

KNOCKING A KNUTE.

The Various Schemes to Throttle Nelson's Little Boom.

Senators Bent on Securing His Death in Convention.

John Lind Being Groomed for Only Temporary Use.

A Scandinavian Warfare That Would Kill Them Both.

"John Lind's boom for governor was started in the law offices of Davis, Kellogg & Severance, in St. Paul."

This statement was made a few days ago by one of the leading Republicans of the state in the course of a conversation with several friends. Some of them were inclined to label Mr. Lind as Senator Washburn's candidate, but the gentleman whose remarks are quoted above argued otherwise. He thought that the Mill City senator would be found supporting the aspirations of Governor McGill, but not just at present. Minneapolis was for McGill in 1888, and also in 1890, and Gen. Washburn would not be found opposing him. The entire crowd, however, was agreed upon one point—that neither senator would allow Knute Nelson to capture the gubernatorial nomination if it can be prevented.

Since that time the United States senators have become more excited than ever, and for a time at least the seat of war has been transferred to the national capital. The Washington correspondents of the various papers are all taking a hand, and are daily being "filled up" by either the United States senators or Congressman John Lind, or by some man who is a candidate for or represents some one of these men. And these reports are all devoted to booming John Lind in a general way, and to demolishing the party is extolled, no mention of his position on the silver question being made, and in some instances the position is made between him and Knute Nelson to the manifest disadvantage of Mr. Nelson. A sample of these attacks was published in last evening's "Paul Dispatch." It was headed, "An Historic Occasion. How Knute Nelson Won the Approval of the Democrats in Congress." This "special" follows in a brief and pungent editorial in the St. Paul Dispatch of March 28 has excited considerable comment among the leading Republicans, chiefly from Minnesota and adjacent states, were discussing the matter today, and one of the speakers expressed his views as follows:

"It will be interesting to see to what extent party gratitude flows for toward the man who in 1888, when the celebrated Mills bill was pending, deserted the Republican side of the Indian affairs, and in 1890, when the Indian appropriation bill was before the house in committee of the whole. In that committee any man who may be accused and anything may be said, Mr. Nelson, having in a certain sense, a free trade speech, which evoked the plaudits of the entire Democratic side of the house, while it had an almost paralyzing influence upon the Republicans, with whom he was affiliating. To the right, and in fact, Knute Nelson, on that historic occasion, sat John Lind, a loyal true Republican from Minnesota, and Lind, who was born and bred a Democrat, and who was surrounded by a Democratic crowd. John Lind grew pale with anger and reproach, and he arose, and he apparently to interrupt or make reply, but upon second thought, he sat down, and disappeared in the cloak room. With his usual conservatism, John Lind, I think, would not think the matter over carefully before speaking, and had concluded not to signify Nelson's inexcusable conduct. It was two hours before Knute Nelson, without saying a word about the incident, had returned to the house, stood in his place and assailed the Republican party, of which he was ostensible a member. After the session of St. Paul, John L. Macdonald, of Shakopee, and Thomas W. Johnson, all Minnesota Democrats, surrounded Knute Nelson and applauded his betrayal of the Republican party."

"Today, if Nelson were in the house, he would receive similar encouragement from the successors of the late Senator Castle, O. M. Hall and W. H. Harris. Every Democrat in Minnesota would applaud a free trade speech from Knute Nelson today, and his representatives did four years ago on the floor of the house. I wonder if the Republicans of Minnesota certainly will give Knute Nelson the governorship as an ex-emplification of the 'party gratitude' referred to in the Dispatch editorial."

This arraignment of John Lind and Knute Nelson against each other, is a very good deal for the Republican party of Minnesota. Mr. Lind's boomers, who are really only the United States senators and their friends, are anxious that they will be given the nomination. All they desire and expect is to secure the defeat of Mr. Nelson, and they do not care how it is done. In the event of one of these two men being nominated after a hard fight against the other would lead to grave complications, and certainly imperil the Republican cause.

Mr. Lind is a native of Sweden and Mr. Nelson of Norway. At the present time there is much feeling between the two nations, and a direct contest between these men would lose the successful one many votes in the other country.

For a long time past it has been an open secret that Messrs. Lind and Nelson have no great amount of love and admiration the one for the other. The second district man was given no end of trouble in his district because of the fact that he reported to the district committee on Nelson's voted against the Mills bill and tariff reduction while Mr. Nelson broke over party lines and voted as his constituents' interests as they saw fit. Animated by this feeling it probably did not take a great deal of persuading to induce Mr. Lind to enter the field against Mr. Nelson.

While neither Senator Davis nor his colleague seem to realize it, they are really helping Mr. Nelson's cause. The people of Minnesota will hardly fancy the idea of the United States senators presuming to interfere in the gubernatorial contest, and the latter will be administered to both of them. Senator Davis is the more uneasy of the two senators, realizing as he does that he has done nothing to entice him to the people or upon which to ask a re-election during his entire term. More than this, he has not even kept in favor of his party. His action on the Pacific railroad funding scheme has angered the farmers, without whose support no man can be elected to the United States senate in Minnesota. Mr. Washburn's case resembled that of his colleague in many ways, although he entered the senate under a cloud at home, and had all to gain and nothing to lose. He remembered all who aided him in his election, and as a consequence, has a large following among the active party workers. But he sees in Nelson an opponent in 1892, just as Mr. Davis sees in the "Newswagon" next year, and both are accordingly decidedly restless.

The announcement is made that a number of the friends and officeholders of ex-Gov. McGill during his term as governor met the other evening and decided to make a fight for the Ramsey county delegation. This movement is said to have received the endorsement of the ex-governor, who is at all times ready to lay down the cares of private business and assume a political office, and so the McGill campaign may be said to be commenced. This is Mr. McGill's home county, but there are few politicians who have any idea that he can secure more than three wards in the city. The local organization is against him, many of the "boys" now at the head of the machine having forgotten that there ever was a governor named McGill. The last contest

Mr. McGill made in this county was in 1888, it will be remembered, and the only thing he secured was a part of the Seventh ward delegation, and this was done through an alliance with the Scheffer faction. There is one large county where Mr. McGill will have a show. This is Hennepin, and the support of Hennepin county has always been a source of weakness to Mr. McGill, because of the fact that the people throughout the state know that John S. Pillsbury and his friends are the Mill backers. The farmers of Minnesota are no more favorable to a Minnesota state government than they were six years ago, when a change of 1,200 votes would have elected Democratic governor. Mr. McGill is clearly not in the race, and his old force of officeholders ought to be called off.

Grant County Republicans.
Special to the Globe.
ELBOW LAKE, Minn., April 2.—The Republican county convention was held here today. Senator Cameron was chairman. Harrison's administration is endorsed. Delegates to the state convention: J. W. Reynolds, A. C. Belyea, J. A. Willard, R. Johnson and C. G. Peterson.

Spring at the "Plymouth" Corner.
Spring Hats, Overcoats, Suits, Gloves, Neckwear.

IN SPECIAL TERM.

Half a Dozen Justices Rushing the Business.

All six judges of the district court sat in special term today at disposed of business as follows:
Judge Brill—Ruggan vs. J. McCafferty; heard on motion for leave to file supplemental answer for defendant, William S. Darnum, for defendant, A. C. Swaney vs. The American Rubber Company; settlement of case before the court, Joseph S. Conrad vs. Michael Hines; motion to change venue to Dakota county taken under advisement. Judge Kelly—St. Paul Trust Company vs. G. H. Hurd; submitted on a motion to transfer to state court. H. J. James, attorney for defendant. In the matter of the receivership of M. J. O'Brien; motion to dissolve certain claims of security of the Washburn bill, up to this point, is to be found in the inclusion in the present bill of cotton and hops among the articles which may not be dealt in through futures and options. The remainder of the bill is substantially similar to the Washburn measure. It provides for the same in cotton and hops in futures and options of $1,000 as a license fee, and five cents per pound, or 20 cents per bushel, upon each of the articles dealt in, and for the collection of the taxes, the publicity of the records of transactions and the enforcement of the law in relation to such speculations in even greater detail than the Washburn bill.
The report submitted with the bill recites the well known object sought by the proposed legislation, attacks "short sellers," "bucket shops" and dealers in puts and calls, and asserts that the bill, if enacted into law, will add to the general prosperity.

THE WOOL BILL.
Its Passage at an Early Day Is Assured.
WASHINGTON, April 2.—The general discussion on the tariff bills closed today. If the present program, as agreed upon by the leaders, is carried out, the consideration of the free wool bill under the five-minute rule will begin Monday, and the measure passed by the end of the week. It is generally desired by the free woolers to pass Mr. Springer's bill before the Rhode Island election of Wednesday, for the political effect of the bill, and the five-minute rule on the passage of the measure will probably be taken by Tuesday.

RAUM'S LITTLE SNAP.
The Pension Commissioner Is Still Explaining.
WASHINGTON, April 2.—In response to a question by Mr. Baile, today, Commissioner Raum said that it would be difficult to prevent a bad man in the pension office from taking notes of cases that passed over his desk and furnishing information to pension attorneys. Witness did not think such a thing was practiced to any extent in the office. His attention had once been called to a case where an outsider had agreed to furnish information. The commissioner reiterated that it was not the case that a man of influence got his claim through quicker than a poor man. He said, would not take a case out of its regular course. Gen. Raum said the new law made no distinction in the pensioning of officers in the army. The average rate, however, is under the general law fixed by statute. He had no fear, he said, of any embarrassment to the treasury, and he had never held a pension back on that ground, nor would he ever do so.

Officers on Their Track.
Special to the Globe.
PIERRE, S. D., April 2.—Frank Burdard and wife, baglio keepers, under privilege to furnish bondsmen for grand larceny and violation of the prohibitory law and to escape warrants for selling liquor to Indians, escaped last night, and are hunted by the officers. Burdard is the notorious Sully Island saloonkeeper who has had much trouble with Ft. Sully soldiers. The United States marshal is close on his heels.

A Saturday Election.
Special to the Globe.
JAMESTOWN, N. D., April 2.—The city election today resulted in the re-election of B. W. Fuller as mayor. He had no opponent. The only contests for aldermen resulted in the second and fourth wards, in which John Johnson was elected over John Eager, and G. A. Lieber over H. C. Hotchkiss. There were street fighting and improvements with the selection of aldermen favoring such.

The Missouri Breaks.
Special to the Globe.
BERMARCK, N. D., April 2.—The Missouri river broke tonight, and the ice is running in places. There is no indication of a gorge.

TO TAX OPTION TRADING.
Proposed Substitute for All Pending Measures.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A bill was reported from the committee on agriculture today, as a substitute for the Hatch bill and other measures before the committee, defining futures and options and imposing special taxes on dealers therein. The bill is a voluminous document, comprising fifteen sections. Its provisions may be briefly stated as follows:
The word "options" is to be understood to mean any contract under which a party acquires the right of privilege, but is not thereby obligated to deliver at a future time or with a designated period, raw or unmanufactured cotton, hops, wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, grass seed, flax seed, pork, lard, bacon and other edible products of swine. The word "futures" is understood to mean a contract whereby a party agrees to sell or deliver at a future time, or within a designated period, any of the above-named articles, where he is not the owner of the articles, or has not acquired them by purchase, or by gift, or by future possession; provided that this is not to apply to government, state or municipal contracts, nor to a contract by a farmer for future delivery of articles belonging to him or in course of growth on his lands.
The difference between this bill and the Washburn bill, up to this point, is to be found in the inclusion in the present bill of cotton and hops among the articles which may not be dealt in through futures and options. The remainder of the bill is substantially similar to the Washburn measure. It provides for the same in cotton and hops in futures and options of $1,000 as a license fee, and five cents per pound, or 20 cents per bushel, upon each of the articles dealt in, and for the collection of the taxes, the publicity of the records of transactions and the enforcement of the law in relation to such speculations in even greater detail than the Washburn bill.
The report submitted with the bill recites the well known object sought by the proposed legislation, attacks "short sellers," "bucket shops" and dealers in puts and calls, and asserts that the bill, if enacted into law, will add to the general prosperity.
