

ENDED ALL WITH POISON.

SOUTH DAKOTAN ATTEMPTS A WHOLESALE KILLING.

HOOTS SEVERAL PEOPLE

And Beats His Wife Insensible

With a Stone—None of Those Shot Are Seriously Hurt—His Wife's Condition Critical—Poison Himself—Serious Charge Against a Winona Man.

ASHTON, S. D., June 2.—William Shepard, a farmer living fifteen miles northeast, attempted the life of his wife, Mary Shepard, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Stevenson, and a man named John Sebrose, Shepard's wife left him a week ago and went to live with her father and mother, who were residing on the Sebrose farm, a mile southeast of Mellette. Last night about 9 o'clock Shepard made his appearance, and stepping into the house commenced firing, first at Sebrose, who escaped and ran for help; turning on the Stevensons he shot them twice through the shoulder, and Mrs. Stevenson through the arm. By this time his revolver was empty; he stopped to reload, but his wife succeeded in snatching it from him. At this he picked up a stone, and, turning on her, beat her over the head until she was apparently lifeless. Turning to Mrs. Stevenson he said: "Mary is dead; I will leave you alive to take care of the children." By this time help from the town was approaching and he fled. He was found dead about a mile from the house, having taken poison. The others are alive, but his wife's condition is critical.

SHORT MANY THOUSANDS.

Winona Church Member Goes Wrong.

WINONA, Minn., June 2.—The news of the extensive defalcations of George J. Walker, made public today, comes like a thunderbolt from the ears of his many friends. For the past thirteen years he has been head bookkeeper for the R. D. Co. company, and up to a week ago enjoyed the entire confidence of that firm.

About that time the suspicions of W. J. London, business manager, were aroused, and a close watch on Mr. Walker developed that he was appropriating money to his own use from the cash sales. It is charged that during the past ten years Walker has in this manner appropriated close on to $15,000. The exact figures are not yet known.

As he is of good moral habits most of this money has been deposited in a bank or other place, and invested by Walker. He built a handsome residence, and holds stock in the Fidelity Building, Loan and Savings association, of which he is a director.

Walker is a married man, forty-five years old, and one daughter. His wife is the daughter of Banker Gardner, of Rushford. He has been an active worker and clerk of the First Congregational church for a number of years past. When confronted with the proofs, Walker admitted the guilt and turned over his cash, certificates and property to the value of $10,000 or more. It is probable that there will be no prosecution.

FISHER'S IRE UP.

He Gets Out Warrants for Sensational Arrests.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., June 2.—Dr. A. M. Fisher, who was released a few days ago on $200 bonds after having spent a year in jail and having been twice for manslaughter in the second degree, is after the people who got him into the trouble and who then let him to rustle for himself. The doctor was charged with causing the death of Miss Minnie Olson, of Canton, by an abortion. He has had Berger Olson, the father of Miss Olson, swear out a warrant for the arrest on a charge of manslaughter in the second degree of the author of Miss Olson's condition, so two other men, one of them one of the most prominent politicians and merchants in the eastern part of the state, Dr. Fisher claims that he can produce evidence which will surely convict them and show that he was only employed to look after the girl after she had been operated on by another physician. He claimed that these parties should never have allowed him to remain in jail a minute, as they caused him all the trouble, and he left the country according to their request and against their wishes. If he cannot convict them any other way, Dr. Fisher says he is willing to go to the penitentiary at the same time.

DEATH IN A WELL.

Two Young Minnesotans Meet a Horrible Fate.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., June 2.—Two young Germans, brothers named Donath, living three miles east of Paysonville, met a horrible death yesterday. They were digging a well. One brother, who was digging a well, fell into the well at the bottom, forty-five feet down. The other was on the surface. The man below was boring for the purpose of learning how much deeper they would have to dig for water. It is thought he struck natural gas, as he suddenly fainted. The brother hurried for assistance and was lowered into the well. When almost thirty feet down he also fainted. Those above started to pull him out, but the rope broke and he fell to the bottom. Both men were rescued by aid of ice tongs, but were dead.

LOUCK WAS JEALOUS.

Severe in His Talk About His Wife.

SPECIAL TO THE GLOBE. ADRIAN, Minn., June 2.—Excitement over the murder of Ferdinand Louck is still at fever heat in this county. The jury returned its verdict Monday, but it is believed that they can find no other verdict than that Louck came to an untimely death at the hands of John Mohling. At the inquest last night Dr. C. C. May made a statement of the result of his examination, and is of the opinion that the injury on the head must have been caused by violence of sufficient severity to cause death, and the position of the body and the surrounding circumstances lead him to believe that the injury was done before the body was placed in the position where found. The coroner's jury will meet again Monday morning to complete the investigation and render a verdict. Louck's wife is now at Salem, S. D., where she is working in a hotel and living under the name of Miss Nettie Rouse. The murdered man was married in Germany less than a year ago, and parted from his wife before he came to this country. Louck claimed that other men were attentive to the woman and was very jealous of her.

The defendants claim the men were hired while living in the United States.

Made an Assignment.

M. Broom, of Minneapolis, of the assets of his business. The assignment is for the benefit of all creditors. Mr. Hart has borne an enviable reputation as an upright, square-dealing merchant, and his assignment is regretted by all. The credit system has involved many of the best country merchants of the Northwest.

MRS. HEDBERG TESTIFIES.

SHE CONTRADICTS THE STORY OF CAPT. CHAPIN.

BLAIR BEGINS HIS ARGUMENT.

Chapin Testified That He Did Not Know the Contents of the Letter to Capt. Hedberg.

Mrs. Hedberg Testified That Chapin Told Her He Had Read the Letter.

The last witness in the Maney court martial was placed on the stand yesterday morning in the person of Mrs. Hedberg, and so far as the court is concerned the whole story of the tragedy has been laid before it. Arguments by counsel were well under way when the court adjourned for the day and will be concluded at Monday's session. Then the doors will be closed to press and public.

There was no appearance of the little brush which occurred between counsel on Friday's session. The knowledge that Mrs. Hedberg would testify during the day called out a large attendance of spectators, and many ladies were noticed among them. All listened with marked attention, not only to the testimony of the witness, but also followed closely the able argument of Mr. Blair, as he summed up the case for his client. The members of the court martial displayed the greatest earnestness in following the learned counsel, who consumed nearly the entire day without finishing his case.

There was nothing of a sensational character in the testimony of Mrs. Hedberg. She simply related the circumstance of having received the letter written by the accused to her husband. She had known of the difficulty on the 21st of October and did not wish to deliver the letter for the sake of both gentlemen. Witness had only seen Lieut. Maney for about five minutes after that, and she had no recollection of having discussed the matter of its withdrawal at that time. Capt. Hedberg had sustained a fracture of the left wrist a short time previous, and while on duty, which was very light, was nursing it and applying liniment daily.

In reply to a question by the court, Mrs. Hedberg said that an hour after the letter had been delivered at her house Capt. Chapin had informed her that its contents were grossly disrespectful and insulting. He said it was threatening and ugly letter, which frightened her. Capt. Chapin did not repeat its contents, but gave her to understand that he knew them. Witness had no recollection of the accused expressing to her a desire to see the letter, and she stated that it might have been mentioned. This evidence contradicted the statement of Capt. Chapin that he did not know the contents of the letter. Attorney Blair intimated to the court that, if the evidence introduced at Chicago was substantially the same as that given here, he would refer to it in his argument.

BLAIR SPEAKS. Mr. Blair said he desired to congratulate the court on the approach of the close of this trial, which was one of the most important in the history of the military service. If it seemed a long one to this court, it was certainly long for the defendant, who has been under a constant strain since the 16th day of April. No man can face a more serious proposition than one which involves his life. Through such an ordeal the accused has passed, and a jury of his peers had pronounced him guilty.

"The trial in Chicago was one of the most bitter ever known. The prosecution infused a degree of animosity into the case never equalled, and the cause of which I was never able to fathom. It may have been the attitude of the press, not only of Chicago, but the Associated as well, which made warfare upon this defendant and accused him of being a red-handed murderer and cold-blooded assassin. You gentlemen of the court, however, know the result. The evidence introduced at Chicago was substantially the same as that given here. I refer to the newspaper attacks because it was said in various papers that justice was not yet satisfied although the defendant was acquitted, and for that reason this court martial was convened to see that he would receive his just deserts. They also said that what saved him in Chicago would not avail him before this court. One paper even printed an alleged interview with the secretary of war in which the gentleman was represented as saying that the verdict of the jury at Chicago was a travesty on justice, and that he had ordered this court martial in order to see this man punished.

Counsel then entered into an able and lengthy discussion of the law of self-defense, and cited many important cases and decisions. The Terry-Field case and a number of decisions from the Texas court of appeals were read to the court and listened to with great attention. It was for the members of the court martial to say whether an officer of the army would for the paltry sum of $10 suburban testimony. Counsel maintained that in this case it was the duty of the defendant not only to resist the deceased, but even to advance in the performance of his duty. And if in so doing he had met his death, he would have died in performing his sworn duty, while wearing the country's uniform, than which there is no nobler death.

Speaking of the challenge directed against Capt. Hedberg while a member of a court martial, counsel said that it was natural that any officer having any pride in his regiment would give the advice as given by the accused, and he considered it good advice. Incidents like that would be quickly taken note of by the outside world. It was natural for a man like Capt. Hedberg to brood over the matter, and convince himself that the secretary of war was right in Justice Brewer will sit in place of Judge Thayer, who is disqualified in the case of The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company against The Forest Park & Central Railroad Company et al.

of the two men were faced. There is no evidence to show that there was a conspiracy to drive him from the service; rather, it was advice to see him secure a company for the remainder of his life, before it was impossible for him to do so. Maney's indignation must have been aroused at the unjust accusation, and justly so. All the trivial incidents following the meeting under the lawn simply seemed to aggravate the matter in the mind of the deceased.

The distorted mind of Capt. Hedberg, the man whom he considered his friend appeared as his enemy, and he supposed him a party to a conspiracy to remove him from the service. And thus, having seen the man arrested, the defendant here writes the letter. Maxwell strikes us as a man of rather singular ideas and not a student of human nature. He could certainly not invent such a story as the one told about his meeting with Hedberg, at which the threats were made to take Maney's life. The entire story, said counsel, followed itself in logical manner. The killing of Capt. Hedberg was either cowardly assassination or justifiable homicide. The defendant did not ask for resolution, which was immediately and unanimously adopted by a standing vote.

If Maney intended murder, why did he lower his pistol and fire at the man? The slight discrepancy in the testimony of the eye-witnesses did only tend to strengthen the truth, showing that they meant to tell the truth and nothing more. The hour of closing the court having arrived, Mr. Blair also followed closely the able argument of Mr. Blair, as he summed up the case for his client. The members of the court martial displayed the greatest earnestness in following the learned counsel, who consumed nearly the entire day without finishing his case.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS A Well Known Printer Will Enter a New Business Career. After twenty years of faithful service in the line of his chosen profession, Albert Schweizer, the head and front of the manufacturing department of Die Volkszeitung, is about to enter a new business career, with as bright and promising a future before him as any young man could wish for. After all these long years of patient toil, strict attention to business and complete success in every undertaking for himself, as well as for those in whose employ he was, he is about to reap the reward of labor well performed. Tomorrow morning he will enter the employ of William Hamm, one of St. Paul's brightest and most promising young business men, and one who has been in the same pioneer days with Al, and grew up with the early struggles of St. Paul. Mr. Schweizer has been tendered the position of general representative of the Hamm Brewing company for the entire city. It was an unexpected appointment, but the flattering inducements and brilliant offers for the future that were held out by Mr. Hamm, who is at present finishing constructing one of the finest breweries in the country, were too much for Al, and he decided to cast his lot with the friend of his boyhood days, and share in the prosperity he so generously extends to him.

While Albert Schweizer is still a young man, a brief sketch of his early career will prove interesting both to his old friends and the new ones he will make in his present undertaking. He entered the printing business as a carrier in 1878, when he carried the then tri-weekly Staats Zeitung, published by Theo. Sander, and edited by Albert Wolff. In 1874 he entered the same office as apprentice, or rather "printer's devil," and in 1877, when the Staats Zeitung and Volksblatt were consolidated into the Volkszeitung, and the latter paper was published as a morning daily, he was promoted to assistant foreman. Not taking kindly to night work, and being anxious to enter the printing business in all its various branches, he went to Milwaukee in 1878 with the intention of acquiring a full knowledge of the job printing business. Not being able to get a sit in a job office at once, he worked on various newspapers over a year, but finally got a position in one of the largest publishing houses of the latter city, where he was employed for a number of years, and accepted the position of superintendent of the manufacturing department of the Volkszeitung, which position he held until the present time.

He represented Typographia No. 18 of St. Paul at the national convention in Chicago in 1883, and belonged to the Typotheta, whose membership is composed of employing printers, and took an active interest in the affairs of this body in April of this year he prepared and read a practical paper, by request, before the Typotheta at its Commercial meeting, held at the Grand Hotel, one of the leading trade journals of the country. He was also a member of the conference committee of employing printers of the city of Minneapolis, and presided over their deliberations. He is also acting president of the Ramsey County Typographers, and one of its most active members.
