

MORE ON LICENSES

WILLIAM HAMM, THE BREWER, BEFORE THE INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

TELLS ABOUT THE REVENUE.

SAYS THERE ARE FEW CITIES THAT RECEIVE AS MUCH AS ST. PAUL.

CITY PHYSICIAN ANCKER Gives Some Information About the Cost of Conducting the City and County Hospital.

William Hamm, the brewer and City Physician Ancker appeared before the Parker investigating committee yesterday afternoon, and enlightened that body considerably. The former explained the workings of the present system of issuing saloon licenses, and the latter furnished information regarding the city hospital and its management.

Mr. Hamm said that the state law was in conflict with the method now in vogue of issuing more than one license to a brewer, as it provides that only one license shall be issued to one person. The ordinance conflicted with the state law in that it gave the power to pass upon licenses to the committee on license instead of the common council.

Mr. Hamm said that there were not over four cities in the United States that derive as large a revenue from retail liquor licenses as St. Paul does. In other cities licenses were collected in quarterly installments, but here the licensee must pay them promptly or quit business.

The city of St. Paul had derived a revenue of $3,000,000 since high license was put in force, and that time the city had 70 saloons paying $100 a year license. At the end of the first year, after high license went into effect, there was a decrease of $1,000,000 on. The number of licenses decreased with succeeding years.

Mr. Hamm, when questioned as to the system of transferring licenses, answered that if the state law is strictly followed, and the city should refuse to issue more than one license to a brewer, the brewer would have to pay down $1,000 at the beginning of the year and transfer the license to another person.

Mr. Lewis—Does not your system encourage irresponsible persons to go into the saloon business? Mr. Hamm—No, sir; I don't think it does. It is simply a question whether a man who has $1,000 is any more likely to obey the laws than one who has not.

Mr. Lewis wanted to know if the present system did not establish unfair competition between the man who pays for his own license and the one who conducts a saloon for which the brewer takes out the license.

Mr. Hamm said it did not, because, as a matter of fact, the saloon keeper for whom the brewer takes out the license in reality pays for it himself in subsequent installments.

Judge Lusk asked Mr. Hamm if he knew of any places in St. Paul where liquor is sold without a license. Mr. Hamm said that he thought the liquor was retailed in some drug stores, clubs and hotels without a license.

This closed the testimony of Mr. Hamm and the committee thereupon recalled City Physician Ancker. In reply to Col. Clough's first question regarding the comparative cost per patient as between the city hospital and the private hospitals, Dr. Ancker said: "Oh, our cost is way below that of the private hospitals. The cost at the city hospital was $1.75 per patient in 1894," answered Dr. Ancker.

POLICE COURT GRIND. Multitude of Cases of Various Kinds Were Heard.

In the municipal court yesterday much time was consumed trying nine of the dozen cases arrested for frequenting wine rooms. The prisoners were defended by Attorneys McGhee and Walsh. The testimony was sometimes interesting as indicating the manifold forms in which celestial Truth can present herself to different observers and even to the same observer at different times.

Christian Miller and Paul Deebach were charged with keeping their barber shops open on Sunday. Miller pleaded guilty and was fined $2, and Deebach will be tried Nov. 12.

Mary Hunter and Lillie Griffin, two women seized from the "West" side, were charged with carrying on a racket on Nov. 13. Flora Taylor, arrested on the same charge, but who is said to be addicted to no vice but that of drink, was discharged on request of a representative of the Women's Christian home. Flora is now being cared for at the home.

Miss Hjort was sent to the work-house for fifteen days. He has an invalid wife living near the Seven corners, for whom he fails to provide, spending most of his time, it is said, about beer saloons, where he gets free drinks can be obtained.

Henry Woerner, Henry Pelican and George, alias "Babe," Hessler, three young fellows from the "West" side, were charged with the stealing of four pairs of trousers from a barn at State street and Chicago avenue. Pelican confessed his own and his comrade's share in the transaction and was therefore discharged. Woerner was charged formally with vagrancy only, but received a sentence of sixty days. Hessler, nineteen years of age, yet an old offender, and apparently the worst of the three, was sent to Com for ninety days.

Ticketed for Seattle. Two diminutive pickaninnies from Jacksonville, Ohio, left for the west yesterday on the Northern Pacific train ticketed for Seattle. They were Mary and Samuel James Franklin aged nine and eight years respectively, and were making the trip alone quite unconscious of the fact that it was unusual for such tiny youngsters to go globe trotting without any other than the chaperonage of the trainmen.

The children are going to their father in Seattle, their mother being dead.

IN THE NOBILITY.

tered their carriage they were driven rapidly to the Vanderbilt home, No. 24 East Seventy-second street, where Mrs. Vanderbilt, who had left the church by a side door immediately after signing the register, awaited the happy couple. The duke and duchess proceeded to the reception room, where, standing beneath an immense floral bell, they received the guests invited to the breakfast. When the newly wedded couple left the sacred edifice to be driven to the bride's home, the church was cheered again and again, and many thousands of people lined the walk from the church to the residence of the bride on Seventy-second street.

RECEPTION AND BREAKFAST.

The first of the guests to arrive at the house after the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Morton, Hon. Ivor Guest and Sir Julian Pauncefote, and the members of the British legation. As soon as the guests had all arrived the bride couple left the way to the dining room, where they sat down to breakfast, which was prepared by Mrs. Vanderbilt's own chef. At the breakfast table Sir Julian Pauncefote read the congratulatory telegram sent on behalf of the queen and the Prince of Wales, congratulating the couple.

When the duke arose to respond to the toast of the bride and bridegroom the bride made her exit to don her traveling gown, and shortly afterwards the young couple left for the East Thirty-fourth street ferry en route to Long Island City, and took a special train to Oakdale, where they will pass a brief honeymoon at W. K. Vanderbilt's country residence, "Idle Hour." The traveling dress of the duchess was a dark blue cloth and crimson velvet. The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough will visit some points South, notably Richmond, Va., during their honeymoon trip.

ELABORATE DECORATIONS.

St. Thomas's church was converted into a veritable conservatory of rare tropical foliage and vines. The walls were lined with rare palms and vines were used to a large extent in the decoration of the ceiling and the groined roof, which served as a background for the mass of pink and white blossoms used in the decoration. The columns on either side of the aisle were banded with sashes of pink and white chrysanthemums and brown autumnal foliage. Crowning the columns and completely hiding the stonework from view was a capital of palm foliage, hanging tendrils and rare flowers. The base to capital were wound around with broad sashes of pink and white chrysanthemums, while the dome was lavishly hung with massive strands of foliage, pink and white flowers, lilies, chrysanthemums and roses. The several ends of the galleries reached to the chancel rail, the two organ alcoves, the right and left transepts and the north and south galleries. On the front of the galleries were placed medallions of maple foliage and contrasted with it was delicate, tinted borngovilla, hiding the woodwork completely from view. Garlands of white and pink cosmos were festooned along the gallery rail around the entire church.

RARE AND BEAUTIFUL.

Hanging from the galleries, surrounding the entire edifice, were pink, green and mauve orchid plants, which were offset by their dark green foliage. Across the chancel were three lofty arches of Gothic design composed of beautiful ferns, which formed a framework to thousands of orchids, roses and lilies. The chancel rail proper was concealed by a trellis of lilies of the valley and the two gates were decorated with Farleyanica fern and white calceyas, which was exceptional, owing to the scarcity of the flowers at this time in the year. Above the cereolas and on the ledges back of the chancel lofty palms and trailing vines were used with white and pink flowers, chrysanthemums, roses, cosmos and lilies of the valley. On the altar four large vases were filled with Eucharis Amazonica and lilies. On each side of the chancel arch bushes of dracaena, crotons and rare hot-house specimens were placed besides growing bushes of bridesmaid roses. Backed against the decal and candelabra choral stalls were portieres of standard roses and growing pink lilies which were arranged in such a way that the flowers graduated to the floor. Pink and white Alpine violets were used for edging. In place of the choir curtains and partially concealing the organ three arches of white and pink roses, with a grillwork of chrysanthemums and cut palm foliage, were erected. The marble columns flanking the organ were entwined with sprays of climbing vines with rose bushes grouped at the base. In the pulpit a century-old palm was placed and around the sides were garlands of orchids and maple foliage with hanging grates of farleyanica fern as a drapery. At each end of the pews was placed a huge floral flambeau ten feet high, surmounted by a feathery palm and embellished with pink and white roses. Holding the torches in position and entwining the staves were ribbons of white and pink satin tied in bows and draped to the floor. The galleries at the rear of the church were also decorated with palms and flowers, and the north transept and great organ doors were framed with orchids, lilies, roses and chrysanthemums.

HOUSE DECORATIONS. At the house of the bride the decorations were unique as to scheme and color. Pink tints predominated. Pains were largely used in the hall, and were so grouped in banks of chrysanthemums as to transform and have the appearance of a courtyard garden. The marble top of the staircase was framed with foliaria ferns, banded with pink and yellow chrysanthemums and edged with roses of a deeper tint. In the reception room a line of tall South American tree ferns over eight hundred years of age were arranged in front of all the windows facing Madison avenue. Five of these tree ferns were from a canopy from which was suspended a bell of lilies of the valley eight feet in circumference, under which their graces received the guests hidden to the breakfast on the main floor. The ferns pink orchids were arranged in the banking of the flower stands, and the ferns, palms, colums, door frames and wainscoting were banded with pink and white flowers. Pink, the favorite color of the bride, predominated. The dining room was decorated entirely in pink and white. The walls were lined with delicate and exquisite orchids, which were brought especially from Blenheim, the ducal seat, were exclusively used. The bride's table, which was laid for eighteen covers, was the color of the bride's entire length with lilies of the valley and white orchids. The tables for the guests were decorated with lilies and white chrysanthemums, and in the drawing room and other rooms vases filled with rare cut flowers were set on mantels and brackets which were banded with pink and white chrysanthemums.

MUSICIANS FROM HUNGARY. At the bride's home the Royal Hungarian band was in attendance. This band was especially brought from Buda-Pesth by Carl Biringer and was under the direction of Danko Gabor, leader. The band, which was an exceptionally good one, numbering forty musicians, was placed on the stairs, and the bright colors of the national Hungarian costume were in pleasing contrast with the floral decorations. "The Vanderbilt March," especially composed for the occasion by an intimate musical friend of Mrs. Vanderbilt, was played several times during the breakfast, and as the bride and groom led the way into the dining room Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was played. The musical programme was "Wedding March," "Sesangie," overture, "If I Were King," overture of Adam's opera; overture from "Martha," Flotow; "Carmen," potpourri; Bizet; overture, "William Tell," Rossini; "Waltz," "Kaiser," Strauss; waltz, "Long Live the Dance," from "Waldfuehl," waltz, "Goldfaden," from "Waldfuehl," waltz, "La Perle de Madril," from Lavotte; Intermezzo, "Cavalierie Rusticana," Mascagni; waltz, "Nepelunton," Wagner. As the bride and groom were leaving the house the band played "The Vanderbilt March."
