BETWEEN TWO FIRES.

Foreign News Favored the Wheat Bull and the Domestic the Bear.

Before the Close the Near-By Influence Proved the Stronger.

Provisions Closed Somewhat Lower, the Effect of a Mild Raid.

Wall Street Market Extremely Weak During Most of the Session.

CHICAGO, May 13.—The wheat market has struggled with two opposing forces. The foreign market was bullish for a time, but temporarily, the financial disturbance at home had a decidedly bearish effect and pulled it down.

Extreme drought was reported in many large and important areas in England, and the quotations from there were higher and gave the color of truth to the usual reports. In this country there was no improvement noted in the wheat market, and Prime telegraphed that in some of the most important states it had retrograded during the week.

These conditions the market was strong and stable higher at the opening, and for a short time thereafter. But traders were not disposed to do much, as it was a half holiday, and outside business was lighter than for some days. There were some small failures in New York, and stocks began to break; a Milwaukee dispatch said that a run had been on the Plankinton bank there, and all this caused operators to lose confidence. There was a wild rush to get rid of long wheat, and it did not take long to effect a moderate demoralization and carry prices off.

There was a slight reaction, but the selling continued, and the market inclined to weakness. At the opening prices were advanced 1/2%, but later became weak and prices declined with some slight fluctuations. Prices afterward advanced for the September future, then declined slightly, and the closing was 1/2% lower for July and 1/2% lower for September than yesterday.

In corn there was more doing than yesterday. The feeling at the start was quite firm, but the opening and the sentiment prevailing at the close of yesterday's session, and the first trades were at about the same prices. Small receipts and a good cash demand, together with unfavorable news from abroad, were the strengthening factors. Market held steady for a while, and wheat began to break and then acted in sympathy, selling off 1/2%, the financial situation having a good deal to do with the earlier decline. Prices afterward rallied 1/2% at the close had lost but 1/2%.

There was a moderate trade in oats and an easier feeling. Opening prices were at about the top and closing at the bottom and showed a net loss of 1/2%. Weakness in wheat and a moderate unsettling influence were the chief cause for the decline.

The provision trade again suffered at the hands of the Cudahy-Wright-Fairbank combination. There was enough trading to start selling on steep losses. On the lead, prices advanced, and buying of lead by brokers acting for the combination, and there was a partial rally at the close.

Freights were slow and rates unchanged at 10 1/2% for wheat and 10 for corn to Buffalo. Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 100,000 bushels; corn, 200,000; oats, 200,000; hay, 20,000 tons.

Table with columns: WHEAT, CORN, OATS, RYE, BARLEY, HAY, etc. and rows for various grades and prices.

BATHS FOR SPARROWS

Made by a Peg-Legged Mariner in A Brand New Sidewalk.

New York Herald. The merriest man in New York is an old sailor who lives up in Harlem on a comfortable pension awarded him for the loss of one of his legs in the civil war.

His artificial limb is simply a strong iron plate with a leather shoe end and is just a bit long, so that when he puts it out to swing himself forward it goes down in earnest.

Like many other old seafaring gentlemen he likes a drink of grog now and then, and he is a bit of a dandy in his dress.

He kept it covered with straw and burlap for a week, but on the evening of the very day when it was deemed hard enough to bear the tread of the average pedestrian, and when the covering was removed the peg-legged mariner got to telling stories and had to make many tucks on the voyage home.
