ST. PAUL, MINN., TUESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 29, 1893.

NO. 241.

WON IN THE HOUSE.

Unconditional Repeal of the Sherman Law

BY THE VOTE OF 240 TO 110.

All of the Ratio Amendments Badly Beaten

BY ABOUT THE SAME MAJORITY.

MINNESOTA ON THE RIGHT SIDE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.-The leaders of the house attracted the usual amount of attention as they came upon the floor this morning. Mr. Reed came in at 11:20, his form towering above all his associates on the floor, and being particularly noticeable because of his suit of Kentucky tow and red four-in-hand scarf. Gen. Tracey and Mr. Bland were busily engaged in conferences with their lieutenants, preparing for the decisive count of votes. Lafe Pence, the enthusiastic Populist from Colorado, earnestly assured Amos Commings, of New York, that the end was not yet, despite the apparent defeat of the advocates of free coinage. Bourke did not appear until after the speaker's gavel fell, but Messrs. Harter, Rayner and Tom L. Johnson, anti-silverites, buzzed and beamed with anticipations of victory.
When the speaker commanded order at 12, nearly every seat in the hall was filled, an unmistakable evidence of the general and individual interest in the matter in hand. Chaplain Haddaway prayed briefly, and in a voice inaudible at a distance of more than ten feet from but Messrs. Harter, Rayner and Tom at a distance of more than ten feet from the desk, for an especial gift of wisdom and judgment to rightly settle the great order being defeated, it would be in order to propose an additional amendment, germane to the subject.

Speaker Crisp

the silver mines of the United States, but Mr. Bland objected to even having it read, saying that such a proposition was not free coinage at all.

The announcement of the vote upon the amendment to the Wilson bill, providing for the coinage of silver at the plause and some surprise at the majority against free coinage, it being nearly double the largest estimate made by the anti-silver committee. Mr. Bland, from a seat at the extreme left of the speaker, smiled grimly as he heard the result, nervously chewing and rocking to and fro on his pivot chair. The figures show that a majority of the Demonstrate of the property of the Demonstrate of the Demonstrate of the Property of the Demonstrate of t ures show that a majority of the Democrats voted against free coinage.

Mr. Bland asked a yea and nay vote on the question of free coinage at the ratio of 17 to 1, and secured it. As the clerk began calling the roll, Mr. Bryan walked down the center aisle, calm and They sat in consultation some time, and then Mr. Bryan, by easy stages, made his way back to his own seat. The vote on the question of free coinage at the ratio of 17 to 1 resulted: Yeas, 100; nays, 240. On this vote, besides the loss of Popu-

there were several negative votes from those who voted in favor of a ratio of 16 to 1. The slight gains made on the higher ratios were not expected by some of the leaders, and it was the published impression of these that the ratio of 20 to 1 would poll the largest vote in favor of free coinage. The result of the call was: Yeas, 119; nays, 222.

With the close of the roll call the clerk announced a single pair, specifying, with great particularity, the side on which each member would have voted if present. This is a common custom in the senate, but very unusual in the house, and indicated with what extreme care the pairing contract was made. It is very uncommon to find so few members paired, and the roll call revealed only eight absentees who had not provided to make their votes count in the total result. With the wave of applause and jubilation which swept over the hall as the crushing defeat of free coinage was announced, the whole house seeme to take a deep breath, and to lose interest in what was to follow in the next tew votes. These were on the various ratios, but every one knew that the ratio dog was not only dead, but buried ten days ago. The first of the ratio votes were taken amid such a buzzing as fairly drowned the voice of the clerk at times, and the few members who were keeping tally on the result had to appeal to the speaker repeatedly to preserve enough order to make hearing possible.

Only the "old stagers" on the silver side stood out for the 17 to 1 ratio. For the most part, that faction was not going to fool with any ratio if it could not get the one it wanted. Man after man who had voted "aye" on the first roll call voted "no" on the second, and indifferent to the result. When it came to the 18 to 1 amendment, the chorus of dissatisfaction which arose when Mr. Hatch (Dem., Mo.) insisted on his demand for the yeas and nays showed that the house was in no temper for childish delays. It was to be noted that Mr. Bland, to whom this whole business is deadly earnest, and not mere tomfoolery, did not join in the demand, but lay back in his seat, showing as much composure as he could command.

The vote on the second ratio amendment made a slightly better showing for the silver men, not because of any considerable increase in their vote, but by a falling off in the number of their adversaries. By the time the third vote was called Mr. Bland had recovered his wind enough to make the demand for the yeas and nays himself, although he did not stay in his seat long enough to see how things were going. The antisilver men also, who had united the efforts to prevent further roll call, concluded to let the thing go and put everybody on record on every phase of the question.

Mr. Shell, of South Carolina, in favor of free silver, was paired with Mr. Graham, Democrat, opposed to it. Not nearly as much interest was taken in the second vote, which was on the ratio of 17 to 1. The decisive vote on the 16 to 1 ratio seemed to dishearten the silver men, and in place of the attention which was paid to the first, was substituted a listlessness, which spread throughout the hall. The vote resulted in the defeat of the amendment by a vote of yeas 100, nays 240. The Populist members aid not vote. The members who voted for the 16 to 1 ratio, but against the 17 to 1 ratio.

A Sensational Divorce Sun at Winona.

WINONA, Minn., Aug. 28 .- A most sensational breach of promise suit has been instituted by Lily J. Clement, a livorced woman of Minneapolis, formerly of this city, against Seymour W. Brown, a wealthy attorney of Winona. The plaintiff alleges that by gifts and divers actions Brown alienated her affections from her former husband, George E. Clement, and on Dec 26. last, at Minneapolis promised to marry her. Her suit is for $25,000 damages. Brown's reply to the complaint is racy n the extreme. He admits that in 1884, when he was twenty vears old, an intimacy was formed between them, and continued until recently. He claims to have purchased her a house in Minneapolis and gave her the furniture in his own residence here. In 1892, before Mrs. Clement was divorced from her husband, the latter came to Brown's residence with an attorney, he claims, and forced him, in order to avoid arrest, to give Clement $900 in cash and a note for $7,500, receiving therefor a release signed by Clement that he would take legal action against him for improper intimacy with his wife. The latter induced Brown to settle in this way, he claims, promising that she would afterward secure and return the September general term of the district court in this city, and is causing a tre-mendous sensation on account of the wealth and high social standing of young Brown.

No effort was made to locate him, as It was expected he was near the city and would return should the grand unoccupied buildings corner Seventh. His flight to Germany will convince people that he is as much to blame, if not more so, than Koetting, the cashier, for wrecking the South Side bank.

been predicted by the weather bureau for several days, began early in the afternoon, and increased from then on until it reached the climax between 11 and 12 o'clock last night, having blown for eight hours in a terrinc hurricane. It began raining early in the morning, but only in gusts. After the first fall it ceased entirely for several hours, and did not begin again until after noon, Then The Work of Destruction began and lasted until the storm had spent its force at midnight. All the wharves along the river front and Ocean Stermship company and Savannah, BISMARCK, N. N., Aug. 28.-Twelve Florida & Western railway wharves were under water, and the tide was stillrising rapidly. A view of the city at daylight this morning revealed a scene of wreck and ruin that surpassed that of the great hurricane of 1881. The streets were impassable from the debris, fallen trees, twisted roofs, masses of brick, fences and broken limbs and branches of trees were piled across the sidewalks and in the square, and broken wires swinging in every direction. It is impossible at this hour to estimate the damage as the result of the storm, but was very general and it is safe to say that it will go up in WOODSTOCK, Minn., Aug. 28 .- Light if not quite all the property owners in frost last night. Corn crop is good; the city, have been damaged to some exnearly all out of danger of frost. Some tent, and some to the amount of thoutent, and some to the amount of thou-sands. The list of fatalities is gradually growing, and it is impossible to tell to what extent it will go. Several bodies of drowned people were picked up during the morning and searches are now being made for others who are missing. Every hour seems to bring some new story of a death as a result of the storm. The drowning of A. C. Ulmer, assistant cashier of the Central Railroad bank on Hutchinson's Island, was one of the most unfortunate fatalities of the storm. Mr. Ulmer owns a farm on the island, and had gone over to pay off his hands and attend to other duties. There were and attend to ther duties. Inside were bruises on his face, and it is supposed that he struck against an outshed when jumping from his barn as it was about to be blown down. Steward was bruised in the back, and Miller, his lairyman, has not been found, and it is presumed he was drowned. The
