

VICTORY FOR REPEAL.

First Test Vote Finally Taken in the Senate.

MAJORITY OF ELEVEN VOTES

Recorded Against the Peffer Free-Coinage Amendment.

VOORHEES BILL SUBSTITUTED

For the Wilson Bill, Subject to Further Changes.

TELLER'S LAST WILL OF WOE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Senator Morrill, of Vermont, the oldest member of the senate, appeared in his seat this morning after an absence of two months and was warmly welcomed by his colleagues on both sides of the chamber. The consideration of the repeal bill was resumed, and Mr. Stewart (R., Nev.) took up the thread of his argument when he stopped last evening. When questioning Mr. Stewart as to his position, Mr. Carey (Rep., N. J.) said: "I say you are a silver monetarist."

"I say you are mistaken," replied Mr. Stewart hotly. "You don't know what bimetallicism is." [Laughter.]

At 12:30 Mr. Stewart yielded to his colleague, Mr. Jones. Mr. Jones said a lawyer arguing a case would not proceed with much enthusiasm if he believed a decision had been rendered and the seal put upon it by the clerk.

Mr. Teller contended that no cotton goods were exported from India until the cheapened price of silver stimulated exportation. The same was true as to wheat.

Mr. McPherson (Dem., N. J.) asserted the production in and the exportation from India of cotton and wheat to nature, there being nothing else that could be grown there.

Mr. Jones traced the competition of India in these two commodities to the demonetization of silver in 1873, which was done, not by nature, but by legislation.

Mr. McPherson (Dem., N. J.) asked Mr. Jones a long question, and when he sat down the latter said: "I don't believe there is a single senator on the floor who can understand the question."

Mr. McPherson started to restate his question, but, being appealed to by Mr. Voorhees, yielded to that gentleman. "I understand the senator from Nevada," said Mr. Voorhees, "desires to complete his remarks tomorrow. I regret he is not able to complete them now, but I shall not press him. I suggest in the economy of time that the senator from New Jersey might be returned now and when the former resumes the floor come to an understanding as to the question the senator from New Jersey has asked."

MARRIED THE COACHMAN.

DAUGHTER OF A NEW YORK DRY GOODS PRINCE

ELOPES WITH HER LOVER.

Pretty Mildred Hill Brings Sorrow to Her Deceased Mother—Leaders in Harlem Society—Jeans Rice, Daughter of a Quincy, Ill., Banker, Skips With $1,000 to Meet Her Lover

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Mildred Hill, the daughter of one of New York's prominent dry goods merchants, and one of the leading society men of Harlem, has been married to a coachman lover. The man in the case is Frederick Mansfield. He is a coachman in the employ of Charles F. Eaton, it is learned. A score or more of other persons sustained slight cuts and bruises, or were trampled on by the mob surrounding the burning buildings. Those seriously hurt were: J. J. Hellman, married, dropped from the third floor to the ground; hands and face terribly burned; his injuries are considered fatal. Martin Griffin, married, dangerously burned. Edward Speer, and Mrs. Speer, were also injured. William Cox, single, dangerously burned from face and body. William Smith, badly burned; may recover. These men are all rescued from the burning buildings in the fire. The fire broke out at 11:30 o'clock when a number of the Chautauque Lake Ice company's buildings were burning. The fire started in the building of the young lady's father, who is a banker of that city, desiring that she be quietly detained until he should arrive. She was his cashier in his mercantile establishment and absconded with $1,000. She was going to Denver to meet a friend. She returned to Quincy tonight accompanied by an officer. She is eighteen and quite pretty.

JENNIE GOES BACK.

An Illinois Banker Has His Pretty Daughter Arrested.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 27.—Miss Jennie Rice, of Quincy, Ill., was taken from Burlington train from the East this morning to Denver to meet a friend. She was the daughter of a banker of that city, desiring that she be quietly detained until he should arrive. She was his cashier in his mercantile establishment and absconded with $1,000. She was going to Denver to meet a friend. She returned to Quincy tonight accompanied by an officer. She is eighteen and quite pretty.

THE BIG FIGHT.

Purse of $20,000 Guaranteed for Corbett and Mitchell.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 27.—A reporter of the Gazette has just returned from Hot Springs, where he investigated the proposed offer for the Corbett-Mitchell fight. R. C. Chambers, the wealthy sporting man, stated that he would guarantee a purse of $20,000, and could deposit that amount in the bank to be paid to the winner of the contest. Chambers has written to Jack McAuliffe, his personal friend, to see the managers of the fighters, and if possible secure the fight for Hot Springs. It is understood that the authorities will not interfere with the fight unless the contestants attempt to desert. The two men have already given the last legislature repeated the law making prize fighting a felony, and instead made it a fine of $1,000 to $2,500 for engaging in a prize fight.

WANT THE FIGHT.

New Orleans Sports Anxious for the Encounter.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 27.—The prospect of the Olympic club securing the great international contest between Corbett and Mitchell already has caused a stir among the local sporting fraternity. Both of the prospective contestants have signified their willingness to come south. Corbett said that he would accept a purse of $10,000, and the only hitch in the proceedings. The Olympic club has more than the amount of surplus money, but cannot give the guarantee.

CORDAGE TRUST.

Long-Expected Report of Receivers Young and Loper.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 27.—Receivers Edward F. C. Young and G. W. Loper of the National Cordage trust, filed their long-expected report today with Chancellor McGill in Jersey City. The total assets are $12,901,699.98, of liabilities $12,699,448.68, which includes $1,039,229 of contingent liabilities for insurance, which eventually will be payable by the company. No estimates are made of the value of good will, trademarks and names and labels. The trust controls ownerships and leases of twenty-three cordage and twine works in the United States and long established and valuable trade connections and custom and the exclusive right to use the cordage trade in the United States. The names of former owners of the mills. The established trade and exclusive rights have great value. The trust was reorganized under receivers did not count upon that in the report. They have deducted from the actual value of the land, buildings and machinery a depreciation for a forced sale at a specified sale. The total amount of stock is $5,000,000 preferred and $8,000,000 common.

Think the Concord Safe.

PORT HURON, Mich., Oct. 27.—Vessel men here do not believe that the steamer City of Concord has met with disaster as reported today. On her trip to the north and her consort were heavily loaded with coal, consigned to Algonquin Mills, Ont. This was delivered, and both boats then proceeded to the Georgian bay for loads of cedar. There is no dock there, and the cedar would have to be loaded from the shore. It is slow work at best, and not easy of accomplishment in rough weather. It is believed that both boats will turn up all right.

Cleveland's Appointments.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Among the nominations sent by the president to the senate today were the following: Post masters—Duane E. Gear, Ellendale, N. D.; Hattie A. Lynch, Oakes, N. D.; William H. Todd, Spearfish, S. D.

Buffalo Bill Won.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—The match between William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) on horse back and Meyer on a bicycle was concluded today. Cody won easily by 124 kilometres to 120. His easy victory was due, it is said, to an uneven track for a bicycle.

PITTSBURG'S BIG BLAZE.

OVER HALF A MILLION DOLLARS OF PROPERTY DESTROYED.

EIGHT PERSONS INJURED.

Pittsburg Storage Company and Chautauque Ice Company Burn to the Ground—Tenement Houses Occupied by Twenty Families Crushed Beneath Falling Walls.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 27.—The explosion of a barrel of whisky in the big warehouse of the Chautauque Lake Ice company this afternoon caused the destruction of over half a million dollars worth of property and serious injury to eight persons. Several of the injured, it is feared, will die. A score or more of other persons sustained slight cuts and bruises, or were trampled on by the mob surrounding the burning buildings. Those seriously hurt were: J. J. Hellman, married, dropped from the third floor to the ground; hands and face terribly burned; his injuries are considered fatal. Martin Griffin, married, dangerously burned. Edward Speer, and Mrs. Speer, were also injured. William Cox, single, dangerously burned from face and body. William Smith, badly burned; may recover. These men are all rescued from the burning buildings in the fire. The fire broke out at 11:30 o'clock when a number of the Chautauque Lake Ice company's buildings were burning. The fire started in the building of the young lady's father, who is a banker of that city, desiring that she be quietly detained until he should arrive. She was his cashier in his mercantile establishment and absconded with $1,000. She was going to Denver to meet a friend. She returned to Quincy tonight accompanied by an officer. She is eighteen and quite pretty.

SWINDLED A WIDOW.

Why a Great Northern Claim Agent Is Under Arrest.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., Oct. 27.—Claim Agent L. B. Smith, of the Great Northern railway, was arrested here yesterday evening by Detective J. T. Young, of Kansas City, on the charge of embezzling $8,000 from a widow in that city three years ago when he was engaged in the real estate business. It turned out that Young had requisition papers from the governor of Missouri, but had not secured extradition papers from the governor of Montana, so the arrest was illegal. While Young was hunting a Montana officer to make the arrest Smith took a train for St. Paul. Young caught the next train, and the sheriff of the next county made the arrest. Smith was held at Fort Benton, forty-five miles down the line. Smith has borne a good reputation heretofore, and railroad officials are of the opinion that he will clear himself.

One Woman Sues Another.

RENVILLE, Minn., Oct. 27.—The suit of Lillie O'Connor, wife of John O'Connor, president of the Renville State bank, vs. Miss Christina Henning, daughter of one of the richest merchants in Renville, is attracting great interest. The prominence of the case, and the fact that a new interest is based upon a long life of active business, and his head is as level as a billiard table.

MOBBED AN EX-PRIEST.

An Anti-Catholic Lecturer Is Roughly Handled at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 27.—Ex-Priest Slattery tonight gave an anti-Catholic lecture to men only at Central Turner hall, on Fifth street, near Market. The place was crowded to suffocation, and several hundred were unable to gain admission. They remained in the hall until 11 o'clock, when a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many of whom were noisy and unruly, entered the hall. The crowd was very boisterous, and about 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of the lecture, Slattery, accompanied by his wife and two children, was mobbed in an ante-room, started for his hotel, on Chestnut street, near Sixth. The crowd followed him, and he was more boisterous every minute. Finally surrounding the couple, the crowd, almost with one voice, yelled "Kill him! Kill him!" Slattery fled in a panic, and shaking his disengaged fist at the crowd, hurried defiance in their teeth. A score of policemen in this moment charged the crowd but was unable to reach Slattery. Growing wilder every minute, the crowd repeated the yell of "kill him! Kill him!" etc. Reinforcements arrived from the police station, but they were unable to make their way to the side of the twin against whom the mob's cries were directed. Both say they were ordered to disperse. The officers finally succeeded in getting Slattery to the hotel. Just at the entrance to the hotel, a mob of about 100 men, many