

PLYMOUTH CORNER CHAT.

Harbinger of the holidays. The woods are full of them now. No where in this neck of the woods do they blossom more beautifully than at the "Plymouth Corner."

The "Plymouth" windows are one of the sights of the city always, but particularly at this holiday season.

Perfect in all its details. There stands up any, appeared like a queen. That "lovely" opera cloak was made at the "Plymouth" annex.

All Around the Corner. The windows are well worth study. A wealth of holly brightens up everything, but there is no cheap "florery" effects to mar the symmetry.

Those Suits in the Window. Are simply a hint of the immense line of men's double-breasted garments with overcoats and suits.

A Wool-Lined Kid for 75 Cents. Nice and warm, neat and durable, sheep but all right, either gloves or mittens. No excess for cold hands with the "Plymouth Corner" so handy.

There's a customer catcher. The "Plymouth" has just received a new lot of Mocha gloves and mittens, wool-lined and chuck full of comfort.

DORMAN GETS BACK. And Wants Fisher to Pay for the Humiliation He Caused Him.

A Damage Suit for $25,000 for Malicious Prosecution.

Rushton M. Foran, of Minneapolis, is seeking to turn the tables on William H. Fisher and Frederick M. Catlin, by facing the dogs of law backward and setting them on the men he accuses of persecuting him.

up in the effort to secure a jury, with the selection of Charles H. Dunne, who was excused after dinner because he made known that he has religious scruples against capital punishment.

The examination of jurors on their voir dire continued. Challenges were admitted and jury was formed in many cases.

The story of the homicide and the connecting circumstances were outlined to the jury at the court house by Attorney Thomas D. O'Brien.

Charles Piske, a laborer, living at 553 Blair street, testified to knowing Hoppe, the man who lost his life, also to seeing the shooting.

Henry Pettekow was the next witness. He testified substantially to the facts brought out by the witness Piske.

It was his testimony that he, Hoppe and Piske went to go out to the lake. The witness did not fish, but the other two did.
