DEMOCRATIC CLUB MEETINGS.

Polish Democrats Organizing—Sixth Ward Democrats Still Struggling for Four Primary Places—Second Ward Club Indorses P. H. Kelly, But Will Support the Nominees.

The political meeting at Labor hall tonight promises to be very interesting. The Socialists, the Populists and the Labor organizations will fight it out on the proposition to name a full ticket for the city election, or whether only a few names shall be agreed upon to be supported by the triumvirate.

Some of the prominent Union Labor people who strongly favored nominating a full ticket have been pulled off. It happens that James Morrow, M. E. Murray and J. C. Krieger, as well as a number of other leading lights in labor circles, wanted office and wanted it badly enough to set up a plan to nominate a full ticket with the expectation of having it indorsed by the Republican party.

Harry Wright was taken into the scheme, as it was supposed he knew enough about politics to pull the strings effectually. Numerous conferences were held from time to time with the Socialists and the Populists with a view of securing the support to further the plan. The Populists did not take hold as was expected. Then it was found that Mayor Wright could not secure the indorsement of the combination, and Morrow and Murray vacillated in their policy.

At times said that it would probably be well to only name a partial ticket. It was generally conceded that Morrow could get an indorsement if he wanted it, but for personal reasons a large following of the labor people declared that Murray must come off the bench.

Another bomb was thrown into the camp when it was proposed to nominate Col. J. Ham Davidson for mayor. This proposition was made by a member of the conference committee who said that with the nomination of the colonel by the triumvirate he could secure the Republican nomination. This idea was not the plan of Morrow and Franklin, who had been in close consultation with Mayor Wright. Others did not object to the scheme, but adhered to their original position that only a partial ticket should be nominated.

The plan of putting a full ticket in the field had gotten under such headway, however, that it was found that it would be hard to call the trustees off Morrow was assured that he would be given the full support of the combination and he has championed his plans, and now favors the plan of putting a full ticket in the field.

Others have been promised indorsements, and still others have been consulted with pieces of offices in case the Republican party wins.

The meeting tonight gives promise of being a long one, and while it is connected with some names will be indorsed on the Republican ticket, yet a fight will be made to prevent the going further. Those who want to secure places on the regular ticket fear that to nominate a full ticket will buy them on election day, and for that reason will use their influence to stop the convention without going the whole length of the ticket.

POLANDERS IN LINE. They Indorse Alderman and Assembly Candidates.

Over 100 Polish Democrats, residents of the Eighth ward, assembled in the hall at the corner of Gaultier and Thomas streets, last night, and indorsed a candidate for alderman and one for the assembly. Although this meeting was the second the club has held, yet the program already well past the century and a half mark, and active measures are being taken by its president, Joseph Matz, to get naturalization papers for the Poles in the ward who are entitled to them. A report upon the minor details of election work was made by the chairman of the executive committee and accepted by the members, after which John A. Wolf was enthusiastically indorsed as the club's candidate for alderman. Had Mr. Wolf been present he would have been expected to respond to the calls for a speech which followed his nomination.

With customary enterprise the Dispatch of last evening announced that yesterday's meeting had been postponed for one week, and several members took the opportunity offered to toast the Republican organ for its misrepresentation.

J. J. Ryan, in answer to prolonged applause, took the platform and commenced by thanking the police force, which he said, could not tell Jesse James from a country preacher. He also censured the detectives, and cited the instance of the $5,000 appropriation for the unemployed men but a few months before $10,000 was expended in hiring Chicago men to build up a lot of useless affairs.

Upon motion the name of J. J. Ryan was unanimously chosen as the club's choice for assemblyman. The A. P. A. were styled as non-American and as opposed to the United States constitution by Joseph Matz. The main drift of his arguments, however, was that the Poles must stick together, vote the straight Democratic ticket and not forget to put their names down for Mr. Ryan if he gets the nomination. Mayor Wright was jumping for joy, saying that $1 was enough for the day laborer working on the streets, while he sends in a bill of $84 for three days' services rendered on the board of equalization.

The club will next meet one week from last night at the same place.

KICK IN THE SIXTH. Committee to Urge City Committee to Give Four Primary Meetings.

The Sixth Ward Plats Democratic club held a well-attended meeting last night at its hall on South Robert and Fillmore streets.

William Casey, secretary of the club, having left the city for good, the club elected C. J. Mellicke to fill the vacancy. C. B. Shanley reported the action of the city central committee, declining the request of the voters of the Sixth ward for four primary voting places, and also that A. York had stated that he would run against James Melady for the assembly.

Numerous speeches followed this report, all remonstrating against this action. There were plenty of men, they said, who would cheerfully volunteer their services to see that the people had an opportunity for a free and full expression of their wishes in relation to the men they desired for the administration of public affairs. A motion carried unanimously, that the chair appoint a committee of ten who shall cooperate with a like committee from other clubs, and visit the city committee again to insist that four primary places be instituted. The following gentlemen were named as this committee: A. L. Phillips, Matt Vance, C. J. Mellicke, H. J. Shanley, William Casey, George O'Brien, Judge McArthur, P. U. Garrett, J. C. Davis and Robert Hare.

Addresses were made by P. J. Garrity of the Eighth ward; E. J. Harbaugh of the Ninth, and several others.

ROUSING MEETING. Ninth Ward Democrats Rein-dorse Smith and Murphy. The German-American Democrats

PLUNGED TO HIS DEATH.

UNKNOWN MAN JUMPS FROM THE WABASH STREET BRIDGE.

DEED WAS SEEN BY SEVERAL.

The Suicide Described as Middle-aged, Medium Build, With Side Whiskers and Chin Smooth-shaved, Wearing Grey Ulster and Silk Hat—He Was Intoxicated—Startling Scene.

At 8 o'clock last evening a well-dressed, middle-aged man, whose identity has not been learned, climbed over the railing on the east side of the Wabasha bridge, about fifty feet side of Raspberry island, and took a header into the river below.

A number of pedestrians who were on the bridge within a short distance of the spot where the fatal leap was taken witnessed the act, but the man's movements were so methodical and sudden that before they recovered their astonishment and presence of mind he was the plunge. Patrolman Galvin, who was standing at the corner of Second street and Bridge square, heard the cries of those who witnessed the affair, and, running to the scene, saw the body as it came and immediately stopping the rafter from the bridge. There was no cry for help from the drowning man, and a moment later the body disappeared.

O. M. Fullington, who lives at 80 South Wabasha street, was crossing the bridge to the West side and accompanied by a lady. He saw the man climb the rail and a moment later jump from the bridge. The distance from where he was to the spot was about sixty feet, and he quickly went to the spot and could give no definite description of the man except that he wore an ulster and a silk hat.

Charles Harris, who boards on South Wabasha street, and was coming from the West side, saw the man climb the rail and then disappear, and immediately afterward heard a splash in the water below.

John H. Garlough, a resident of the West side, met the man near the West Side bridge and noticed him from the fact that he appeared to be intoxicated. The man was walking toward the bridge, and Garlough for a short distance walked behind him. He at first thought it was a person he was acquainted with, and accompanied him. As he reached and passed the man Garlough saw he was mistaken, so said nothing.

Garlough describes the man as middle-aged, medium build with side whiskers and a smooth-shaven chin. He wore a grey ulster and silk hat, and walked as though he was bow-legged, although this last mentioned peculiarity might have been caused by intoxication.

KENYON'S REPORT. Finances of the City Considered and Checked Up.

State Examiner Kenyon has made an annual examination of the offices of City Treasurer Miller and Comptroller McCarty, and yesterday submitted to Gov. Nelson his report.

The books of the treasurer's office were checked and the cash balances on Feb. 28 found to be verified by the comptroller's books and the banks. The books were found to comply with the charter requirements and daily reports made to the comptroller. A check of the two offices making a check on their work.

Incident to the treasurer's office the books of the water department and the municipal court were balanced. The water department had a balance of $9,968.91 on hand March 1, including $4,311 received from the city the same day, and generally has a balance of about $5,000. The payments from the municipal court corresponded with the records of the receipts.

The present bonded debt of the city amounts to $5,335,900, a decrease of $46,500 since the first of the year.

In conclusion the examiner says that the business methods of the accounting officers have been much improved by the provisions of the Bell charter in the safeguards placed around the public funds.

TYPOS CHOOSE OFFICERS. The Union Printers Hold Their Annual Election.

St. Paul Typographical Union No. 30 held its annual election of officers yesterday at its regular hall. The point was very light, the opposition for the various offices not being up to the usual standard of keenness. The voting resulted as follows:
