

A LIBRARIAN'S PESTS.

Curious Questions Levelled at Public Library Assistants.

A Woman's Persistent Query for an Unknown Volume.

Fiction Does Not Take the Usual Standing in St. Paul.

Probably Because the Men Almost Equal the Women Readers.

"The public is a great body." So said that wise, weighty, sometimes witty Dr. Samuel Johnson. If it had to subsist on the platitudinous ponderosity of this learned man I don't wonder it revolted from it as an infant would from a paragonic dose of burdock.

Books are just what the public requires, but the world moves. It is one of the regrets of my childhood, one of the many that I lived in a town which had a regular circulating library of the Sir Anthony characterization. Mary J. Holmes, Mary Agnes Fleming and Fida have given me many a sleepless night, and I wondered how I escaped Zolaism and Daudetism. The teachers in some public schools require a list of the books the pupil has read during the term, and we may hope for a wiser and better government, fed on Mrs. Ward and Olive Shreiner.

Great Plymouth Clothing House Did the heaviest week's business on record. A GREAT GALAXY. Amateurs Who Will Figure in the Banjo Club Entertainment.

Equaling this in definiteness was the author who sought a poem. He didn't know the author, didn't know what collection it was to be found; indeed, he hardly remembered a fragment of the verse, but his heart was set upon getting that poem.

Colossal Stupidity. A library assistant does away a heap of things, and you may be sure she will ferret out what you want if you give her the slightest clue, but to calmly tell her you don't know what you want, and then say, "You ought to know," isn't the greatest compliment to your own condition.

Blaine Men Bolt. Officeholders and Office-seekers Nominated Harrison. One of the Blaine men who came out from Massachusetts to help nominate his favorite, made this statement to the Globe yesterday:

RECKLESS RUNNING Claimed to Be Responsible for John Jordan's Death.

Isn't on the women's side. A clergyman from one of the suburban districts asked for the mammoth repository, in which was contained all the things men had said about women.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard. Bank of Minnesota Building.

books as Lydia Languish read—"The Innocent Adulteress," "The Fatal Connection," "Mistakes of the Heart," "The Delicate Distress," "Times haven't improved much since the "Sentimental Journey" and "Tom Jones" were found on the dressing table of each fair dame.

Unqualified Ability and a Thorough Knowledge of Medicine Possessed by Drs. Copeland and Hunt.

Such was the remark made by Mr. Arthur Royles to a reporter for this paper in a recent interview. Continuing, that gentleman said:

"You may think that is rather strong language, but I know whereof I speak. I had been affected for more than eight years, and feeling to despair of ever getting rid of my trouble, which was caused by a slight cold contracted while in New York. I paid little of no attention to it, and really thought I was rid of it until one night while in bed I discovered that I could not breathe through my nose as freely as I thought I ought to. That was only the beginning of a very annoying and disagreeable disease.

"Well, to make a long story short as possible, my nose would stop up on one side, then on the other, and finally I could not breathe through my nose at all. Then my throat would become dry and parched like, and often I would wake up from sleep with a start, and find myself unable to breathe. It was no infrequent occurrence for me to raise my breakfast."

"But didn't you consult a physician?" queried the reporter.

"I did, and was treated by a prominent and leading physician in New York City, and instead of getting better I continued to grow worse. The disease seemed to be settling on my lungs, and by the advice of the physicians left New York and came to Minnesota."

"My head would ache at times until I thought it would drive me crazy; my appetite failed me also, and I felt miserable; it was actually a task for me to do anything. I felt so miserable, and I began to think life was not worth living."

"I am employed as townerman for the Kansas City road, and read in the Globe of Drs. Copeland and Hunt's remarkable cures, and consulted them. After a careful diagnosis of my case they told me my trouble was due to catarrh and that my case was curable. I placed myself under their treatment, and today, as you can readily see, I am hale and hearty. I sleep well, and have an excellent appetite; have no more catarrh, no buzzing noises in my ears, my nose does not stop up, and I feel like an entirely new man."

"You have no objections to my printing this interview in the papers, have you?" asked the writer.

"No, sir, for I consider that Dr. Hunt, the resident physician, and I, as a doctor, have a moral obligation, and thoroughly understand his business; besides that, his scientific mode of treating is such that the most timid person need have no fear. I consider Drs. Copeland and Hunt to be eminently successful in every case they undertake. I will gladly submit the above to any one who may call on me."

As before stated, Mr. Royles is now and has been in the employ of the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City railroad for the past six years. He is a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and his present position is an important position he now holds to the entire satisfaction of his employers.
