The Winner of the American Derby Will Get a Fortune.

CHICAGO, April 18 .- The coming race meeting at Washington Park, which opens June 24, promises to eclipse anything of the kind ever held in the West. Secretary Brewster is daily besieged with applications for stable room and it is probable that not less than 1,000 horses will be on the ground when the flag falls in the first race. Interest naturally centers in the American Derby, which will be worth $50,000 to the winner this year. With all the declarations in over one hundred colts and fillies remain eligible to start. These include the cream of the Eastern and Western three-year-olds. The race will possess international importance, as Col. John T. North's filly Eitham Queen is in the country now training for the event, and will be a starter, barring accidents. The Duke of Beaufort's three, including Son of a Gun, a stake winner las year, will sail from England and come direct to Chicago. Secretary Brewster expects not less than thirty starters for the big stake. The local American Derby book of Ullman & Eckert has already taken in over $10,000. It is a $50,000 book. G. W. Johnson' has been backed for the limit of the book, and is now marked full. West. Secretary Brewster is daily been backed for the limit of the book, and is now marked full.

The Trainmen's Organizations will meet again tonight to receive the reports of the committee. Whether the strike will be ordered will depend upon the report of this committee. Judging from the meager information at hand it would appear that the strike will probably not take place tomorrow, but that ably not take place tomorrow, but that the difficulty is by no means settled. The trouble all arose over the pub-lication of a statement that the railroad presidents at their recent meeting in Chicago had entered into an agreement to annul all existing contracts with members of labor organizations and to not renew them. The men were also informed that the fight upon them was to be begun by the Santa En which would receive encour-Santa Fe, which would receive encouragement and aid it necessary from the other roads to bring the fight to a successful termination. Its first appearance was near the ankles. It rapidly extended over the lower extremities until my legs were nearly one raw sore; from legs the trouble extended across the hips, shoulders and the entire length of the arms, the legs and arms greatly swollen, with an itching, burning pain, without cessation. Although the best medical advice attainable was employed, no less than five physicians of the place being consulted and the prescriptions being the result of their combined wisdom, the disease, though apparently checked, would recur in a few days as bad as everiduring its progress my weight fell away about twenty-five pounds. As an experiment I began the use of CUTICHA, following the simple and plain instructions given with the REMEDIES, and in four weeks found myself well, with skin soft and natural in color, the itching and pain entirely relieved. itching and pain entirely relieved.

A THRILLING SCENE,

His Cabin.

The Many Very Wonderful Feats Accomplished by the Beast.

How It Once Allowed a Dog to Shake It Severely by the Neck.

The Nature of the Ferocious Animal Is Cowed by Its Master.

X. Biedler, a few weeks before he died, was sitting in one of the card rooms of the Silver Bow club, Butte City, Mont., talking about mountain lions. He said it was true you couldn't tame them. I said there was a man down in the Yellowstone country, near Livingston, who trapped a good deal in the mountains, and he had what he called a tame lion, says a writer in the New York Tribune. "How tame was it?" asked X., dubiously, and I had to admit that there was a question of degree in the case. The beast was about two and a half years old.

years oid.

The trapper, whose name was Skit, caught a mother lion and two cubs, and this creature was one of the cubs. He had killed the mother for her skin, and also because she wasn't an agreeable thing to have around. The other cub had died on his hands, and this one, just for the fun of the thing, he had undertaken to educate. When anybody dropped in to see him, Skit would bring out the lion and put her through a course of exercises. They were interesting enough, but they made you feel queer at times, and you found the rafter that ran across Skit's cabin decidedly the best place from which to view the performance.

cidedly the best place from which to view the performance.

Skit would bring the beast in from a dug-out, where he kept her chained. With the lion he would bring an enormous Siberian dog, between whom and the lion there appeared to be a sort of mutually fearful friendship. The dog was a magnificent creature, and as entirely myder Skit's control as if he were tirely under Skit's control as if he were a piece of machinery and Skit a master mechanic. In his hand Skit master mechanic. In his hand Skit would hold a whip with a long and startling cracker, and he would manipulate the whip during the performance, producing a constant succession of noises for all the world like the reports of a rifle. The lion growled constantly and seemed under an intense excitement. She was afraid of Skit, afraid of the whip, and to some extent afraid of the dog, but it seemed to me as I watched the show that she was also in a kind of trance.

Her eyes glowed with a steady flame, but without a particle of expression. It to me as I watched the show that she was also in a kind of trance.

Her eyes glowed with a steady flame, but without a particle of expression. It was her reckless walk, her dreadful growt that never ceased a moment, an occasional savage bark, a long, low moan, and now and then a wild, shrill outery, and, most of all, the motion of her tail that revealed her intensely fierce and malignant disposition. She stood about as high as a Newfoundland dog, and was about as long as a horse. She kept her tail, which was at least three feet long, extended in the shape of the letter S, stiffly out from her body, and the only motion she imparted to it was just at the tufted end.

This seemed to have a personality of its own, and it would move in short parabout the performance was in a constant quiver. Skit insisted that she was not dangerous, and that he had ner under perfect control, but within three mingulates. Every nerve in her body throughout the performance was in a constant quiver. Skit insisted that she was not dangerous, and that he had ner under perfect control, but within three mingulates and what hope I had resided in the sand what hope I had resided in the and what hope I had resided in the sand what hope I had resided in the sand what hope I had resided in the rest of the day.

But before he returned an imperative demand came from the gentleman in I 35 to hurry up, that he was tired waiting.

Mr. Hurlbut into another, and bell boys were dispatched in various directions to beg, borrow or steal a Bible.

One of them ran into Commissioner Wickersham's room and told him of the exigency. All he could find was a bound copy of St. John's Epistle. He gave it to the boy, and bade him fly. The boy rushed into the invalid's room. Here's the 'Pistle of St. John, sah, all we could find, but Mas' Eden, he's sent out for de whole Bible."

"Bible!" snouted the invalid; "what the head of warious directions to boy, and the head ner under books, making the figure of an hourgilation of the leave, and the head ner under books, makin

I had a good-sized gun in my pocket, and I kept it where I could use it at a second's notice.

But Skit did not seem in the least afraid. To be sure, he kept his eyes fixed directly on the beast's without accordingly.

"Sit down, Kitty!" yelled Skit, cracking the whip. Kitty sat down.
"Shake hands!" Kitty held out her paw and Skit took it and gave it a vigorous shake, which I wouldn't have done for all the gold in the Rocky mountains, for the beast was growling like a fiend. "Now, let's take a walk!" Skit held out his arm, she put her paw upon it, and walking on her hind legs, they moved together twice around the room. Then Skit sent her off into a corner and made her lie down, and told the dog and made her he down, and could the dog to go and shake her. Duke—that was the dog's name—bounded bitthely across the room, grabbed the snarling ilon by the back of the neck, and shook her vigorously for fully a minute. Once she gave a nasty little bark, and then I knew the end was coming—but it didn't. knew the end was coming—but it didn't.

Duke paid no attention to her, and gave up shaking only when his master called him off. Then he wagged his tail amiably, and sat down.

Skit brought the lion into the center of the room and made her stand still while Duke got upon her back. This process was attended with some difficulty, for the dog rolled off three times, and on each occasion she whisked her head around at him and made one of the most uncertily noises mortal ears. the most upearthly noises mortal ears bave ever heard. But at last he fixed himself firmly on her back, catching her about the neck with his teeth, and then Skit sent her trotting around the room. This part of the show was concluded by a series of springs, each clearing the entire space across the room. At last Duke fell and ran to his corner. Apparently he had had enough.

Then came the most wonderful thing of all. Skit produced from a corner a of all. Skit produced from a corner a huge chunk of bloody meat, at the sight of which she gave a series of terrific cries. He sent her to her corner and set he meat down in the center of the room he told her to come ou, and with one bound she was at it, but before she had quite touched the meat he gave a savage order. "Stop!" and cracked the whip loudly. She did stop, but with what tremendous excitement! Skit made her stand up. He called the dog and bade him take a piece of meat and put it on her nose. Duke did exactly as he was bid. He took the meat in his mouth, and as she held up her head he laid it directly on her nose. It stayed there a full minute, she growling wildly, Skit watching her intently and cracking his whip, and the dog sitting on his haunches, a picture of indiffer-

A THRILLING SCENE,

"Now take it away, Duke!" Skit cried. She knew what that meant, and barked again, but made no further resistance, as the dog took it and calmly proceeded to eat it. Then Skit bade him take a second piece and do the same thing. After it had remained for what seemed After it had remained for what seemed to me an age on her nose, just where it must have tantalized her horribly, Skit said the word "Now!" and in an infinitesimal; fraction of a second she had it in her mouth. At this point I begred Skit to call off the show. I had seen as much of a tame mountain lion as I was in a mood to see. He let her eat the remaining blees in quiet, and led her away when she had done to her dug-out cage.

> A BIBLE STORY. The Mistake of a Bell Boy Causes Commotion in a Hotel.

Chicago Inter Ocean. An earthquake or a fire could not have caused much greater commotion and excitement at the Great Northern than did the simple mistake of a bell boy. A gentleman has been ill for some days in what is called, in the technique of the house, "I 35." This means Room No. 35 on the I floor. He rang the bell for a boy yesterday morning, and told him that he was ill and to have a barber of the state of t sent to his room. The invalid thought the young negro messenger manifested more excitement than the simple re-quest called for, and he thought cor-rectly. The boy, instead of telephoning down stairs as usual, ran all the way down to the "captain" and shouted: "De man in 135 wants the Bible sent to his room."

his room."
"Wants what?"
"De Bible."

"Yes, that's what I said; what the preacher reads from."
The captain passed the word on to Clerk Raidt.

Clerk Raidt.

Mr. Raidt is accustomed to responding quickly to every demand that is made, but for once in his career as a hotel man he was nonplussed.

"A Bible!" he repeated, "man in I 35 wants a Bible! Miss—"he said to the cashier, "have you got a Bible?"

"At home," she replied.

In this hour of perturbation he forgot his politeness and shouted: "What good will that do a sick man at the Great Northern?"

He sent one boy to the barber shop.

He sent one boy to the barber shop, one to the bar room and one to the young lady typewriter. No one had a Bible.

but a Bible, and to his intense relief he saw Mr. Huributapproaching.

"Mr. Huribut," he said, "a gentleman upstairs wants a Bible."

"A what?"

"A Bible."

"Spell it."

"M B-i-b-l-e."

"Well, that's the best joke I've heard society was standing near and heard him. At 5 o'clock last evening a consignment of 500 small Bibles was sent to Huribut and Eden by the tract afraid. To be sure, and he made fixed directly on the beast's without ever once removing them, and he made that whip sound out at intervals of only a few seconds. The dog did his part in a perfectly frolicsome way, as if he a perfectly frolicsome way, as if he Bible chained somewhere in the room.

A Crane Chased by a Cyclone.

Sedalia Bazoo. Six miles south of Sedalia a singular cyclonic phenomenon was visible. A small cloud was noticed in the northwest, moving in a southeasterly direction, whirling and twisting like a writh ing serpent. Immediately in front of the cloud was a monster crane, which was being borne along by the force behind it and in apparent enjoyment of the situation until it encountered a tree and was killed, and the tree snapped in twain an instant later.

A Chicago man who had been appointed receiver went to a lawyer and asked: "Out of $20,000 passing through his hands, how much ought a receiver profit?"

"Well, about $19,000," was the reply.
"Only $19,000," he exclaimed; "who is to get the other thousand, I'd like to know?

Incessant Earthquake Shocks. ATHENS, April 18 .- Incessant earthquake shocks were felt at Zante through last night. The island shook continuously, and the panic-stricken people were in momentary dread of the ground opening and swallowing them. The condition of the sick and aged is piti-able. The weather, however, is pleasant, and much suffering is thus escaped. It is estimated that there are only 200 houses remaining that are fit to live in; many of the structures standing are in momentary danger of falling down.

Capt. Vankerchoven Dead. BRUSSELS, April 18 .- A dispatch to to the Independence Belge from the Congo reports that Capt. Vankerchoven, the famous military officer of the Congo Free State, is dead, his death having been caused by an accident. United States Court.
