

MINNEAPOLIS.

MINNEAPOLIS GLOBULES.

The eighth annual report of the associated charities, the substance of which has already appeared in these columns, has been put into pamphlet form.

Among the notable arrivals at the Nicollet yesterday were R. M. Stevens, the well known attorney and distinguished politician of Lisbon, N. D., and Editor Jewell, of the Bismarck Tribune.

Portland Avenue Church of Christ, Rev. W. J. Dhamon, pastor, Morning, "Christ Himself is Our Attraction." Evening, "The Lord is My Strength."

A meeting of the Liberal Union of Minnesota Women will be held at the Unitarian church, Eighth street and Harmon place, Tuesday, at 7 o'clock. The ladies attending will please bring their lunch. Tea and coffee will be provided by the church.

Court House City, A. O. F. of A., will give a social dance, at lady parlors, 55 South Fourth street, Monday evening. This is a drawing feature of this court. The social and dancing will occur every fourth Monday in each month, and has proven to be successful and enjoyable.

The programme for the second Danz symphony concert at Harmon street, this afternoon is even better calculated to give satisfaction to music lovers, as a whole, than the programme for the first concert two weeks ago, which elicited such hearty praise. The compositions are all tamer and not of too high an order for general understanding.

ON SATURDAY NIGHT

'Tis Their Delight and Pleasure, Don't You Know.

Another hold-up was reported to the police last night. George Crocker, who lives in the Mozart flats, corner of Hennepin avenue and Thirteenth street, informed the police that he was assaulted and robbed while walking along Eighth street, between Nicollet and Hennepin avenues. Mr. Crocker said that he had arrived opposite an alley on this block when a man approaching in the opposite direction seized his arms, while another man walked out of the alley with a gun in his hand, and said: "Give us all you've got."

McALLISTER RESOLUTION.

What Supt. Smith Has to Say on the Subject.

Mayor Eustis was not in the most amiable mood yesterday, and it is not wondered at, as his administration is being assailed from all over the deck, the unkindest cut of all being the dig made by the council Friday night in the passage of the McAllister resolution. When approached yesterday he did not care to discuss the resolution, simply saying that he had endeavored to conduct the affairs of his office in the best interests of the city.

IN RETURN TO THE RESOLUTION

Superintendent of Police Smith Said:

"I will say that there is no public gambling done in this city. What I mean is that such games as roulette, faro and like games are not played here or we would have raided the places and broken up the joints. There may be several rooms where poker games are being played and we do not know where they are, but that does not help us very much. Suppose that we should make a raid on one of these rooms. Before the police could break through one of the doors the chips would be out of the way and everybody would be engaged in a friendly game of whist. Whenever we can secure the evidence we need, we cut, and on that point the public may rest assured."

NO MORE COLD FEET.

Proposed Innovation on the Interurban Line.

A formal treaty of the Baker steam heater will be made on the interurban line tomorrow afternoon, a car having been equipped especially for this purpose.

The apparatus is the same as that used in the Pullman and other sleepers, and it has recently been adopted by the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Soo railroad companies. The latter road has given an order to have the heaters placed in all of its cars, and, as heretofore stated, the adoption of this process greatly lessens the danger in case of an accident, as there is no chance for the coaches to take fire, the heat being conducted through flexible steel pipes, and only hot water is used. The adoption of the service is of especial interest to residents of the Twin Cities and to the patrons of the interurban line, as the latter are well assured of not being compelled to suffer from cold feet.

A FORMAL INSPECTION

Of the New City Council Made by the Aldermen.

Yesterday afternoon the members of the city council paid a formal visit to the city hospital, it being the first official inspection of this admirable institution. A few days ago the Globe made a thorough inspection of the new hospital, and the institution was described in detail at this time. The inspection by the city fathers yesterday proved satisfactory, and they expressed themselves as delighted with the happy chance. As between the present factory and the new and tidy apartments and the former were infested and decayed barracks known as the city hospital, there can be no comparison.

AID FOR THE ORPHANS.

The Catholic Fair Is Over—A Big Success.

The Catholic fair for the benefit of the orphans closed last night, after a week's duration. Harmon hall was crowded all the afternoon and evening, and the receipts were the largest of the week. All the booths did a thriving business, the volume and guessing contests brought in a large revenue, and several more donations were received. The net profit will probably amount to at least $3,000.

T. M. Roberts' Supply House.

John Seese, of 2922 Dupont avenue north, a switchman in the employ of the Great Northern road, met with a serious accident yesterday. He was coupling cars in the Great Northern yard, when one of the cars struck him in the face, knocking out several teeth and causing his lip to bleed. Seese was taken to Asbury hospital.

FACIAL BLEMISHES.

The largest institution in the world for the treatment of facial blemishes, skin, scalp, hair, and eyes. Removal of spots, freckles, pimples, wrinkles, and all other facial blemishes. 23 years practical experience. Inveterate Woodbury's Facial Soap for sale everywhere, or sent by mail, 9 cents per box, or 25 cents for a box of 3.

EUSTIS JUMPS ON BRIGGS.

THE CHIEF CRUSADER HAULED BEFORE THE MAYOR.

BRIGGS ADMITS HE LIED

When He Said That Mayor Eustis Frequented a House of Ill-Fame—Claimed a Saloon-keeper Told Him So, But When Confronted by the Saloon Man the Crusader Weakens.

Crusader Briggs has got himself into a hole at last. If he is not insane, as some believe, he will probably leave town. Mayor Eustis is after him, and after him with vengeance. Briggs has been circulating a story to the effect that Mayor Eustis and three or four other prominent citizens are in the habit of frequenting an "aristocratic" house of ill-fame, and are otherwise interested in maintaining the establishment. The mayor heard of this night before last, and today Mr. Briggs heard from the mayor. His honor summoned Briggs down to the city hall at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and raked him fore and aft. It was a lively session that ever took place in the mayor's office. When it was over, Briggs sneaked out like a whipped cur. He admitted that he had frequented the house of ill-fame, and that he had lied to the mayor, and failed utterly to justify a single statement. When he left, the mayor warned Briggs that he would hold him answerable at law for the base slander he had circulated.

It seems that a well-known minister, who is a true friend to Mayor Eustis, informed his honor Friday evening that Briggs had come to him and made the statements above related. The mayor decided upon his course of action at once, and the result of that action materialized yesterday afternoon.

Shortly after 3 p. m. Crusader Briggs walked into the mayor's office. With him was the minister to whom Briggs had made the statements in question. Chief of Police Smith, Secretary Mannix and the newspaper men were there, too. Briggs sat in a chair at the side of the mayor's desk, but did not squarely face his honor. Mayor Eustis broke the ice. Addressing the minister, his honor asked him to repeat what Briggs had told him. The minister did so, and added that Briggs claimed to have received his information from a saloon-keeper.

"Now, Mr. Briggs," said the mayor, "what is the name of the saloonkeeper who told you that I frequented a house of ill-fame?" "I don't know," replied Briggs, "but I believe it is a private matter. I don't care to speak publicly."

"Pardon me," replied the mayor; "this is a public matter. You have assailed the moral character of the mayor of this city, and he wants to know where you obtained your information. What is the name of the saloonkeeper?"

Again the chief crusader twisted about, and fussed with his fingers, as he said: "I refuse to speak in public. I will talk to you and Mr. Mannix (the minister). Then Briggs pointed at Secretary Mannix, and exclaimed in loud tones:

"There is a man I have heard stories about, too, and I could—"

"Stop there, Mr. Briggs," interrupted the mayor. "Mr. Mannix is not going to let it be I. I am running this city. Now I ask you again to tell me the name of the saloonkeeper who gave you this information."

But Briggs stubbornly refused to talk until the room had been cleared of everybody save the mayor, the minister and himself.

Briggs also admitted that he had repeated the story to three or four ministers in a similar manner, but he lutefully refused to divulge their names.

The three remained together for fifteen minutes, but finally he said:

"It was 'Tooze' Rogers, the proprietor of the Mint saloon on Washington avenue north."

Mayor Eustis touched the electric bell at his desk, and his secretary appeared.

"Send for Mr. Rogers, of the Mint saloon," was the mayor's order. Mr. Mannix disappeared as a messenger at once. In less than ten minutes Mr. Rogers appeared. He entered the office and took a seat at the side of the mayor. Intense silence reigned for a moment.

"Now, Mr. Briggs," said the mayor, "do you repeat what you have just told me?"

Briggs, who was growing more and more nervous, made no response.

"What did you tell us just before Mr. Rogers came in?" persisted the mayor. Briggs caught in the arm of his chair and said in faltering tones: "I can't remember the exact words I used."

"Perhaps Mr. — can," suggested the mayor to the minister. The minister thought he could repeat the substance of what Briggs had said, and he did so.

"Mr. Briggs has just told us," said the minister, "that 'Tooze' Rogers, the proprietor of the Mint saloon, informed him that Mayor Eustis frequented a certain house of ill-fame in this city."

"Did you ever say that to Mr. Briggs?" asked the mayor.

"No, sir; never in my life," answered Rogers emphatically, and as he spoke he looked squarely and indignantly at Briggs.

"Did you ever have any conversation with Briggs about me a month ago, in which the social evil was mentioned in any way alluded to?" pursued the mayor.

"No, sir; I did not," was Mr. Rogers' quick reply. Then fixing his eyes on the now thoroughly abashed Briggs, he continued:

"I want to know what you mean by telling any such stories about me? Briggs remained silent.

Then the mayor took Briggs in hand, and made him wish he could sink through the floor.

"What have you to say to this, Mr. Briggs?" asked the mayor.

The crusader's hands trembled as he fumbled them together, and his voice shook as he stammered: "I am not prepared to answer."

"Why—er—er—I may have misunderstood Mr. Rogers."

The mayor clinched matters at this point with the following question: "Mr. Rogers denies that he told you what you say he did. Now, do you dispute him?"

Briggs was cornered. The mayor and Rogers were both looking him in the face as he answered in a sheepish tone: "No; I don't dispute him."

moral well being of the city at heart. Now, we find you going about assailing the moral character of its chief executive and other respectable citizens, and, in a still worse, deserving manner, stirring the ears of the ministers who are supporting you."

Here Briggs manifested a little spirit, and, shaking his forefinger tremulously, he exclaimed:

"I am not working for the ministers. I am only one of the law and order league."

"Yes, but you are its head and front, and you, you are the sort of man these ministers have commended by a resolution adopted at one of their meetings."

"Now, after a moment's pause, the mayor very curtly remarked: "We will excuse you, Mr. Briggs."

But Briggs seemed rooted to the chair. He wanted to say something, and finally managed to blurt out a lame apology to Saloonkeeper Rogers for his assault upon him. Rogers laughed in his face.

"I said we would excuse you, Mr. Briggs," repeated the mayor, "and what I want you to do is to get away from me."

Briggs then managed to rise from his seat, and, as he retreated from the room, he said "Good-bye." No one answered his avowal, and the Crusader sneaked out.

For Briggs had gone the mayor expressed his opinion of him in seething language, which every one present—and there were several—heartily indorsed. Saloonkeeper Rogers said that Briggs was undoubtedly crazy. He also related a conversation he had had with Briggs, in which Briggs had said that he should lose his present job he would just as soon work in a saloon as not.

He asked the steps he proposed to take against Briggs, the mayor said that he would determine later. It should be mentioned that the mayor emphatically held him answerable at law for the threshold of a house of ill-fame.

BROOKS IS INDORSED.

Many Prominent Attorneys Destroy His Appointment.

It was erroneously reported that the delegation of Minneapolis attorneys who called upon Gov. Nelson last Friday urged the appointment of F. C. Brooks to the district court bench, to succeed Hon. Thomas Canty, met with discouragement. On the contrary, the governor was pre-eminently fair in receiving the delegation, treated them most courteously and manifested a desire to ascertain the wishes of the people of the Fourth judicial district in order that he might make an appointment satisfactory to them. The petition of F. C. Brooks presented to the governor had the endorsement of nearly 300 attorneys in the district.

It was reported that in active practice among whom were the following: Hon. John M. Shaw, ex-judge of the district court; Hon. John P. Res, ex-judge of the district court; ex-Governor Austin; ex-Probate Judge, and ex-judge of the municipal court; Hon. G. S. Smith, ex-judge of the Illinois appellate court; Hon. L. R. Larson, ex-judge of the municipal court; Hon. E. A. Clark, Wis.; County Attorney Frank J. Smith; Assistant County Attorney James A. Peterson; second assistant county attorney Lewis J. Van Kossen; Hon. J. M. Peterson; David F. Simpson, Assistant City Attorney L. A. Dunn; Albert E. Clark, vice president and counsel of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway company; Albert H. Bright, general solicitor, Soo line; W. E. Dodge, attorney of the Great Northern Railway company; and all existing mechanics' liens and unpaid taxes.

FOUL PLAY FEARED.

ROYALTON, Minn., Nov. 25.—Adna Clark, a laborer, has been missing since Friday, Nov. 10. He told his wife one morning that he was going out in the country a few miles, and would be back in the evening. He did not return, and has not been seen or heard of since. The woman has six children, in poor circumstances, and is being cared for by the town authorities. His wife fears foul play.

WHISPERING IN SCHOOL.

Considered at the Meeting of the Teachers' Association.

The regular meeting of the Hennepin County Teachers' association was held yesterday afternoon at Caton's college, the most important matter for consideration being the discussion of free text books.

In the principal paper read it was held that it is not wise for the state to furnish the books, for the reason that to furnish the books for each scholar of a public school, when the state purchased them, was only $1, and that the estimates of the previous speaker were wrong, inasmuch as there were only 250,000 scholars in all of the schools of the state. Several other speakers took the same stand.

The question of permitting whispering in the public schools was next considered. Prof. H. S. Hill, of St. Paul, believed that it was impossible to suppress whispering entirely, but that it should be controlled. Plenty of work should be given to the children to prevent them from whispering, and they should be seated in such a manner that other scholars will not whisper to them.

A REMINDER OF MENAGE.

Arguments in the Guaranty Loan Company Case.

Judges Russell and Jamison were engaged yesterday in hearing the first of the cases touching on the liability of the directors of the Guaranty Loan company to the creditors of the concern.

Through its attorneys the First National Bank of Merrill, Wis., brought action against S. H. Harper, the Northern Guaranty Loan Company, and C. H. Pettit, Loren Fletcher, W. D. Washburn, Thomas Lowry, G. A. Pillsbury and H. E. Edin, as directors, to recover on a note of $3,426.50 due from that corporation, on the ground of negligence of management of the affairs of the company by the directors.

It may be recalled that a similar action was recently brought by the National Bank of New Haven, Conn., against the sum of $15,000. In presenting the matter yesterday, the attorneys for defendants held that any liability existing must be enforced by a receiver, and that suits brought individually were not tenable. The arguments were partially finished and continued for two weeks.

SAFELY ACROSS THE POND.

Detectives Hoy and Lawrence Arrive in England.

Inspectors Hoy and Lawrence arrived in England yesterday. As they are Chief of Police Smith received a cablegram from the detectives announcing their arrival and asking him to notify their families of the fact.

Chief Smith said that all probability the detectives would remain in London for a few days before starting for home with Scheig and Floyd.

FLETCHER'S FEES FIXED.

Judges Hicks and Pond have handed down a decision in the matter of the claim of Assistance George Fletcher of the State bank, for his fees. The court holds that, inasmuch as Fletcher was indebted to the bank at the time of the assignment, whatever is allowed him shall be credited upon the indebtedness of his firm. The total sum allowed is $1,288.06, of which $143.90 is for the services of the assignee's attorney, J. F. McGee, and $898.42 for Mr. Fletcher's rest for expenses. The balance of $3,643.14 will be turned over to Receiver W. J. S. Keller.

John. The court criticized Mr. Fletcher for retaining this money so long, but exonerated him from the charge of malfeasance.

IN FAVOR OF JUDGE MAHONEY.

The contest over the impending vacancy on the district bench is assuming lively proportions, and it is difficult to say who will be the winner.

Yesterday a delegation waited upon Gov. Nelson, consisting of Ald. Jennings, B. F. Nelson, John Swift, George Partridge and others, in the interest of Judge Mahoney. A strong plea was made in his behalf, and his friends entertain high hopes for his appointment.

ACCEPTED THE CALL.

Rev. Lewis H. Keller, of Edgerton, Wis., has accepted a call to the Lyndon Congregational church. Mr. Keller has recently preached before the congregation and he made a most favorable impression.

The church has recently raised a portable furnace, and it bids fair to show its indebtedness, and it bids fair to show it entirely out of debt.

A CRANK ARRESTED.

Silver Maniac Who Threatened to Kill Cleveland and Carlisle.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 25.—Charles F. Blackburn, a mining expert, was arrested last night for sending threatening letters and postal cards through the mails. Blackburn is a crank on silver and religion. For the past three years he has been writing abusive and threatening letters to preachers, editors, politicians and private citizens who disagreed with him on public or social questions. Over one hundred postal cards were written to editors of the Post-Intelligencer, most of them threatening terrible death if the course of the paper on the silver question was not altered. He also wrote letters to President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle, threatening to kill them if they favored the silver cause. He will kill the president of the United States, John G. Carlisle and the editor of the Post-Intelligencer. Blackburn, when arrested, denied writing the letters and said he meant what they contained.

A STRANGE DEMURRER.

Editor Hoskins Says Banks Are Unconstitutional.

FEBRUARY FALLS, Minn., Nov. 25.—Editor Hoskins demurred this morning to the indictments for libeling the February Falls banks. He claims that the national banking act is unconstitutional in that it is a trust and against public policy, that it was conceived by foreigners, that it is not a part of the constitution, and that it cannot be libeled. The court adjourned without considering the demurrers, which will be taken up when the county attorney returns.

WOOLLEY OUT OF REST ISLAND.

SPECIAL TO THE GLOBE. RED WING, Nov. 25.—The papers transferring the Rest Island property from John G. Woolley and his wife, Mary Woolley, to Miss Etta Thompson, of Minneapolis, have now been filed here. They bear date of Nov. 1. The consideration in deeds is $6,000, and Miss Thompson assumes the payment of a $3,000 mortgage to Levi Woodard, and all existing mechanics' liens and unpaid taxes.

THE RETIRING GENERAL MANAGER OF THE GREAT NORTHERN HAS BEEN A RAILROAD OFFICIAL TWENTY-FIVE YEARS—NEW BAGGAGE REGULATIONS—WESTERN CLASSIFICATION COMMITTEE MEETS IN ST. PAUL. The voluntary resignation of A. L. Mohler from the office of general manager of the Great Northern is not unexpected. From time to time there have been published rumors regarding him, and, as he said the other day, "sometimes the newspapers are right." It is a fact that Mr. Mohler was offered a still higher official position with the company, but he declined the honor. Of course, it required nerve to do this, but Mr. Mohler had the courage to stand for the proffered crown, though he will go to North Carolina and remain for several months. Although a man comparatively young, he is a veteran railroader, having served for a quarter of a century, and that necessarily, and when he returns he will be fresh for fifteen or twenty years more. It is indefinite with him yet as to what line he will engage in. He leaves the road in good condition, a magnificent property, and one bound to flourish. Two things—work and gentleness have been turned into a ditch and carried to the river, preventing further damage to stacked grain and hay on the low land near by.
