MR. WILLIS' INSTRUCTIONS

Are Forwarded to Him in a Lan guage That Can Only Be Read by State Department Officials— The Government May Take Possession of Wires if It Desires Them.

Special to the Globe WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 .- Whenever a steamer from Hawaii has come to San Francisco since the famous report of Secretary Gresham on the Hawaiian situation was made public, the anstate department clerks or the navy department clerks were busy translating secret messages from Minister Willis. In fact, Mr. Landis, the private secretary to the secretary of state, tells me Mr. Willis has been using plain English in his messages to the department. They have come over in charge of the purser of each vessel, and have been put on the wire at Postmaster General Wanamaker (for possible. If they had come by the ci-ble duty) was in a continual controversy pher used by the state department, or by the navy department cipher, it would have taken the clerks two or three hours paid for government business. The to translate them. The messages of the government take precedence of all other business on the wires; but long before the translators would have finished their work, the newspaper messages would SINGING OVER THE WIRE. carrying the brief statement of the condition of affairs in Hawaii; and the

to secure to the government the use of the same for postal and military pur-This act provides that mesposes." sages between the departments of the government and their officers shall have priority over all other business. At the time of the death of President Garfield the government took possession of the telegraph lines at Elberon, and the correspondent of one of the press associa-tions scored a notable "beat" by slipping past the officer who had taken charge of the office, muffling the sounder of a telegraph instrument and send ing a bulletin announcing the president's death. It reached the country ahead of the news from any other correspondent, for, though they pleaded nouncement has gone forth that the to their papers, the special correspondfor the opportunity to send even a word ents were denied the right to send a message of any kind. It is not often that the government has occasion to take COMPLETE POSSESSION of a telegraph wire; but if it has the occasion, it has the authority. Under the same act the government fixes its own tolls for telegraph messages, and the postmaster general has this agreeawith the telegraph companies over the low rates which he insisted should be rates which he named have been increased a little by his successor, but the government does not pay anything like the commercial rate for telegraphing. And the method of computing the government business is different from that used in handling commercial or press business. The compensation is based on the number of niles between the capital of the state or territory from which the message is sent and the capital of the state or territory where it is received. The government pays a small rate for telegraph business, but it does not pay a small amount. When the negotiations for the purchase of Alaska were under way the state department sent a MESSAGE BY CABLE which cost about $28,000. The exact amount is a state secret. This was probably the most expensive telegraph nessage ever sent. It is not likely to e duplicated; for the rates on telegraph isiness are much lower than they were at that time.

for secrecy's sake. There would be too much temptation for the telegraph operators or clerks to sell the informacommunications; and though telegraph companies employ men in whose honesty they have every confidence, there are many thousands of operators and other employes, and some of them might prove purchasable. The telegrams to Muscat, in Arabia, go by a peculiar foute. They are sent either to Gwadur, in Beloochistan, where they are posted—and in that case "Post Gwadur' is sent as a part of the address; or they are sent by special best from less." tion which is contained in diplomatic perators and other employes, and some of them might prove purchasable. The epresentative of a foreign government t Washington would not hesitate for a pay for a copy of a private elegram to the state department if he ould get it. In fact, the state department had to change its cable code some ears ago, because the secretary of state elieved that a member of the diplomatic corps to it, and was using it to obtain inside information about department business. "All's fair in diplomacy," is the watchword of the foreign ministers at the great capitals of the world.

The state department code is made up of combinations of figures. They can be varied indefinitely. Otherwise, if a pretty good guess as to its contents. Not only is the code susceptible of remarkable variations, but the department, in making the messages public, changes their sequence so as to disguise as much as possible the meaning even for today of certain combinations of figures. The foreign legations at Washington use cable codes which are combinations of figures and the telegraph operators thereures, and the telegraph operators, therefore, are not often bothered with messages in foreign tongues. The legation messages go from the main office of the telegraph companies, but the state department has a SPECIAL TELEGRAPH OPERATOR whose wire runs into the department building, and Mr. Willis' messages have come to Secretary Gresham's office direct from San Francisco, with per-haps one relay midway of the continent. The way that the state department code is varied is very simple. Minister Willis, when he left Washington, may have carried with him verbal or written instructions that in using code he was to go forward four figures or backwards seven, or the secretary of state may have sent him instructions to make this or some other change in the arrange-ment of the figure combination. Or the first message sent to him may have been preceded by a cipher, which, translated, meant "go forward eight figures before translating.

The remainder of the message would then be translated according to this in-struction. The necessity for taking so many precautions in handling the tele graph business of the department is shown by the fact that some of the first MESSAGES FROM HAWAII leaked out (presumably through the employes of the department), and Secretary Gresham thought it advisable afterward to put all the department employes under oath. If the projected Pacific cable was only in existence, the news from Hawaii would be much more quickly obtainable, but the state department would be under enormous expartment would be under enormous expense for cable tolls. The Pacific cable has been planned and the route for it has been surveyed from Monterey bay to Honolulu. But it is not at all likely that the cable will be laid unless private capital takes hold of the enterprise. The government has no control over tolls when a message leaves our own shores; and, though the cable companies in many instances make special rates for government business, the rates are very high. If the state department wanted to send a message to Queensland, for example, it would have to pay $2.59 for each word, $773,007,998. The public funds amountif the message went by the Eastern route; or $3.34 if the message went by Northern Siberia. If it went by

THE EASTEN ROUTE The state department uses a cable ode, not for the sake of economy, but or secrecy's sake. There would be too via Lisbon and Morocco through the Mediterranean sea, under the Arabian sea to Bombay and across Hindostan to Calcutta, around the Bay of Bengal to they are sent by special boat from Jask, in Persia; and the charge for this boat is $13.71, which is in addition to the regular charge for the transmission of the message. The rate to Jask is $1.16 per word from Washington. You can send messages to Bunder Abbas also by way of Jask, and the charge for boat to Bunder Abbas is $7.84. The charge for a boat to take a telegram to Bassidor or Lingah from Jask is $11.76. The rate word from Havana—$2.68 from Washington. The rate to Rio de Janeiro, treasury notes issued in the purchase where the state and navy departments of silver bullion and a decrease of $80, are now sending messages at short in-tervals. is $1.50 if the message goes by way of Galveston; if it should go by Kingston, the rate would be $3.31 a word; if by Colon, the rate would be $5,10 a word, The navy department uses the cable almost as much as the state department, and it has

A SPECIAL CODE for communicating with its officers. The navy department code is used frequently by the diplomatic representa-tives of the United States. In fact, all of Minister Blount's messages came through to the department in the navy department code. This is considered much more perfect than the code of the state department. There are very few of the state department codes in existence. Only three of the department officers have access to them. And only ministers at very important posts are entrusted with them. If it is necessary to send a secret message to a lesser diplomatic light, it is sent in the code to the nearest capital, and then for to the nearest capital, and then forwarded by messenger. Every United States minister who has received a copy of the code has given a receipt for it. He has to turn it in to the state department or deliver it to his successor when his term of office expires. It is one of the most important assets of his office.

Treasurer Jordan Discusses It Intelligently. WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 26.-United States Treasurer D. N. Morgan has submitted to Secretary Carlisle his annual report on the operations and condition of the treasury. It shows that the net ordinary revenues for the fiscal year 1893 were $385,819,628, an increase of $30,881,844 over those of the year before. The net ordinary expenditures were $383,447,554, an increase of $33,454,623. There was therefore, a decrease of $7,772,779 in the surplus revenues, reducing them to $2,341,674. Including the public debts, the total receipts were $732,-871,214, and the total expenditures ed on June 30, 1892, to $786,351,895, and on June 30, 1893, to $746,538,655. After setting apart the sums of gold, silver and United States notes which were held for the redemption of certificates of deposit and treasury notes there was left a reserve, or general fund of $187,-012,740 in 1892, and $168,167,391 in 1893. These amounts, however, included certain sums of certificates of deposit, bonds and coupons, which were unavailable for any other purpose than the settlement of the treasurer's account, and which, if canceled, would ing balance of $165,945,886, and $156,-295,696 on the two dates respectively. By Sept. 30 this balance had been diminished to $149,250,268, owing to a deficiency in the revenues. In seven months, beginning with last December upwards of $81,000,000 was drawn out of the treasury in redemption of notes, and the gold reserve was reduced during the same period by $29,000,000. During the next three months, with light redemptions and a deficiency of $10,000,-000 in the revenue, the treasury lost $15,000,000 of gold, but the reserve fell only $2,000,000.
