Ticket Broker Musgang Arrested for Selling a Stolen N. P. Pass.

It Was One of the Batch Taken by Robinson, of Crookston.

Rev. Pleasant Hunter Makes a Gratifying Impression at Westminster.

Row on Bohemian Flats--Wilkinson on Moral Development.

Friday H. G. Robinson, the Crookston station agent for the Northern Pacific, was arrested just across the line from Vancouver by a Pinkerton detective. He is wanted for defrauding the Northern Pacific out of over $14,000 worth of mileage tickets and employes' passes. In spite of the fact that it was known that Robinson had disposed of the tickets, etc., to St. Paul and Minneapolise scalpers, no clue to them could be found. Conductors and station agents on all the lines were notified to keep a strict watch for them and report at once if any were offered for transportation. A short time ago a Minneapolis alderman wanted to take a trip to the coast, so he visited several of the brokerage offices to ascertain what he could purchase a ticket for. Gustave T. Musgang conducted a scalper's office in the Nicollet house block, and he offered to sell the alderman an employe's pass over the Northern Pacific road. As the pass seemed to be all right, it being duly made out for John Sell, and the price was cheap, it was purchased, and in good faith presented to the conductor on a through train. The conductor imstrict watch for them and report at once on a through train. The conductor immediately recognized it as one of the stolen passes, and after Ald. Haynes had informed him how it came into his had informed him how it came into his possession, he took it up and sent it back to the general office.

In the meantime Musgang sold his office to W. H. Shelley, the former manager of McKenzie & Frey's scalping establishment, and prepared to go to Duluth. He will not go, however, for some time, for yesterday Inspectors Howard and James Doyle arrested him on a warrant sworn out by the railroad company charging him with forgery. The charge of forgery is based on the supposition that Musgang filled in the names of the officials of the road. It is said that he had a large number of the tickthat he had a large number of the tickets and passes stolen by Robinson in his possession, and naturally inferring that he sold them to Shelley the latter gen-tleman was also arrested. Musgang was locked up at the central station, but Shelly was taken before Superintendent of Police Henderson and allowed to go his own recognizance. A thorough search will be made of all the scalpers' offices, and if any of the tickets are found the proprietors will be held re-

HUNTER PLEASES 'EM.

Westminster Church Members Delighted With Their Possible Pastor.

All the local paths led to Westminster church again yesterday. Since the days when gifted and aggressive Pastor Burrell used to hold torth from Westminster's pulpit in prelude and sermon there has not been such a crowdthere has not been such a crowding of the pews and beselging of the doors as yesterday.
The attraction was Rev. Pleasant Hunter, the New Jersey divine, whom the pastoral committee of the church, after a year of patient searchings among the haunts of man, picked out as the preacher most likely in their judgment to conform to the requirements of the situation and once more restore Westminster to its old place of popular minster to its old place of popular prestige among the local churches. Mr. Hunter is not by any means a "dead sure" capture yet, but he came on to size up the field, and the signs seem austriciant for his coming again, and to spicious for his coming again and to stay. Judging from yesterday's results the pastoral committee did well to call stay. Judging from yesterday's festins the pastoral committee did well to call him. The church was jammed to the doors both morning and evening, and the thundering chorus of the old familiar hymns could be heard all over the block. It was quite like old times, and even a mau with a wooden eye could see that the people were greatly pleased, and if called upon to do it would then and there have ratified the committee's action. Minneapolis people usually know when they have a good thing, and knowing it they make it secure, and then hang on. Westminster has surely made a wise choice in Mr. Hunter, and it is to be presumed they will not rest until they have him in their midst with an exclusive franchise on his preaching. There was a very unanimous sentiment at both meetings that the church had done well to bide its time in this matter of the selection of a pastor.

Mr. Hunter is not the orator Dr.

bide its time in this matter of the selection of a pastor.

Mr. Hunter is not the orator Dr. Burrell is, but he is a deal sight better talker. He is a profounder thinker, more liberal in his theology and has more of the points of the philosopher. In utterance he is rapid and his language is the most simple English imaginable. A plain-speaking, sympathetic man of the people is Mr. Hunter, with a natural eloquence and a depth of thought that show a close study of men and the world they live in and a careful analysis of human experience. It is plain enough that he is not one who is going to split hairs in the ological matters, or affect such classic, one who is going to spit hairs in the ological matters, or affect such classic, scholarly utterance as to stimulate the intellect of his hearers to undue exertion to keep in line. Practical sermonizing would seem, at this writing, to be Rev. Hunter's "long suit," and his ability to set forth the facts of life as an invarient to more theroughly live and inspiration to more thoroughly live and practical Christianity his trump card. It seemed to the humble philosopher in the gallery last evening as though be was gallery last evening as though he was preaching right at some people in the cushioned pews below, giving them credit for what good they had done, as well as reminding them of what they had not done. Of course Mr. Hunter, being a stranger here, didn't notice it, but there were some famous sleepers who were the very pink of attention, sitting as straight in their pews and eyeing the preacher with an intensity that betokened unusual interest.

He preached from the text which extolls the man who is faithful in small things. This was the cue to a sermon on faithfulness. The test of greatness was faithfulness, he thought. A man with a record for it was like a good line of goods—always in demand. Sincerity he classed with it.

Naturally, after stowing away such large quantities of the "decocta humuli," everybody felt in a hilarious mood. Dancing was indulged in, and during the afternoon a little fighting. One of the guests, Andrew Tranal, employed by the city in the capacity of sewer digger, and John Zwicker began disputing over the possession of the affections of a tair and fat Bohemian girl. The disputation soon merged into a fight in which Tranal got the worst of ed with was beer. The guests did such

ALL CANNOT BE GOOD. Rev. William Wilkinson Says the

Moral Sense Is a Development. Yesterday Rev. William Wilkinson probably surprised some of the persons who heard him by saying that it is idle, in the present state of society, to think that every member of the body, social and politic, will be ordinarily decent. "Many of the outcasts of our cities," said he, "are sinned against, at least as much as they sin against our laws, often man-made, and with little of justice in them. There are now, set up views of man, of sin, of the power and the immediate effects of the power and the immediate effects of saving grace, which do not derive their authority from Holy Scripture, or from the best traditions of the church of God. These views, looked at alone, as ideals, may be all right; but, when they are, made the measure by which every man is to be judged; when men are to stand or fall by them they become a deman is to be judged; when men are to stand or fall by them they become a delusion on one part and a stone of stumbling on the other. A principle may be absolutely true in itself, yet so stated or applied to special, particular cases as to become, in effect, terribly wrong. In our dealings with ourselves, in our intercourse with others, it will save us from a world of mistake and from positive and cruel injustice, if we keep this constantly in mind. We have to do with men and women as they are, and, this constantly in mind. We have to do with men and women as they are, and, by the grace of God, it is the duty, as it is the glory, of the church to assist in making them what they ought to be. But she cannot accomplish the result aimed at in a day, or a week, or a year. Time is a factor to be taken into clear consideration in the solution of a problem so important, and patience, as well as faith, prayer and labor, must have their perfect work.

"For lack of attention to the principles laid down grave failure has been the outcome of much work which de-served to have been done on proper served to have been done on proper lines. Many hearts have been made very sad; many plans to lift men out of degradation into noble usefulness have come to naught. The fault was not in the ef-fects desired; it was in the way taken to reach it. It can never be by us seen too vividly or remembered too well that vividly or remembered too well that all the mighty changes in nature are slow, gradual, constant and progressive. The ocean changes its bed, the earth its surface, the winter to midsummer, youth to age by imperceptible change. So as a rule it must be in the kingdom of grace. The man who expects the vicious and the bad to hear the gospel, to repent, to be saved and, on the instant, to begin to manifest the grace of stant, to begin to manifest the grace of character shown in men who, by long life of self-denial, have made holy living a delightful joy is not wise. He is doomed to bitter disappointment for himself and for others. He places the beginning for the end. The whole race of men have an inheritance of sin in its dire results upon our bodies, minds, souls. It is seen in a thousand ways in souls. It is seen in a thousand ways in weakness, pain and weariness; in poor thinking, in wicked living. This is known to every physiologist; and every observant man, apart from religion of any kind, knows this grave truth, a truth which is set forth every year with more clearness. The old Hebrew prophet probably spake better than he knew when he said, 'The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge.' We have to do with this law of inheritance of moral—yes, and of immoral qualities.
"It is not the time for me to discuss the justice or wisdom of this state of the facts; but they are around us, before us, and in every one of us. Suffice it to say that the law which transmits a tendancy to vice, is the same which hands down to generation after generation a love of virtue. 'Yee,' says generation a love of virtue. 'Yes,' says the theologian, 'but I have to do with another law, that of divine grace as it is manifested in Christ Jesus.' Exactly; manifested in Christ Jesus.' Exactly; but grace has to be made manifest by human agency. The music is heard, and, in this instance, seen, if present, in human lives. We know what they are, at best. It was this fact which made St. Paul declare, 'In me,'—that is, in my flesh—'there dwelleth no good thing;' and that 'we have this treasure (street or the street or the (grace) in earthen vessels that the glory may be of God and not of us.' It is be-cause these considerations are too often forgotten that the good sometimes rethe good sometimes receive more esteem than they merit, and the bad more blame—yes, and punishment—than they deserve. Wickedness is often a disease. If the epithet, wicked can, accurately, be given to such cases. Oliver Wendell Holmes, wrote a paper years ago, to show this, and our cases. Oliver Wendell Holmes, wrote a paper years ago, to show this, and our very best thinkers, all the world over, understand it now, as a few did then. This does not do away with the need of salvation, of Christ, or rewards, or of punishments, in general, any more than the existence of scarlet fever does away with the need of doctors, of nurses, and medicine. There are thousands of men, who, if they, today, should be truly converted to God, and with all their might should seek to do the will of the Lord, would every hour of their lives feel would every hour of their lives feel with dire effect the past in ways it is hard for persons with a better organism nard for persons with a better organism understand or appreciate.

This thought should teach us lessons of charity and give tone and color to all our estimates of men. It should give us strong support in work which otherwise would make 'Our whole head sick and our heart faint.' It is the glorious duty and mission of the church to depowe as in to point to its remedy and duty and mission of the church to de-nounce sin, to point to its remedy, and, as the most trenchant motive she can offer against it, to show men, that an all wise maker of the universe has shown that this day's sins lead to our children's sorrows. The law of inherited tendancies ought to make us mindful of living holy lives, and this is the will of God concerning us all. So should we assist each with power in the development of a moral sense which would make for righteousness and be an un-told blessing to our descendants in ages yet unborn, and in no mean estimate ad-vance the progress of the world. Every pure life, which sees God and walks with him, is a star in the moral firma-ment, the magnitude and influence of which no man knows but all feel, whether they know it or not.'

CONDITIONAL IMMORTALITY. Rev. H. H. French Says the Bible

Does Not Treat It. By request of some of the members of his church, who wished to know what he thought the Bible taught in regard to conditional immortality, Rev. H. H. French spoke yesterday morning on this

He accepted the dictum of the defenders of this doctrine that the Bible is the final authority, but, he thought, all knowledge is not in the Bible. There all knowledge is not in the Bible. There are four arguments outside of the Bible against conditional immortality. First, the historic argument. From the beginning all men have believed in immortality. Second, the Scientific—Science has nothing to do with beginnings or ends; it has to do with the present. But, as far as its boundary goes, it says nothing is annihilated. Third, the Metaphysicol—The soul is elemental and simple, and hence cannot be disintegrated and annihilated. Fourth—The argument brought out in Burton's analogy, that the soul has gone through so many changes, and continuance of the race unless he gavall an equal chance with Adam. He dis-cussed the negative terms used by oth-ers, such as death, destruction, doom, etc. showed they were used figuratively and also with reference to this life. The prodigal son was not being annihilated when he said, "I perish with hunger." If life meant immortality, and death destruction, what sense in such expressions as "eternal destruction" and an "abundance of immortality." Life and death are co-relative words, and whenever used together don't refer to existence, but state of being. Life is righteousness, and death is unrighteousness. The whole controversy arises from confounding existence is unrighteousness. The whole controversy arises from confounding existence with eternal life. He found two weak points on the other side. First—The vague expression, "capable of immortality." No one knows what it means. We are either immortal or we are not. Second—The Bible teaches different degrees of happiness and punishment.

Paul and the dying thief must have different places or states in the next world, and Christ said: "It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for Bethsaida." It also militates against infant salvation as every one must win imsalvation, as every one must win im-mortality, and, as the infants have no chance, they are annihilated. There is no barrier in God against the blackest thief having eternal life. The thiefsimply does not want it. Man has a capacity for good and bad. As he rises or sinks the bad or good capacity gets out of him, and somewhere the line is crossed and character is fixed. This is hell—to lose the capacity for good.

OVER THE STONES.

The Body of Murderer McGovern

Buried Yesterday. Mike McGovern, the man who murdered Bessie Kelly, and died from wounds inflicted upon himself, was buried yesterday. It was a strange, weird burial. The body was dumped into a plain pine coffin and carted away from Gleason & McAllister's morgue to Hill-side cemetery. There was no proces-sion, no solemn services over the casket, no flowers, and not a tear dropped. The waron containing the pine box, with its ghastly busden, wended its way to the graveyard alone. The bones were rattled over the stones and each jult seemed over the stones, and each jolt seemed to tell the terrible tale of a jealous lover's murder of his mistress and his own death. Previous to McGovern's death he evinced a desire to speak with his attendant. Upon being granted this request he told the attendant that he per lead the total the attendant that he had a horror of being buried in a pauper's grave. He said he had money enough to pay for a decent burial, and after his death sufficient money was found among his effects to pay for interment in Hillside cemetery. Previous to his death McGoveru gave $30 to the physicians at the benital for performphysicians at the hospital for perform-ing the operation on his wounded jaw. When the wagon containing his re-mains reached the deserted graveyard yesterday, the coffin was lowered into the hole and the dirt thrown in upon it without comment. A plain slab will mark the murderer's grave, and the only inscription will be "Michael Mc-Govern."

Another of the "Boos." One of the "boo" gang made a "rush" on an elderly lady named Mrs. Anna Palmer about 8 o'clock last night and snatched her pocketbook. Mrs. Palmer was standing at the corner of Washing-ton and First avenues south waiting for her car. The crowd at the corner saw the theft and started after the fellow, who ran around on Third street toward Nicollet, where Patrolman McNulty yoined in the chase. The fellow did not stop, however, until he reached Fourth street and Second avenue north. At this point the officer ordered him to halt, and he halted. At the lockup he gave the name of Bert Partridge. Mrs. Palmer lives at 2118 Sheridan avenue north

The Strikers Still Out. The striking steamfitters held a meeting in Labor Temple yesterday after-noon to talk over their troubles. After deliberating three hours, it was decided that the master fitters had not conceded all the points asked by the strikers, and therefore they will not go to work. The strikers say that matters look favorable to a settlement with their lovers, and it is thought the men will go to work before the week is over.

AMUSEMENTS. Yesterday at the Bijou, "Mr. Barnes of New York," opened a week's engagement to crowded houses. It is one of the very best plays of the melodramatic order that has been presented at this popular house this season. The personnel of the company is very nearly, if not quite equal to that of last season when seen at the Grand. The enternot quite equal to that of last season when seen at the Grand. The entertaining style and the ever present interest, as well as the originality of the situations and ideas of the play, make it a favorite with theater-goers. Miss May Wheeler is a good actress in the part of Marina Paol, her peculiar inflections reminding one forcibly of Rhea. Miss Emma Field as Enid Anstruther is a most sweet, graceful girl. Hugo Toland in the part of Mr. Barnes is acceptable. Sheridan Block is a most meritorious French nobleman, and will some day, with opportunities, become better known. All the company do well the parts allotted to them, and present an evenly balanced, strong performance.

A large outpouring of the operalovers of this city is expected at the Grand the first three nights of this week, when the big Duff Opera company will present three of the mospopular operas in their extensive repertoire, viz: "The Queen's Mate," which will be sung tonight and Wednesday night; "A Trip to Africa" Tuesday and "Poala" at the Wednesday matinee.

Washington, May 7.—Washington is one of the most delightfully cordial places on all this earth. Everybody seems glad to see you, and deeply interested in you. The street car conductor touches his cap and says, "Beg pardon," when he jostles against you, and if you don't find yourself feeling fond of your fellow man and confident of the innate goodness of the race, you ought to be at the springs drinking the waters for your liver, for something is radically wrong with you. There are plenty of people to make one welcome in the federal capital, but nowhere is the stranger within its gates received with such sincere kindness and unaffected hospitality as at the home of Congressman Castle, of the Fourth district of Min-The Castles have been out of town the most of the season, and have just taken possession of a suite of rooms at the Portland, one of the fashionable apartment houses that crowd the society quarter of the city. The latch string is always up, and a more delightful drawing room to drop into for an informal chat now and then would be hard to find. Mrs. Castle is a would be hard to find. Mrs. Castle is a sister of Col. Fellows, of New York, though she laughingly declares she does not at all approve her brother's political

The Chinese minister, Tsui Kwo Yin, is a most popular man, especially with the women. He distributes gifts with a generous hand, and, like all the members of his legation, he is fond of the young girls of society. And the younger the better, too, apparently. At one of Mrs. Springer's last recentions his almond even as he enreceptions his almond eye, as he entered, tell upon little Miss Linda Webber, the bright-eyed and vivacious tenyear-old granddaughter of Senator Palmer. Mr. Yin immediately asked for an introduction to the little maiden, and devoted himself to her while he remained at the reception. Everybody mained at the reception. Everybody crowded about, and, all unconcerned, the Chinese minister, through his interpreter, carried on an interesting conversation with the equally unembar-rassed little girl. The grown-up women were unnoticed, and more than one of them envied little Miss Linda her honors. (Next day the minister's carriage drew up in front of Senator Palmer's door, and an attache delivered to the delighted little girl a packet containing six, exquisite silk handkerchiefs, embroidered in the height of Chinese art, and two little chests of the kind of tea Chinese gods on a Chinese Olympus make Chinese nectar of. Mr. Yin has not forgotten his little friend since then, but has always a smile and a bow for her whenever he meets her.

If you could look over the pay rolls of the various departments your eyes would start from your head in surprise, for in the lists of scrub women you for in the lists of scrub women you would see enrolled the names of prominent society women. Do the society women scrub? Bless your dear innocent heart, no, indeed; but even in Washington society women are not too well supplied with coin of the realm. The government pays its scrub women well. My lady procures such an ap-pointment, hires somebody else for the merest song to do the work and pockets the balance. It is a very clever scheme, but of course there is nothing really fraudulent about it, which is more than can be said of certain other Washington schemes. Scheming is in the air. Everybody pulls a wire or two, and nobody more than the private secretaries of the various senators. Some of them aren't really secretaries at all, but only newspaper men who assume the title in order to gain the privileges of the floor. The real secretaries are the wiliest of the wily, and if there's anything, in the world to be had by scheming, those same private can be said of certain other Washbe had by scheming, those same private secretaries are going to move heaven and earth to get it.

Next to the marvelous silver hair of Mr. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, the handsomest white head in congress belongs to Mr. Harries, of Minnesota. Hair and drooping moustache are of the same gleaming white. Mr. Harries has none of his family with him, but lives up near Mr. Castle, at the Stratford. Says Mr. Harries: "If the Democrats and Alliance men in Minnesota would only unite and fight together for Owen for governor, there would be a would only unite and fight together for Owen for governor, there would be a candidate sure to carry the state. Mr. Owen, I think, is sound on Democratic principles, and has these Alliance views merely as trimmings, as it were. He would make an invincible candidate and an admirable governor."
