MRS. SMITH'S STORY.

The Alleged Murderess of Hoppe Appears on the Witness Stand.

She Recites the Tragic Details in a Cyclonic Sort of Way.

On Self-Defense Appears to Hinge the Hope of Her Able Attorney.

Hennig Also Makes His Appearance as a Witness in the Case.

The Hoppe murder trial is drawing to a close. The evidence is about ended, and the fate of Annie M. Smith, the murderess, will be left with the jury for decision today.

The defense was presented to the jury yesterday, including the statement of the juror Mr. Erwin and the testimony of the defendant, the colored woman, the statement of Hennig and other witnesses. The state began with rebuttal testimony last evening, and will call a couple more witnesses this morning to extend the testimony to refute the evidence of the defense as to good character. The state made out a strong case, and no effort is spared to refute all points of the defense, including that of self-defense.

The court room and galleries were thronged yesterday, and crowds gathered around the doors and windows in hopes of seeing or hearing somewhat of the interesting details. Parts of the proceedings yesterday were dramatic and exciting to even the case-hardened habitués of the criminal court.

The woman who is on trial for her life was moved to tears when Mr. Erwin was making his opening address to the jury, and again when telling of the homicide from the witness stand. Hennig, who is jointly indicted as accessory to the killing, was also moved to tears on the witness stand, but only for a moment.

That was when Mr. Erwin asked as to his wife, whom he learned but a few days ago died in the Rochester asylum, where she has been an inmate for many years. Hennig

Told the Full Truth about the shooting of Hoppe by the colored woman in a dramatic manner. The defense was eloquent and as entertaining as a panorama of a battlefield.

Mr. Erwin spoke of the powers and duties of the jury and the advantages it has over the single individual in detecting the truth or falsity of a charge and the testimony of the witnesses. He declared that there are few murders in this country when compared with homicides, and marked out the difference between the two, that a homicide had occurred, but denied that his client had committed murder, as charged in the indictment.

There was no mention of the part of the woman in shooting Hoppe. She found Hennig and Hoppe in a fight and fired the shot. Mrs. Smith was a housekeeper of Hennig and believed she was justified in defending herself and him. Mr. Erwin asked close attention to the testimony of the witnesses. He also outlined the defense in his masterly way.

Mrs. Smith was overrunning with her story, and it was not until the witness stand, she lifted the valve and poured out the sentences in a voluminous manner, notwithstanding the fact that she had brought her into a specific recital of the desired facts. The substantial part of her story are that she went to "keep house" for Hennig in West St. Paul ten years ago. He then had inflammatory rheumatism, and she nursed him with great care for a year. He had been the Bostonian in the Rochester asylum, had brought on the rheumatism by taking care of his wife, who had been an invalid and sent to the Rochester asylum. The witness of the witness stand, she lifted the valve and poured out the sentences in a voluminous manner, notwithstanding the fact that she had brought her into a specific recital of the desired facts.

A "SMELLING" PARTY.

Banker Brayton Ives, Jay Cooke Jr. and Party Land in St. Paul.

Engaged in a Search for a Solution of a Perplexing Problem.

Unprofitableness of the Northern Pacific Inspires the Present Move.

Anti-Villard is Alleged to Be the Sentiment of the Committee.

It is an interesting coincidence that just on the eve of the completion of a second great transcontinental railway line between St. Paul and the Pacific coast, and while the citizens of the Saintly City are planning for a celebration that would eclipse that given on the completion of the first one, a committee, made up of a number of the leading members of the nation, should arrive in this city in their search for the causes that have made the great Northern Pacific an unprofitable venture.

The arrival of the so-called Northern Pacific smelling committee yesterday was not made the cause of a general celebration, although the results of its work may do great good to the city and the Northwest by the changes it will recommend to the committee. The leading members of the committee are Brayton Ives, the president of the Western National Bank of New York city, and Jay Cooke Jr., son of the great financier who planned the Northern Pacific and had pushed it well along before his failure came twenty years ago.

From the Coast came General Manager W. S. Meilen, of this city. Nearly a month ago this committee started out from New York on its work. They went directly to the coast, and commenced with Tacoma and Seattle, and the various branch lines of that coast have been visited. It is no secret that these gentlemen represent those stockholders who are opposed to the continued rule of the present management. Their examination is taking a wide scope.

With the operating department they do not and have not concerned themselves. They are concerned with the operating department is concerned in the country. Messrs. Ives and Cooke are looking into the administration of the Northern Pacific, and are looking into the administration of the Northern Pacific, and are looking into the administration of the Northern Pacific.

Nothing for the Public. Neither Mr. Ives nor Mr. Cooke care to give the public any information regarding the trip and what has been done. They are looking into the administration of the Northern Pacific, and are looking into the administration of the Northern Pacific.

A Given Amount of Traffic. The construction of the new line will be a great benefit to the city and the Northwest by the changes it will recommend to the committee.
