

IN SHELLEY'S MEMORY

Monument Unveiled at Viareggio, Off Which Point the Poet Was Drowned.

A GREAT CROWD PRESENT.

Among Them Many English Residents and Eminent Men of Italy.

AN INSCRIPTION BY BOVIO.

Sgr. Riccioni, Inspirer of the Movement, Delivers an Address.

ROME, Sept. 30.—A monument to Shelley, the English poet, erected by Italian admirers, was unveiled this morning at Viareggio, off which Shelley was drowned July 8, 1822. Sgr. Riccioni, a local lawyer, who was the inspirer of the movement that resulted in the erection of the monument, was president of the company having the work in charge. Included among the members of this committee were Mr. Gladstone, Algernon Swinburne, the English poet; Felix Cavallotti, Ruggiero Bonenti, Arnold Garibaldi, Edmand de Amicis, the poet Bovio and other eminent Italians. The monument, which is fifteen feet high, faces the sea in Padolina square. The bust is the work of the sculptor, Triano Lanchetti. It represents the poet at the age of twenty-nine years in a meditative attitude. The pedestal is simple, but elegant. On the side away from the sea a design of intertwined branches of oak and olive encircles a book bearing on its cover the word "Prometeo." Above this is an inscription written by Sgr. Bovio, reading thus:

To Percy Bysshe Shelley: Hearts of hearts, raised in this sea, created on this spot, where he composed "Prometheus Unbound." A sea-breeze, when every generation will have its struggles, its tears, and its triumphs.

The weather was bad, but, despite this drawback, there was a great gathering of English residents and eminent Italians, including Signor Panzani, Cavallotti, Villori, Coppino and Martini. Representatives of the Universities of Rome and Pisa were also present. Lady Shelley was represented by Col. Leitch Hunt. Signor Riccioni delivered an address, after which he formally transferred the monument to the keeping of the mayor of Viareggio amid the cheering of the assemblage.

THE CZAR VEILS HIS

Suffering From a Combination of Ailments.

VIENNA, Sept. 30.—The Tareblatt publishes a letter from St. Petersburg stating that the czar is suffering with two distinct maladies. He has been affected for some time with highly developed neurasthenia, coupled with anemia. When the attacks are severe he is unable to leave his household. The second disease was long in developing. At first it was taken for diabetes, then Bright's disease, and finally a peculiar affection of the kidneys. The kidney affection was aggravated lately by a cold contracted by the czar while on his son, Grand Duke George. Before he left St. Petersburg the czar on one occasion visited a telegraph office at 2 o'clock in the morning and sent telegram to Albatunian inquiring after Grand Duke George's health. His majesty waited at the telegraph office and a half for the reply. When it came it proved unsatisfactory. He returned to his bedroom and, throwing himself into a chair, exclaimed: "Oh, God, what have I done to be so severely punished?" On the night of Grand Duke George's arrival at Spala the czar visited his room after evening had retired for the night, passing half-dressed through the cold corridors. He watched his sleeping son for a long time, with the result that he caught a chill.
