Worn Out in Harness. In the harness of every-day business work men and women wear out prema-turely. For some of us it is not easy; for others, again, it is impossible to get out of harness. It is the inflexible yoke, the strongly forged, unbreakable shackle of imperative servitude needful to ourselves and those most dear to us. into the grave before our time, but it is undoubtedly true that there is a means of rendering the burthen less onerous, and of mitigating the ailments that unremitting toil—especially of a sedentary kind—has a tendency to produce. Overworked clerks in counting houses, mill operatives, bookkeepers, typewriters and others testify to the reviving, restorative effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and its power of renewing physical and mental energy when overtasked and on the wane. Dyspepsia failing vigor, rheumatic, bowel and kidney complaints yield to this benefi-cent medicine, which is a preventive of malaria and counteracts the effects of exposure in inclement weather.

At a general meeting of the St. Paul (Minn.) Press club last September, an original plan was formally presented and "electrically" adopted for creating a substantial revenue for the organization, by an undertaking which should at the same time redound to its literary credit throughout the profession. The enterprise consisted in the writing and publication fication of a volume composed of original contributions by the members, "For Revenue Only." Under the chairmanship of Harry W. Wack—the acknowledged author and chief executive of the idea, as well as contributor of a very smart story entitled "Mr. Wilkes of Harvard"—the general committee set to work; and in three months' time from its inception the perfected result presented itself for popular rec-ognition. Its success has justified the sanguine hopes of its projectors. The book is a handsome large quarto of 350 pages, bound in a cover of original design, containing upward of a score of literary articles, supplemented with a history of the St. Paul Press club, and embellished with numerous portraits. It is dedicated to the Hon. Charles E. Flandrau, "the pioneer jurist, the versatile advocate, the judicial journalist, the perennial gentleman."

SUNDAY DEVELOPMENTS.

INTERVIEWS WITH EHLE ALLEN AND LULU LEYDE.

WIDE INTEREST IN AFFAIR.

Allen Has Many Visitors But Does Not Talk to Them of the Tragedy-He Tells a Globe Reporter He Never Met Clapp at the Leyde Residence—Says Handy Could Not See at Distance He Was Standing - Lulu Saw Something in Clapp's Hand-Not Sure It Was a Revolver-The Inquest Begins Today.

Sunday passed quietly and was unnarked by any new developments in the Allen-Clapp homicide case.

Ehle Allen was found in the county jail made fairly comfortable; by his family, who had supplied him with everything needed to make his confinement as bearable as possible.

All day long a stream of his friends were passing in and out of the county jail. Sheriff Chapel was as obliging as possible, and allowed all who desired to visit the unfortunate young man free access for the asking. Allen received all caffers pleasantly, but did not talk of the tragedy.

Not alone in this city, but throughout the country, the case has excited the greatest of interest. Local representaof St. Louis. Allen is well known in many of the larger cities of the country, and those who know him are evincing the greatest concern in the outcome of the

A careful review of all that has been said, and that has been alleged as having been said by principals and witnesses leads the police department to the radical conclusion that some one is grievously or intentionally misstating facts. The various stories are conflicting in the extreme, and not borne out by the natural conditions of the scene of the trouble. The story as related by Mr. Handy comes into direct conflict with that of the two women who reside at 130 West Fourth street. The ladies of the Fuller residence, who, it is claimed, were eye witnesses of the affair, were seen by a GLOBE reporter yesterday afternoon. But both had received positive instructions from County Attorney Butler not to talk on the subject, and all efforts to obtain their version of the encounter proved

THE INQUEST will begin this morning at 10 o'clock at Dampier's undertaking rooms, and all who know anything about the case will be given an opportunity to tell their story. It is a matter of speculation whether Ehle Allen will take the stand and talk or whether he will rest h is case upon what other witnesses will The weight of it often bows many of us tell. Under the law he may refuse to and brilliantly-pitched baritone. Now may take advantage of this prerogative. A GLOBE reporter called at the county jail yesterday afternoon and had a brief visit with Ehle Allen. Leaving a group of friends, he greeted the scribe pleasantly, and for the first time was willing

Mr. Clapp never called with me nor alone at the house 130 West Fourth street. I do not understand how these women came to make such a statement. I have known John Clapp in the past, but for more than a year I have not seen him to speak to. In fact, our acquaintance has not been a strong one. I have never had any quarrel or difficulty with him about any cause whatever. I cannot give an explanation of this trouble. It all went like a flash, and I did not rea!ize that he had been hurt, let alone

Allen was asked concerning the story told by William C. Handy, and he became indignant about it. "Why, it was impossible for him to see anything from the place where he alleges he was standing. Other people close by could only see the outline of all three of us as we stood there in the shadow of the buildings. Besides, but a few moments passed in which the trouble took place. He says that he followed me a number of blocks, when in fact I did not have time to travel that distance before being placed under arrest."

Further than this Allen did not desire to speak on the case. He prefers to let the story come out at the trial. It is plainly visible that he feels deeply the situation he is in, and especially the fact that a human life should bave been sacrificed at his hands.

Lulu Leyde was still retained in the woman's ward of the jail. She had the freedom of the corridor, and a large bunch of roses graced a table near which she was sitting when the eporter called.

Her mother had arrived in the city, and came in to see her when the GLOBE man retired. The young woman looked pale, and was under a constrain over the trouble in which she was partially involved. "In view of the fact that so much as been said about your part in the affair, I called to see if you desired to make any statement?" Miss Leyde looked up quickly and said that much had been attributed to her which she had never expressed. She made a remarkable statement which flatly contradicts the story given the GLOBE by the immates of the house at 130 West Fourth street. Miss Leyde said: "I do not live at 130 West Fourth street. Mr. Allen had rented the room simply for the purpose of having a convenient place where we

It is rather peculiar that murder should follow in the face of the facts that neither Lulu Leyde nor Ehle Allen admit of any special acquaintance with John Clapp.

The weapon which was found by the police was a black japanned one, with not a single bright spot upon it. The mystery of the fight is still as deep and unsolved as ever, and perhaps today's inquiries may develop the true facts in the case. The press and police department have been kept guessing about the matter, and it was with the greatest of difficulty that any of the facts were ascertained. The conflicting stories that have been told only tend to mix up matters still worse, and a jury will have to determine the truth and veracity of the different witnesses. What is considered as the most remarkable feature of the affair is the fact that Lulu Leyde should have crossed the street for protection at the hands of a man whom she did not know at a distance. She was directly in front of the door of the house in which it is alleged she had a room. A few steps would have taken her under the protection of the premises and among people whom she was acquainted with. No stranger would have entered the building after her. Had she followed this: line of action there would not have been last evening and asked if there were any new developments. He said that the only startling bit of news of the day was the story of Mr. Handy. "If Handy saw what he claims," said the chief, he should have come here on the night of the trouble. He has been long enough in office to be familiar with the workings of the police department. His failure to report to us on Friday night seems very strange. The two ladies in the Fuller house may know something, but I have not been informed as to the nature of their knowledge. Their instructions were to keep still until called on by the authorities, and they are obeying to the letter. There is absolutely nothing new in the case."

pear in Opera. The past week has observed the return home of Anthony H. Wagner, who, for the last five and a half years, has studied voice culture with the best masters in Europe. St. Paul recalls Mr. Wagner, before he left for Europe, as a large, handsome, smooth-faced boy, who occasionally appeared as a member of an opera cast. Over five years ago, at the urgent solicitation of the musical judges of this city and the East, the young man went to Europe with a firmly set purpose to treat his lute to the ablest conduct of the masters in Florence, Rome, Naples, and Milan. He first visited Blasco, then Chima and San [Giovanni. Finally, attracted by the popular work of the famous Arrizzabalaga, Mr. Wagner presented himself at this master's studio. While others had taught him the basso registration and qualities, Arrizzabalaga at once discovered in his student a rich of previous years was in a measure modified. The result warrants the :ask; for one St. Paul boy has today one of the most versatile baritone voices in the country. Maure!, in Milan, predicted eminence for Mr. Wagner when the latter sang for him from "La Scala." Signor Carboni, whom we remember as having appeared in America, speaks readily of Mr. Wagner's superior talent. The tendency of Mr. Wagner's purpose is toward opera, in which he has trained himself with the success which comes only from earnest and devoted study under masterly direction. His repertoire embraces a varied book of English and Italian operas, in the rendition of which a very fervid dramatic force is exemptified in the young artist's work. In his study of dramatic inter-pretation he has submitted himself to the critics of Spain, Germany, France and New York with the result that he will be the leading baritone for an opera company touring the United States next season. By a compact with his managers Mr. Wagner will not be permitted to sing publicly here until his formal appearance in opera. Add Mr. Wagner to the prospective good work of the Schubert club, progressing in the enterprise of its president, Mrs. Russell R. Dorr, and St. Paul is indeed impressing itself upon the luric and impressing itself upon the lyric and dramatic stage.

TANNER LAKE DROWNING. Ben Donaldson, of Margaret

Street, the Unfortunate. The central police station here was notified at 7:50 o'clock yesterday morning by the Margaret street police stathat a young man named Donaldson, of this city, had been drowned at Tanner's lake, on the Hudson road, about 3 e'clock Sunday morning. At 7:58 a. m. the coroner of Washington county, under whose jurisdiction the case would come, was notified of the drowning. The report is that Donaldson, who was about nineteen years old, accompanied by several other young fellows, went out to Tanner's lake Saturday night to take a swim. Among those in the party were a young fellow named Farrell, another Starkey by name, and Kiefer and McCoy. There were two others whose names could not be learned. Farrell and Donaldson got into a boat and pushed out from the shore. When they had proceeded some distance Donaldson suggested that they would better go out where the water was a little deeper. The Farreil boy negatived this proposition and threw out the anchor. Donaldson then cove into the water. He soon came up and began struggling for his life. He shouted to Farrell for assistance. Farrell tried to get to him, but could not reach him in time. A little after 7 o'clock yesterday morning Farrell reported the case to the Margaret police station, and asked the officers there where he could be compared to the margaret police station. procure some apparatus for drag-ging the lake. As the Margaret police station did not have any of the desired apparatus, Farrell was referred to the Ducas police station. There he was sent to some one whose name was not ascertained, who was said to have a mplete outfit for the recovery o bodies.

Ben Donaldson was a son of John Donaldson, a carpenter, and resided with his father at 752 Margaret street.

LESSON ON SELF-DENIAL.

ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST HELD UP AS

and Practical Sermon at the Cathedral on Temperance Dwells Upon Self-Denial, One of the Most Important of Haan Attainments.

Yesterday morning Dr. Heffron de vered a sermon at the Cathedraf on the virtue of temperance, and the feast of St. John the Baptist. Yesterday was the St. John's Day and the sermon was remarkable for his strength of character, and if we may single out one of the causes which to the eyes of man way the most productive in bringing about this strength of character, we shall name the virtue of self-lenial.

Christ, the Redeemer, chose St. John to be His precursor; chose him to go forth and announce to the people the all the virtues that he possessed, the most eminent was that of self-denial. What is the meaning of virtue? Does virtue mean a passive state of one's mind, a fixed, an invariable rule in one's conduct? Does virtue mean complacency? Does virtue mean the exterior graces, and attractions which we often observe adorning the persons of those about us? Virtue, my brethren, means all those only in its effects. It means all those only in a secondary meaning attributed to the word. Virtue means strength; virtue means manliness and

St. John the Baptist sent some of his disciples to our blessed Lord to ask if He was indeed the Messiah who was to come, or if He was Elias, or whether they might expect yet another one. Christ sent back word of all the works He had done, and He asked those who went forth into the desert where St. John baptized: "Did you go out," says He, "to see a reed shaken by the wind? Did you go into the desert to see a man clothed in soft garments? Behold, those who are clothed in soft garments are to found in the houses of kings." John was in the desert. What the secret of the character exhibited by St. John the Baptist. It was self-denial, and it is related, if I mistake not, in Holy Scripture, that among those things which St. John denied himself was wine. St. John did not drink wine. The use of wine in the times of Sk. John had a different meaning than in popular parks of the Northwest.

Sumed almost a necessary of life; now it is more or less of a live of the northwest. sumed almost a necessary of life, now it is more or less of a luxiry, and yet.

shall not be unreasonable. I know as well as you can tell me, there is no enough I let it alone. If you are pos-sessed of that self-control, you are, in-deed, fortunate; but do not forget, I pray you, that there is something else asked of sensible Christians. We must not only consider ourselves, but must consider the evil of example. If a father drinks moderately, why not the son? If a tather frequents saloons and gambling houses, then why cannot the son do it kewise. My brethren, do not mistake my meaning in this respect; we must work; it is not enough for us to profess that we love our blessed Lord; we must be willing to labor for the wiring which He has recognized.

virtue which He has recognized. simple lesson; we must control our-selves; we must be active in the practice of self denial. Today, on the occasion of the celebration of the feast of St. John the Baptist, while we admire the great privilege which was his, to be the precursor of Christ; while we admire the precursor of Christ; while we admire the praise bestowed upon him by the Redeemer Himself, while we admire all the virtues of his character, let us not forget to select one of them and imitate it, and I recommend to you the one of self denial, this great virtue, the virtue of temperance.

MRS. WILLIS' FUNERAL,

eremony at Christ Church-Notable Attendance,

At 4 p. m. yesterday Rev. Charles D. Andrews pronounced the impressive and beautiful Episcopal service for the dead over the remains of Mrs. John W. Willis, wife of Judge Willis, of the Ramsey county district court, at Christ church. The edifice was well filled with people anxious to pay their last tribute of respect to the deceased. Judges Oris, Kerr, Egan, Brill and Kelly, Judge Willis' associates on the bench, were present in a body. Deputy clerks of the district court, M. J. Redding, M. J. Donnelly, also Capt. M. J. O'Connor, Senator Ignatius Donnelly, H. J. Horn and many others were in

Then came the Scriptural reading, followed by the chant, "Lord, let me know the number of my days, that I may be certified how long I live." The choir sung "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The creed was said, and the Lord's prayer was solemnly repeated. After the services were over, the coffin, supported by Alfred S. Hall, Arthur G. Otis, L. G. Mackay, C. H. Fautleroy, E. P. Sanborn and Mr. Whitaker, was carried to the hearse, followed by the mourners, and then the long line of carriages formed into line, and the cortege took its course to Oakland. by the chant, "Lord, let me know the
