"CURED," THE DOCTOR SAID.

But the Soldier Suffers From the Vicksburg Bullet to This Day.

The motto of modern medicine, "is a prophylaxis," is not an easy motto to spell, but anybody can see how sensible it is by substituting for the tough Greek word its English equivalent, prevention. Let us illustrate. A soldier shot at Vicksburg was discharged from the hospital, cured more than thirty years ago. But the bullet is in his body, eye is bright, and his blood bounds through his veins as nature intended that it should.

Do not attack of disease may, and frequently does, leave malignant effects long after the attack of it has been cured. The writer just quoted says that the best plan is to keep the body so strong that it will throw off sickness of its own accord. Never let the system run down.

If there is a liability to take cold, a disposition to sneeze and to cough, and a stiffness of the muscles you may know that the body's force must be stimulated, to meet a danger so common to the soldier. It is in the prevention of disease that the greatest benefit is to be derived. Dr. R. H. Hegerer's Vicksburg Bullet is made to meet such emergencies. It is in the form of a small, portable, medicinal preparation, and is prepared for medicinal use only. It is the price of a few cents. It is made in the form of a small, portable, medicinal preparation, and is prepared for medicinal use only.
