REORGANIZED IN THIS COUNTRY UN-DER EGAN AND FORD.

AN ENGLISH OFFICER TALKS

Action of the British Lords in Re jecting the Home Rule Bill Given Renewed Life to the Great Secret Society-Ireland Ripe for Any Movement That Will Aid Her Cause.

LONDON, Oct. 4 .- The Pall Mall Gazette this atternoon publishes a long interview with an officer of the secret service who was employed by the British government since the Parnell movement. It is presumed that the officer referred to is Le Caron, whose name became well known on both sides of the Atlactic in connection with the Pigott disclosures and the famous suit against the London Times. In the interview referred to the man supposed to be Le Caron says that the Clan-Na-Gael is being reorganized in the United States under the leadership of Patrick Egan and Patrick Ford. This movement, he claims, is the result of the rejection by the house of lords of Continuing, the alleged officer of the secret service says that the chiefs of the Clan-na-Gael have been in a disorgan-ized condition, owing to the revelation of the Parnell investigation and the murder of Dr. Cronin in Chicago, but the officers now ciaim that the reorganization is quietly progressing.

The man believed to be Le Caron is also quoted as saying that it was partly through the absence from the United States of

MR. EGAN,
who was regarded by the Clan-Na-Gael people as a very strong man—a stronger man than the chief now at the head of that society—and who is looked upon being a perfect organizer, the Clan-Na-Gael has not n some decided action before He also claims that there was a silent compact with Mr. Gladstone to the effect that things should remain quiet until he had tried his hand at passing the home rule bill. Mr. Egan now being free, and home rule for the present defeated, the man interviewed is ent defeated, the man interviewed is quoted as saying that: "I am in constant correspondence with the United States, and have also conversed here this week with a man now in England who is a member of the society. He tells me that they declare that something must be done. For to be content with what has been done and with the idle promises of the Gladstonians, after the immense expenditure of money and iffe, with their best men in prison in England, would make the Irish in America the laughing stock of the world. This land, would make the Irish in America the laughing stock of the world. This would eventually be turned against them even in American politics."

The person interviewed then explains at length the split in the Irish party in 1888, when the Clan-Na-Gael supported Harrison, and showed how Mr. Egan was rewarded, continuing: "If Egan had been in a position to act at the last election Harrison would probably have election Harrison would probably have been elected, whereas the Cian-Na-Gael were disorganized, and Cleveland captured many Irish votes which were cast against him before.

"The action of the house of lords is certain to reunite the Clan-na-Gael, and no person will be admitted to their meetings except those who have the strongest credentials approved by one of their secret committees.

"They must adout a policy to catch the money of the Irish in America, and the money of the Irish in America, and the only policy that will do that is an active policy. The Irish are sick and tired of subscribing money for parliamentary movements the result of which always ends in an alliance with the Irish factions and the English politicians.

* "Although the sentiments of the best Americans are the same as in England with regard to dynamite the active." "They must adopt a policy to catch the with regard to dynamite, the active party will not fail to remember, to use the expression of Mr. Gladstone, 'Eng-land never gave Ireland anything voluntarily.' Mr. Gladstone used those words at an unfortunate time; the premier's words are treasured up. There will be a return to the old system of secret societies, with all the attendant sorrows. Ireland is peculiarly ripe for such a policy at the present moment. In some of the coun-ties the smouldering embers of the old societies are ready to burst into flames in others, notably in Clare, secret so-cieties are in full swing. The evicted tenants have been shamefully dealt with, both, by the Parnellites, and the anti-Parnellities and also by the present government; they will probably fly eagerly to the secret societies."

COLORED ODD FELLOWS.

A Delightful Entertainment for Benefit of Their Building Fund. Mars lodge, G. U. O. O. O. F., gave a fine entertainment last night at Central Odd Fellows' hall. The occasion was to celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of the order in America, as well as to give an opportunity of passing a pleasant evening. J. H. Dillingham presided over the ceremonies, and William Francis announced the numbers on the programme. The address of welcome was handsomely delivered by G. H. Woodson, of Montana. Frederick L. Mc-Ghee made an excellent speech that abounded with wit and humor. His subject was what to do with the $1,000 raised by the Odd Fellows during the past few weeks. He suggested that it would make a good start towards establishing a handsome lodge room for the colored Odd Fellows. Assemblyman W. R. Johnson gave the audience an entertaining talk on frater-nal benevolent societies. Charles mal benevolent societies. Charles Miller sang very entertainingly a solo entitled "Mollie and I and the Baby." Mrs. Marshail and Mrs. D'Leo sang "Till We Meet" excellently. B. Walker sang the solo "Dear Heart" in a most pleasing manner. R. T. Taylor recited a good selection. Mrs. Smith sang "The Broken Home:" Mrs. D'Leo and Charles Miller sang the duet "Master and Pupil;" Prof. J. W. Luca sang the bass solo "Good Bye" with a fullness of voice that is not weakened by his fifty-six years. All of the performers were roundly applauded. After the entertainment the money raised by the several members of Mars lodge was turned in, and the prizes, a gold watch, a badge and a clock were awarded to those who had hear the more pretriction. and a clock were awarded to those who had been the most potential in raising money. The company then devoted several hours to dancing and refresh-
