Knights of Pythias Parade at Washington a Most Brilliant Spectacle.

In a Parade Witnessed by More Than 100,000 Spectators.

THE CONCLAVE IN SESSION.

Biennial Reports of the Officials Read--Pythian Sisters Organize.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.--The feature of the Pythian encampment was the grand parade of the uniform rank this morning. Fifteen thousand knights were in line, marching by state brigades, and the procession was more than two hours passing the presidential reviewing stand.

The president reviewed the procession from a small stand erected on the curbing just in front of the White house. A few minutes after 4 o'clock he emerged from the executive mansion in company with Col. Xiao, chief of staff, representing the Knights of Pythias, and Col. Wilson, United States engineers. The president's appearance was greeted with cheers by a crowd of several thousand people assembled about the entrance of the White house. He walked slowly to the western gate and thence along the sidewalk, which had been enclosed by ropes to the stand. As he stood up, the great crowd broke into cheers and hand-clapping, which continued for several minutes, while the object of this attention removed his hat and bowed his acknowledgments. Then ensued a rather disagreeable wait for the procession, which was late. The president seated himself and waited patiently for twenty-five minutes before the head of the line appeared. Then he arose, and as the knights swept past he acknowledged the salutations of the commanding officers by bowing. Ranks were formed in the camp around Washington monument, whence at 4 o'clock the body started. Their line of march was through the White lot, past the executive mansion and down Pennsylvania avenue to the Peace monument, in front of the capitol, where the body was counter-marched to the avenue to the treasury department.

The scene was brilliant, looking down the mile stretch of the avenue, with double lines of marching men, buildings covered with bunting and spectators at all the windows, and the open spaces and improvised stands.

At the head of the line rode the members of the citizens' committee in black clothes and silk hats, escorted by three crack militia organizations of the city. After them mounted Maj. Gen. Carnahan and his staff on horseback. All the knights were uniformed in black broad-topped frock coats with silver buttons, red belts and white or silver helmets, with heavy scarlet plumes. Their officers were mounted on richly outfitted horses. Every division was headed by a band and displayed handsome banners. Maj. Gen. Carnahan reviewed the line near the treasury department on its return march and the review was not ended until after 7 o'clock today.

Tonight the United States Marine band gave a concert in Convention hall.

War on the Congo.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 27.--Advices received here from St. Paul de Louanda, West Africa, say that a detachment of 200 French troops, accompanied by field guns, was landed on Aug. 9 at Louanda, destined for the Angolo region. At the same time the authorities of the Congo Free State were pushing forward troops, guns and stores, with the view of opposing their side of the boundary dispute, which has since been settled by treaty at Paris on Aug. 15. In the meantime a collision between the French troops and the Congo troops is feared.

DOVER, N. H., Aug. 27.--The Cocheco cotton mills, the second largest corporation in the state, reopened its mills today after nearly a month's shut down. WILSON IS PLEASED.

Principle of Tariff Reform Is Recognized--Perfection Will Come Later.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.--Chairman Wilson leaves Virginia today to be present at the congressional convention in his district tomorrow. His renomination is conceded, as he is without opposition. He will address the convention, and his speech will be his first utterance outside of congress on the tariff act.

Mr. Wilson says today: "The outlook for general tariff reform is very bright. We have taken the first step, and that is always the hardest, and having done that much and done it, perhaps, not so easily as it is supposed to be, I am confident that we are proceeding to a full realization of tariff reform."

Mr. Wilson was asked if he considered that the principle of tariff reform characterized the present act, even though the rates were not all that was wanted.

"Yes," said he, "the principle is there, and after all, the great struggle has been to secure recognition of the principle, rather than the perfection of detail. The detail must come by the irresistible force of circumstances, now that the principle is established."

"What is there," Mr. Wilson was asked, "in the assertion that a resumption of the tariff reform act will bring a recurrence of business unrest?"

"That is wholly unwarranted," said he, "there need be no general bill reaching all industries, so that the legislation will not be such as to effect commercial affairs generally. The tariff rates will be raised in very great majority of articles, and it will be necessary to provide for the perfecting of details which will be necessary in order that the tariff act will be a consistent whole."

Mr. Wilson spoke in warm approval of the tariff reform act, and to Mr. Catches, saying it was strong in expression and in the sentiment set forth.

THOSE SENATE RULES.

Committee Will Spend the Recess in the Work of Revision.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.--The senate committee on rules will meet during the recess of congress and attempt to revise the senate rules. Several times during the recess the committee will meet to discuss the proposed changes.

Mr. Blackburn, chairman of the committee on rules, tried to have adopted a resolution authorizing the committee to revise the senate rules during the recess, but it has been steadily objected to by Senator Blanchard. He says that the rules revised during the recess will be of no use, as they will be repealed by the senate when it meets.

It does not matter so much about the senate rules as it does about the meeting of the committee during the recess. A majority of the members, or each member may make a suggestion, and report prepared very soon after congress convenes. But the object sought would be to sanction the draft of the rules upon which the majority could unite and presented at the beginning of the session, so that a vote might be reached on the question of its adoption. As it is, the report coming in after other business has been taken up, it is probable that a vote might be reached on the question of its adoption.

The Louisiana senators will fight a long battle, and it is probable that a vote might be reached on the question of its adoption. As it is, the report coming in after other business has been taken up, it is probable that a vote might be reached on the question of its adoption.
