HAVE A HOT TIME OF IT.

REV. GJERTSEN TELLS REV. MINNE THAT HE LIES. ONE CALLS AUGSBURG ROTTEN. Chairman of Norwegian Lutheran Convention Makes an Effort to Have the Heated Factions Down. Committee Appointed to Confer With Augsburg Faction—A Bad Tango to Unravel.

Not until the strains of song began to pour out of the interior of the Auditorium yesterday morning did the large crowd of delegates and their friends think of taking themselves into the building for business purposes. The religious services were conducted by Rev. C. I. Moon, of Dawson, Minn., who read from viii. The services lasted fully twenty minutes.

Rev. J. N. Kildahl, of Chicago, submitted a report on the much-talked-of document of the "minority," which was read by Prof. Suldrup last week. On the basis of this report the meeting passed a series of resolutions, the main points of which are as follows: The United church cannot confer with any body elected by the "minority" at its meeting Nov. 21 to 23 at Minneapolis, because that meeting did not have a quorum.

The United church cannot recognize the trustees of Augsburg seminary in regard to the union, because the union is already perfected. The United church declares the refusal to transfer the seminary property to be unjust. The United church cannot recognize the trustees of the union as a representative of the old conference. The assertion of the "minority" to the effect that the union is not perfected is false. The fact of this assertion has been established by the courts, which have given the publishing house to the United church. The board of trustees of Augsburg seminary is fully able to give the United church "full control" of the property.

Prof. Theodore Mohr was afraid this resolution might involve legal proceedings, to which he strenuously objected. "Let us rather be cheated than have a law suit," he said. E. Holland brought a solemn warning from the veteran Wisconsin state prison warden, Mr. T. J. Brown, who is now in jail, not to resort to the courts, but rather solve the property. Rev. Kildahl explained that point seven had nothing to do with law suits; it simply proposed the legal and practical ways of obtaining property and the property in dispute. Rev. O. Hoel would rather let the minority keep their "barracks" than take them by proceedings at law. Seth Halvorsen, of Decorah, Ia., characterized the action of the board as a "treasonable" act. The property in the name of Jesus," were his words, and he wanted to deter future generations from a similar course by denouncing the action of the board. The eighth point was that the board of trustees of the United church shall confer with the Augsburg board of control, and the board of trustees of the United church shall confer with the Augsburg board of control, and the board of trustees of the United church shall confer with the Augsburg board of control.

Rev. G. Hohn knew there were "great things" in store for him, and he was willing to yield the one to the other. He, therefore, suggested that some other meeting be called to discuss the matters before the boards. Rev. C. Brown was sick of "negotiation," and thought Jan. 1, 1895, might as well be the day for the Augsburg board to meet. The Augsburg board was prepared for a threefold condemnation of the scriptural basis of the union, and that of eternity. E. Holland followed up the suggestion made by Rev. Hohn and proposed that seven members be organized to visit the churches and his motion was carried after a sharp contest in which Rev. I. M. Dahl said the buildings of Augsburg were in a state of ruin, and that eight months over 2,000 Swedes were converted.

Strand finally inspired the Norwegian church people of America not to try to inveigle him into their own internal contentions and squabbles.

A FATHER'S ADVICE. Thomas, my boy, the old man said, As he brushed away a tear: Your mother and I both love you, And wish you well, my dear. But we have decided, Tom, That in business you must start, So take a few words of counsel: First, don't think yourself too smart, But give the rest of men on earth Full credit for being wise. Consider yourself a beginner, Tom, When you sell a man an article, No matter how great or small, Be sure you give the genuine, Tom, Don't sell imitation.

When a man asks for Tobacco, Remember this, my boy, That Mail Pouch will bring him joy, And as a smoke will bring him joy.

MISSIONARY TALK. Tolls of the Great Work Among the Santhals. The audience that greeted Lars O. Skrefsrud, "the apostle of the Santhals," when he mounted the platform of the Auditorium last night, by all odds was the largest one assembled at that place during the annual meeting of the United church.

Skrefsrud was not introduced, but stepped to the front of the platform and addressed the audience on the subject, "The Santhal Mission." He gave the impression of almost boundless mental and physical force, and his rich voice penetrated to the remotest corner of the Auditorium. He first read a brief history of the Santhals and their mythological traditions, which are highly interesting. The Santhals belong to the Kawsars, a large tribe inhabiting Hindostan in common with the Dravids long before the Hindus invaded the country, some 2,000 years ago. The Santhals are a race of the most common and destructive vice, the habit of sacrificing, not only animals, but even men and women, and Skrefsrud said he had seen them do this more than once. They were in possession of one good trait: They were truthful.

When Skrefsrud and Borgers arrived at Santhalistan they had $50. The situation looked so hopeless that they felt that God would grant them one miracle, if they beseeched God. "Ebenzer," the language of Santhal is a refined and difficult one, the verbs having no less than twenty-three tenses. For the first time in the world, the Santhals have been correctly introduced into any European language.

The first work of the missionaries was to study the language and the customs, as well as the civilization of the people in general. Their next point was to study the Christian religion with the scraps of truth in the Santhals. Sixteen months after the arrival of the missionaries three persons were converted and three converts were alienated and outwaded by their people. But they did not retail their religion, but sought to all kinds of abuses and to give the people the chief resolved to burn the missionaries when a few more had been converted. All announced escape were closed; but just one day before this plan was to have been executed, the British government arrested the chief on the charge of a rape on the lives of the missionaries were saved. Upon his return a year later his health was so broken that he could not visit him, and promised to cure him if he was permitted to pray for the dying chief. The request was granted, and the chief, who was thoroughly exhausted, and the chief recovered.

This marked a great turning point in the history of the Santhal mission. The chief was converted and remained a stone wall among the Christians until he died about three months ago. A terrible famine gave the Christian converts an opportunity to help those who were starving, and the famine made a profound impression upon the population, and promoted the cause of Christianity to a marked degree. The Santhals were kept in poverty by Hindu money brokers. Skrefsrud explained this to the vicery of Bengal, and laws were enacted to prevent such abuse. This measure made Skrefsrud so popular that he was made chief of the Santhals, which position he still holds.

Skrefsrud also proved himself a practical man by establishing a colony in the country of Bengal for the superfluous population of Santhalistan. The colonists on their own account have organized their churches among their heathen neighbors. Two years ago the work of a native present, Skrefsrud, resulted in a remarkable revival movement, and in the course of eight months over 2,000 Santhals were converted.

Skrefsrud finally inspired the Norwegian church people of America not to try to inveigle him into their own internal contentions and squabbles.

INTERCESSORS NAMED. The following gentlemen were elected to intercede between the two boards who are to have the transfer of Augsburg seminary: Rev. G. Hoyme, Prof. M. O. Beckman, Rev. L. Lund, Rev. M. Sauer, Rev. L. Christian, Rev. J. S. Jensen, and J. E. Larson.

The board of directors for the institutions of learning was instructed to request the board of trustees of the United church.
