The Republican leaders are beginning to wonder what they can do to square things with the Scandinavian voters of the Third ward. They realize that the situation is alarming, for they are on the verge of losing about 2,000 votes. The meeting next Friday night in Hunt's hall, on Plymouth avenue, of the Scandinavian Independents will undoubtedly bring out a large attendance, and demonstrate what the sentiment is.

The Eustis Press bureau gives out the information that a saloonkeepers' association has been formed in South Minneapolis for "mutual protection and euforcement of the law," and that it is all the result of the mayor's "policy." Nobody, however, appears to know where the organization meets, who its officers are, or when it was organized. Perhaps it is also a part of the "policy" to merely deal in generalities. Shea's commission store, at 116 First street north, had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire last evening. Upon entering he found a pile of rubbish and paper burning, while near it stood a can of gasoline. The officer extinguished the fire with Arrest of George M. Burbank on a Sensational Charge.

Juror Ginsberg Subscribes to an Affidavit Which Creates Trouble.

PRINTERS PASS RESOLUTIONS

Roasting Mrs. T. B. Walker and Extolling S. M. Owen--News of a Sunday.

A somewhat sensational arrest was made yesterday afternoon when George M. Burbank was placed in durance on the charge of jury bribing. He was locked up at the South side police station. M. Ginsberg, who was one of a jury whose deliberations were found necessary in the Giertsen damage case against the Minneapolis Street Railway company, is the complaining witness for the state. He tells his story in an affidavit which reads as follows: The Affidavit.

Moritz Ginsberg, being duly sworn by me, deposes as follows:
"Saturday evening, Oct. 6, 1894, about a quarter after 7, a man came and knocked at my door, at my house, 1805 Fourth street south, while I was sitting at home reading a book in the kitchen there came a knock on my back door.
"I said 'Come in,' and a young fellow whom I did not know came in. He said 'Is your name Mr. Ginsberg?'

"I answered 'Yes, sir.'
"Just that moment my wife came in from the other house. He then said: 'Mr. Ginsberg, will you take a little walk with me?' I answered 'No,' and told him that if he wanted to see me to come into the other room. He went in with some the come into the other room. with me. I closed the door and we sat down in the dining room of my house. He asked me if I was on the jury. I told him that I was. He said: 'What do you think about this street railway

"I said, 'I don't know.'
"Then he says, 'I have got a bet with the other lawyer of $100 that the street railway company will win the case."
"I told him, 'I don't know." "He then asked me what my business was. I said, 'I am peddling vegetables and apples.' "He said: 'Will it be all right if give you half of that $100 if you can do something for us? I told him no, I would not do it; that I was going fairly and square! He said: I guess that money will do you all right. Money is pretty hard to get this time. I will give you $25 tomorous and after the case I you $25 tomorrow, and after the case I give you the rest of it.' I told him that I wouldn't do it. I then asked: 'Please, who sent you up to my house? He said: 'I cannot tell you that; I cannot mention his name.' I said: 'How do know me; what is your name, please?'

He did not answer that, but said: "We are four eyes in the room." "Then I asked: 'Did the man send you here by the name of Gartenlaube, or some police officer, or some court officer?" He said: 'Yes, 1 know Gartenlaube; his name is Max; he goes with me up to the university.' Then he put his hand in his pocket and says: 'Do you want $5 now?' I said: 'Please don't put your hand in your pocket; I don't want any money.' Then he said: 'I guess you are prejudiced against the railway company.'

"I told him: 'I don't know.' Then he took his hat and said: 'I will be here tomorrow.' Then he went out in the kitchen and said at the door: He Was Persistent.

"'Will you be home tomorrow all day?' I said 'Yes.' He asked me if I would be home in the afternoon. I said 'Yes.' He said, 'Well, I will be here tomorrow afternoon.' I bade him goodnight twice to get rid of him. I was quite excited. He went right out of the door and answered me good-night as he went out in the alley. I was quite excited, and did not know what to think of this. After a while I went over to Mr. Ehrlichman, who is a friend of mine, over on Twenty-second street, and told him everything, and asked him if he thought I could get into any trouble about the man, and asking me such things about the case. He asked me what case it was I was sitting on. I told him it was Rev. Gjertsen's case. He told me I had better go with him to Mr. Gjertsen and tell him all about it. I did so. We went up there and I told him what had happened, and Mr. Gjertsen then asked both of us to go with him to Mr. Arctander and tell him about the matter to find out what had best be done. We did go. I then told Mr. Arctander at about midnight all that I have stated here. And at his request I have here slowly repeated while he was writing it down the whole matter for the purpose of having the matter laid before the courts. My wite saw the man also.

"M. GINSBERG." Subscribed and sworn to before me this 7th day of October, 1894.

J. W. ARCTANDER. J. W. ARCTANDER.
Following the making of the affidavit a plan of capture was devised, and it was arranged by W. Ehrlichman, court officer, that G. L. Palmer and a neighbor by the name of Isaacson should go to the house of Ginsberg and wait and watch for the return of Burbank. They arrived at the house at 4 o'clock yester-day morning and were secreted in the parlor adjacent to the dining room. It was arranged that Burbank should be allowed to enter and the signal should be given to the two men in the other oom when Ginsberg made the remark: "O. I didn't expect you back." When the money was paid over an additional signal was to be conveyed to the men of the fact by means of a sneeze. Holes were boted in the door leading from the sitting room into the parlor, and through these the two men were to watch proceedings. It was about 11 o'clock yesterday morning when Burbank came around the back door. The men in hiding held their breath in expectancy and he entered. "O! I didn't expect you back," spoke up Ginsberg in a loud voice.

"Oh, yes, I come back all right," was the reply, and Burbank began to feel in his pocket for the money. Then he handed the roll of crisp bills over to Ginsberg, and the latter sneezed in a hairy manner. The door was burst open in a trice, and Palmer and Isaacson jumped into the room. Burbank's arms were pinioned by Palmer, and the two immediately marched off with their prisoner to the South side police station, where the charge of attempted bribery was registered against him. The money received by Ginsberg was marked by the men who captured him, Palmer and Isaacson, so that it can be identified when the case comes to trial, and then it was given over to the keeping of the South side police officers, who in turn put their mark upon it to identify it. Burbank's Side of the Case. Burbank registered at the South side police station as George M. Burbank, insurance adjuster, with an office at 325 Hennepin avenue. He told an entirely different story to Municipal Court Offi cer Ehrlichman yesterday afternoon regarding the cause of arrest. He stated that he had entertained an amorous af-fection for a prominent young Jewish girl of the city, and that his affection had gone far beyond the bounds of modesty and prudence. The facts connected with his amour became known to Ginsberg and the latter made a demand for money to keep the stery quiet. Saturday evening Burbank alles as that he accompanied him to his home and talked the matter over, promising to pay him $25 Sunday as hush money. He stated at the time that he didn't have it with him. In paying the money yesterday he was fulfilling the promise. When questioned as to the name of the young woman, he stated that he would young woman, he stated that he would not give it for $1,000. There is a dis-crepancy in his story, for the reason that competent wirnesses have been found who will state that Ginsberg was at home and talking with neighbors when the alleged interview between him and Burbank is said to have occurred.

Arctander Makes Charges. It is stated by Attorney Arctander that he has proof positive that Burbank was employed in the claim department of the street railway company upon and previous to March 1 of the present year, and he believes he is still connected with the company in the same capacity. The crime is one that few persons are proved implicated in, and the sentence, if found guiltin is a proper course. if found guilty, is very severe—not more than ten years and a fine of $5,000, both of which can be returned by the judge trying the case in his discretion.

PRINTERS "RESOLVE."

They Score Mrs. Walker and Uphold Mr. Owen. The printers of the city, members of Typographical Union No. 42, held a meeting vesterday afternoop and adopted resolutions which are printed below and speak for themselves: Whereas, Mrs. T. B. Walker has published a statement in which she has seen fit to accuse the union printers of Minneapolis of drunkenness and the union of doing more harm than good; Whereas, She has also advised printers to go to work in the woods instead of tramping the streets. Therefore, be it resolved, that possibly the idle printers and other idle people would be more ready to "take to the woods" if they woods" if they could retain the wealth they produce by their labor instead of having it go to people who, by the grace of God and rascally public servants, own the aforesaid woods. Resolved, That we presume she has derived her opinion as to the drunkenness of printers from the conduct of her fraternity but not to the union. Resolved. That on the question of the usefulness of the union we refer her to the report of the labor commissioner of Minnesota for 1892, wherein among other things it is already shown that the union printers of Minneapolis give more in charity than any church or proessional "philanthropists" in the city. Whereas, The statement has been widely circulated in the state that S. M. Owen, editor of the Farm, Stock and Home, was running a "rat" office, which statement is not true,

Resolved, by the Minneapolis Typographical Union No. 42, That while not indorsing any political candidate, we desire to do Mr. Owen the justice to say that the statement referred to above is false, that he does not now and never lid run a "rat" office; that the relations between him and the union are satis-factory to the union; and that this union is in no way responsible for the claims of his opponents.

PROF. DAVID SWING.

Rev. Wilkinson Refers to His Many Virtues.

Rev. Wilkinson preached at St. Andrew's church yesterday morning on the life of David Swing. The rector took other important places. The school for his text the words of Christ. But their re- respected and the Japanese troops, then demption and exaltation has always come—the servant has never continued in the day of humiliation long, his reward has been both swift and sure. Men like David Swing belong not to one city, or part of a church, or class, or creed, they are part of the church holy, catholic, apostolic, universal. They are in the very soul of the hurch. They stand to minister to the perplexed children of mental, moral and physical vant and disgrace. "A St. Paul paper asks what did David Swing ever do which will be remembered tifty years from now? As well ask what sunshine is doing which will abide. He did his duty, he had noble views of God, and would not picture him in a guise that outrages the moral views of any high-minded man. Prof. Swing had an intense love of the beautiful and the possible in common life. To him manhood was a sacred thing. This gave direction and point to his sympathy, and made him a personality distinct from most of his fellow clergy. No man came to him in trouble but found a friend. He was a quiet, meditative man, who loved his books and conversed with Nature in her hidden ways: a preacher of varied power, and a pastor who lived in the hearts of his people."

KONG TELEPHONES CHANG.

Elaborate Preparations Made for the Defense of the Chinese Capital.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7 .- Advices re ceived here from Yokohama announce the arrival there from the United States of Ye Sung Soo, the Corean minister to Washington, who is on his return to Corea. They also give some interesting details of that celebrated chapter in the correspondence between the United States and Japan which culminated in the letter from Secretary Gresham to the United States minister, Dunn, touching Japan's attitude towards Corea, which has been the subject of so much comment in the United States. It will be remembered that at the time Japan was in complete military control of Seoul, the Corean capital, her demands were very sweeping, being as follows:

A reorganization of the duties and service of the revenue officers of the various departments. The appointment of a new minister in charge of the commercial intercourse and foreign relations. The public roads must be widened, and railroads and telegraph lines built by the government between Seoul and other important places. The number of government bureaus must be reduced and the salaries of officers sufficiently increased so that they may live properly. The system of records of receipts and disbursements of the government must be changed and a way of increasing

The Public Revenues determined upon. The monetary system must be changed. New rules and regulations for the management of the custom houses must be adopted. The farming lands of all the provinces must be resurveyed and numbered for purposes of taxation, in order that the amount needed for public improvements may be raised. The administration of justice must be changed. Military officers must be educated, and the old system of the army and navy must be abolished and reorganized ou a modern basis. The police system must be thoroughly reorganized, and istations established in Seoul and which they would not resist, they hoped the national independence would be in possession of the capital and the country, would be withdrawn. At the same time the king instructed the Corean minister at Washington to represent the conditions to the United States, to the end that the good offices of the United States be used to bring about the withdrawal of The Japanese Troops He was further instructed to say that the exact conditions described in the treaty of 1883 with the United States had arisen, and to beg the United States to carry out the obligation it had assumed in the article reading: "If other powers deal unjustly or oppressively with either government, the other will exercise their good offices on being informed of the case to bring about an amicable arrangement, thus showing their friendly feelings. Secretary Gresham responded to this appeal by communicating with both China and Japan in Corea's interest. China agreed to withdraw her troops, but Japan declined to do so. Then the secretary addressed the celebrated note of instructions to Minister Dunn, whick, after summing up the situation and the obligation of the United States, concluded in the following words:

"Cherishing sincere friendship for both Japan and Corea, the United States indulges the hope that Corea's independence and sovereignty will be respected. You are instructed to say to the government at Tokio that the president will be painfully disappointed should Japan visit upon her feeble and defenceless neighbor the horrors of an London, Oct. 8 .- A dispatch to the Times from Tien Tsin, dated Saturday, says the Japanese are pursuing the campaign towards Moukden cautiously, and are avoiding any dashing enterprise. Their cruisers are closely watching the Chinese fleet in the Gulf of Pe Chi-Li. The dispatch adds that fugitives from Ping Yang describe Japanese tactics as most scientific, while their weapons are perfect. On the other hand, the Chinese operations are said to be conducted in an antiquated fashion and there is considerable disagreement among the Chinese generals. The Japanese are gaining the sympathy of the Corean people by paying for their supplies and maintaining strict discipline. The dispatch concludes with the statement that the admiral of the French fleet has arrived.

WITH PNEUMATIC TIRES.

The pneumatic skates are the latest wonder. Enthusiastic friends of the invention declare that they will make walking altogether unnecessary and will eventually abolish it. People will skate instead of walking.

The skates have been seen in Washington. They made their first appearance three months ago. One of the few summer visitors at the capital was J. H. Wilson, the inventor. Every night, and occasionally in the daytime, through the summer, he was seen careering up and down Pennsylvania avenue, making the people wonder what manner offa man he was. Seldom was he seen to speak to any one, and still more seldom was he known

Away uptown, however, a correspondent, who now writes to the World, accomplished what no one else had, and was treated to a good inspection of the skates. They look like bicycles fitted to the feet, each wheel being about nine inches in diameter. The thick rubber tire seems out of proportion when the skater is not in motion, but once started, he goes like the wind. A certain New York congressman was riding on the grip of a cable train one evening in front of the treasury departapparition passed again, going the other way, having been all the way down to hotel that he does very strange things in his rooms early in the morning and late at night, but he has sworn his family to secrecy.

A pair of the skates has since then been on exhibition at the royal aqua-rium in London, where the public were persons put on the shates and found them very effective. The skates do not, like roller skates, require a smooth surface, but run better over a somewhat rough and gritty road. It is claimed they can do anything the best bicycle can do, and are much less expensive and much less bulky They cost from $15 to $25, and can be packed up in a grip.

The inventor, J. H. Wilson, is a native of Kirkcaldy, Scotland, where they were first used by a woman of title, who habitually goes shopping on easily on the pneumatic skates.
