase away two miscreants who had succeeded in penetrat-ing the classic interior of his kitchen. Yesterday Alfred H. Knowles, a traveling man who formerly conducted a wholesale liquor establishment at 24 Washington avenue north, complained to the police that strange men are continually prowling about his residence at the corner of Twenty-eighth street and Hennepin avenue. A number of bur-glaries, he avows, have already been accomplished in the neighborhood and he fears that an attempt will soon be made on his place. Inasmuch as he is away from home a great deal, he dreads to leave his wife alone under existing

SERMON AT THE MORGUE.

Companions and Friends View the Remains of Lottie Mitchell. The remains of Lottie Mitchell, the young cyprian, who met such a tragic death Friday night, still lie on a slab in Gleason & McAllister's morgue. Dozens of her frail sisters visited the morgue yesterday and last evening and were granted the privilege of unveiling the corpse. The sight affected them all very much. They read a sermon in that stiffened form and wet clinging shroud which they will not soon forget. Coroner Byrnes has fully investigated the matter and come to the conclusion that it was purely accidental, and consequently no inquest will he held. He visited Johnson's resort at Crystal lake, and the bartender of the place informed him that Herb Bedford, the driver, was not under the influence of liquor at all, when he started back to the city with the two girls.

Emma Ericksen, the other unfortupate, was removed from the bagnio on Eleventh avenue south early yesterday morning, to St. Barnabas hospital, She recovered consciousness during the forenoon, but was not allowed to speak. The blood still trickles occasionally from her ear, and the probabilities are that her skull is slightly fractured. The funeral of Lottie Mitchell occurs this afternoon. The services will be held at 3 o'clock at the morgue, Rev. William Wilkinson officiating. The remains will be interred at Lakewood.

LOCAL RAILWAY LITIGATION.

Two New Suits Filed Involving the Belt Line Muddle.

The old track trouble between the Minneapolis Mill company, the Minneapolis Western Railway company and the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway company, W. H. Tuesdale, as receiver, and the Railway Transfer receiver, and the Railway Transfer company, has broken out into another district court litigation. The complaint asks the same conclusion as has been in former suits, namely, that the defendants, the last three named above, be restrained from using a certain railway track which runs from Smith street to the mills of the Minneapolis Mill company and the W. D. Washburn Mill company.

pany and the W. D. Washburn Mill company.

The complaint sets forth that the track in litigation was built on March 25, 1873. On June 28, 1888, the Minneapolis Mill company entered into an agreement with W. D. Washburn whereby he was granted permission to use the track with the same privileges exercised by the Minneapolis Mill company. For the past year, the complaint alleges, the St. Louis road, through W. D. Washburn, has been using the track. In addition to using the track the defendants refuse to allow the plaintiffs to use it. Therefore an injunction is asked.

Another Similar Suit.

Another Similar Suit.

Another similar suit.

Another suit, somewhat similar, was filed at the same time that the above was given to the clerk. The plaintiff in this action is the C. C. Washburn Flour Mill company and the defendants are the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway company, W. H. Tuesdale as receiver, and the Minneapolis Railway Transfer company. The complaint states the plaintiff owns Washburn C elevator. The company also owns two railway tracks extending from Eighth avenue south, through to Wash-A mill, across Seventh avenue past Washburn B mill and elevator C and through to Washburn C mill, all told, 576 feet of trackage. These tracks were built by C. C. Washburn in 1879 and the plaintiff acquired title from the executors of his estate.

The occasion for the litigation is found in the fact that the plaintiff desires that the Minneapolis Western Railway company connect with these tracks and have charge of the company's business, as this road will perform the necessary transporting for less than the St. Louis road. The plaintiff therefore asks that the rights of all parties to the tracks in question by adjusted, also that the defendants be restrained from in any way interfering with the Minneapolis Western.

As the defendants include the St. Louis road, which is in the hands of the receiver, the court must grant permismission before these cases can come to Another suit, somewhat similar, was

PHILO HATCH'S TROUBLES. Deeds of His Homestead Property

Set Aside Yesterday. The case of Joseph H. Clark, receiver for Philo L. Hatch, insolvent, against Luella H. Terry was decided in favor of the plaintiff by Judge Smith yesterday. The case was to set aside a real estate conveyance. A year ago Philo Hatch and wife went to Califorrinio Hatch and wife went to California, leaving their son, Dr. Ray Hatch, empowered as their attorney in fact. He was left a number of blank notes for the estate, which he used. Shortly after the departure of Philo Hatch, the son, who converted the Hatch Publishing comparture of Philo Hatch, the son, who operated the Hatch Publishing company, assigned. The assignment also implicated the father, and he was also embarassed. When this came about the son conveyed the Hatch homestead property, located at Mary place and Eleventh street, to the Home Savings and Loan association for $85,000—a mortgage of $40,000, $40,000 worth of city and Minnetonka property and $5,000 in cash. This was in turn conveyed to Mrs. Terry, Hatch's daughter, who held a claim against the estate of ten years' standing. Receiver Clark sued to set aside these conveyances, as they favored Mrs. Terry as a creditor. Judge Smith decided Clark was right.

ST. ANTHONY INTERURBAN.

It Looks as if That Line Might

Come This Summer. There is a fair prospect for the building of another interurban electric line the coming summer -one by way of St. Anthony park. Some time ago Mr. Lowry declared that the street railway company would build no more lines this year unless the parties interested were year unless the parties interested were willing to come forward and advance the money. That set the St. Anthony Park people to hustling, for they were determined to have a line. They appointed the following committee to solicit subscriptions: A. R. McGill, St. Anthony Park, chairman; C. H. Pratt, Minneapolis; F. G. James, Minneapolis; J.B.Jett, St. Paul; W. T. McMurran, St. Paul; P. J. Kennedy, St. Anthony Park, and A. C. Brace of the same place. The committee has already secured subscriptions for $18,000, and has hopes of securing the remainder of the necessary $25,000 before it is time to begin the work of the remainder of the necessary $25,000 before it is time to begin the work of construction. There is talk of a couple more interurban lines—one by way of Fort Snelling and one down Lake street and across the Lake street bridge. In view of the declaration made by Mr. Lowry recently, these other lines are decidedly nebulous as yet.

AGAINST SEIBERT.

One Link in the St. Louis Road's Chain of Difficulties Broken. W. H. Truesdale, receiver for the St. Louis road, appeared before Judge Lochren yesterday and asked permission to build two new engines and pay $4,000 interest on the Pacific extension mortgage. Permission was granted. mortgage. Permission was granted. Within a week the receiver will ask permission to build a double track from Kenwood to Hopkins. A double track is made necessary by the extensive traffic in summer. The matter of paying the interest on mortgages held by Henry Seibert has been a bone of contention ever since the St. Louis road went into the hands of a receiver. Seibert contends that he is the only one entitled to the proceeds of the railroad until the other bondholders foreclose. They do not want to foreclose, because their bonds are now drawing 7 per cent. In Childs May Come.

George W. Childs, proprietor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, will come West in a few weeks on an extensive

THE CAKE WALK.

It Is Likely to Prove a Decided

Novelty. Minneapolis is to have a decided novelty during the coming week, in the shape of a genuine Southern cake walk. There was one in Chicago last week, and bere is what the Chicago Tribune

The cake walk will be the principal attraction Friday and Saturday nights, and the three couples winning the most cakes on those nights will walk for the big cake Sunday night. GOSSIP OF THE CURB.

A big, brawny man came rushing out from the saloon opposite the Bijou theater last night yelling police and murder at the top of his voice. A little fellow with straggling beard and a cast in the right optic came pell-mell after him, and before the curb was reached had and before the curb was reached had mounted the big man's back like a catamount. He fastened his fingers in the big man's hair and began kicking him vigorously in the fundament, at the same time screaming like a prize pig in pain. A policeman pulled him off and liberated the big man. He explained that the little fellow had brutally attacked him, while they were discussing the merits and demerits of Col. Glenn as a lecturer. To avoid causing any sadness in the little fellow's home he struck him on the head and then ran away so as not to be called upon to strike him again. The policeman ordered them both to go home and the big man limped up the street, ruefully caressing the place that had been kicked.

Two women stood at the corner of Nicollet and Washington last night waiting for a car. One of them was middle-aged, had an ascetic look about her face, and a red nose. Her mouth expanded and the vinegary look disappesred from her face. Suddenly a white and gleaming object dropped to the ground and buried itself in the mud. She stopped laughing, while a look of pain shot into her eyes and a peculiar contraction set in about her lips. Hastily picking up the object she wrapped it in a handkerchief, and mumbling something to her companion she hurried off down street.

The white and gleaming object was a set of false teeth.

Norman Taylor, the patriarch who is leading the young fellows in the pedestrian contest now in progress in Market hall, is something of a versifier. The old man employs his time while circling the track in paying his addresses to the muse. The other day he "dashed off" a few stanzas, reproduced below, while piling up the miles on his opponents. Any lameness in the feet of this poem may be ascribed to the fact that the old man had been walking a good while when he wrote it: good while when he wrote it: Come out to see the pedestrain race,
The fleet men speeding round and round
See what the trained fing and muscles do;
A grain of wheat may here be found. Climbing stairways steep, with panting breath,
Of this the pedestrian nothing knows;
Climbing steep hills with rapid pace,
He never like a porpoise blows.

Come out to see the old man run; The fire of youth still warms each vein, Come out to see the old man run, You may n'er behold his like again. Come out to see the old man run; He stood in the war time's bloody rain, He faced the sheeted hail of death Upon the crimson battle plain.

Come out to see the pedestrian race, Sure your attention 'twill engage; The work being done upon the track Is far above the average. The annual meeting of the Press club

MEDICAL INSTITUTE. Brilliant Reception Given by the Faculty Last Night. The faculty of the Minneapolis Medcal and Surgical Institute gave a public reception last night at the institute, 828 First avenue south. The reception was a brilliant affair, and between 200 and 300 ladies and gentlemen attended.

Every department and room in the building was thrown open to the guests, and members of the faculty acted in the capacity of chaperones.

The compressed air chambers were risited, and the many intricate and elaborate electrical and surgical apparatus in the various departments were shown to the guests and their uses explained. The parlors on the first floor were tastefully decorated with flowers, and in one of the alcoves behind heavy curtains an orchestra discoursed music throughout the evening. The institute has recently added several other departments to its already large list, among them a bichloride of gold sanitorium on Hennepin boulevard. It was with a view of showing to the people of Minneapolis the magnitude of the institution as a whole that the reception was held.

but he left his mark upen the community in which he lived. While alive he passed his days amid scenes of the greatest excitement—the excitement of the speculative markets of the greatest speculative nation on earth; in death his body was removed from sight of men amid the most solemn silence. The contrast between life and death could not have been greater.

The chamber of commerce adjourned at noon, and the members of the chamber proceeded to the residence of the deceased, Twenty-sixth street and Park avenue, in a body. By 2 o'clock, the hour set for the funeral, the house was filled with friends and relatives of the dead man. A large delegation came from Duluth, where Mr. Sawyer lived many years, and where he was highly esteemed. Rev. M. D. Shutter conducted the funeral services. He made no long address, confining himself to a few words on the life of the departed and comments on those traits of his character that endeared him to his business associates and all who knew him. and comments on those traits of his character that endeared him to his business associates and all who knew him. At a little after 2:30 the procession of carriages left the house for Lakewood cemetery. Following the hearse came the carriage containing Rev. Dr. Shutter and a minister from Duluth, Mr. Sawyer's old pastor. The second and third carriages carried the pall bearers, Messrs. C. A. Pillsbury, F. H. Peavey, F. L. Greenleaf, E. J. Phelps, L. S. Brown, E. Carden, J. E. Glass and A. B. Taylor. Then came Mrs. Sawyer's carriage, and with her were B. J. Sawyer, and Mr. and Mrs. F. J. household.

The services at the cemetery were as simple as those at the house. The body will lie in the vault at Lakewood for a time, and will probably be taken to Lockport, N. Y., for burial later.

The room in which the body lay at the house was literally filled with floral offerings. They came from his friends in the chamber of commerce, from business friends, from social friends and from employes. All bespoke the high place he held in the hearts of those who knew him best.

READY FOR WORK.

Supt. Hunt Says the World's Fair $100,000 Fund Is All Right. Supt. L. P. Hunt, of the Minnesota exhibit at the world's fair, was in Min-neapolis yesterday. He had just come back from a trip through the Northern part of the state, and he returned feeling cheerful over the outlook for Minnesota's showing at the big fair in Chicago. He says that all of the counties north of Minneapolis, with the exception of Pine and Cook, have organized and have contributed that court to the and have contributed their quota to the $100,000 fund wanted by the commissioners for the fair. He will go to Pine county in a few days, and Cook will be taken care of without a personal visit from him. He says that sixty of the counties have already contributed, or have been organized, so that there is no question about their contributions. This is the 75 per cent that the commission agreed to see in line before beginning agreed to see in line before beginning any actual work toward preparing the Minnesota exhibit. He sees no reason now why the commission should longer delay getting down to actual work. He thinks that a meeting of the commission mill be held some time next week, probably Thursday, before which time Gov. Merriam is expected to name a successor to M. B. Harrison, of Duluth. He says that the people of Duluth have recommended that Col. Baldwin be appointed to the vacancy on the commission.

He arrived yesterday morning and spent most of the day with District Attorney Hay. He came with District Attorney Hay. He came here from Chicago. He has been investigating the operations of the trust in that city for some time all on the quiet. The government hoped to keep the investigation a secret, but the fact that Horton was at work leaked out while he was in Chicago. Minneapolis is one of the biggest, if not the biggest, market for twine in the country, and the government expects to learn a good deal ket for twine in the country, and the government expects to learn a good deal about the trust in this city. Just what the government already knows is merely a matter of conjecture. Mr. Horton will not talk. Whatever information Mr. Horton succeeds in getting will be laid before some of the federal grand juries in the East. The government is proceeding to prosecute the cordage trust on the same lines that were followed in the war on the whisky trust.

The Telegram Objects.

Some of the daily papers persist in trying to name the new Southside high chool, and talk about it being a graceful tribute to a man who was a highly ful tribute to a man who was a highly respected and public spirited citizen to christen it "The Wilson," says the South Minneapolis Telegram. The public and private life of the late E. M. Wilson entitle his memory to grateful recognition, and Southsiders appreciate the fact full well. But Southsiders do not want the identity of the South high school swallowed up in any name. Let it be known as the South high school. We have canvassed the matter considerably, and are assured that no other name is wanted by Southsiders.
