

MINNEAPOLIS.

PARKYN AFTER $200

HERE IS A BIT OF HISTORY FOR CASPER WHITNEY TO LOOK UP.

HE HIRED AN ATTORNEY.

BUT UNIVERSITY FOOTBALL OFFICIALS CONSIDER THE WHOLE THING A BLUFF.

TWO MINNEAPOLIS FORGERS.

Police Think They Have Them Behind the Bars—News of the Flour City.

The University of Minnesota has been getting all kinds of notoriety through the critical efforts of Casper Whitney, who runs the "Sports" column of Harper's Weekly, during the past month, and the Western kickers are still at sword's points with the gentleman who plays the pig-skin game on paper. The athletic directors of the university have demanded a retraction of Whitney's article, which charged the Minnesota "U" with rank professionalism in its football course, but as yet the wily Casper has refused to take back anything whatever, and a big black spot still stands unremoved from the Gopher's football record.

Whitney's boast, if it did not prove that Prexy Northrop's college used professionals on its football team, brought out pretty clearly the fact that Parkyn, the physician, hypnotist and footballist, spent a couple of months in Minneapolis for the sake of playing on the university team and that he expected to receive something besides big muscles and that healthy look that all football finds acquire.

It is pretty well known that President Finlayson, of the athletic association, received a letter shortly after the close of the football season from Parkyn modestly requesting the remittance of a couple hundred dollars for services rendered, and the letter also stated several people connected with the varsity eleven. Parkyn even went so far as to appoint an attorney, in the person of C. D. Albert, to look after the matter and collect the money. Parkyn was never promised money, however, according to Manager Van Sant, nor did the hypnotist himself ever claim that he had received such a promise, and, as a result, the attorney's efforts to up the ante of the athletic association were futile.

The athletic directors of the university considered Parkyn's demand simply as a bluff and paid no attention whatever to his letter. And when the big Canadian found that none of the treasury surplus would be given to the players he made out to the effect that he had neither received nor been promised any compensation for playing on the Gopher team.

MANY BLAZES

Kept the Fire Department on the Move.

Cold weather and consequent efforts to warm dwelling houses gave the fire department a fair day's business yesterday, although all of the fires were small. A residence at 1809 Ninth avenue south, occupied by the families of William Collins and A. W. Smith was damaged to the extent of $500 by fire in the roof. A wood box in the rear of a residence on Second street caught fire, but was extinguished before the department arrived. About 11 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the city market was followed by a second and third alarm, owing to crossed wires, and considerable excitement was caused. The fire turned out to be nothing but a crossed electric wire in Anderson & Co.'s store on North Sixth street. A bale of hay in a store at 160 Washington avenue north caught fire, but did little damage. A dwelling house at 425 South Ninth street was slightly damaged by fire about 6 o'clock. A shower of sparks from a chimney at Fifteenth avenue south and Washington called out a portion of the department to that locality also, about 9 o'clock last night.

Has Plenty of Parents.

There is an old soldier at the soldiers' home who has probably had more experience with adventitious relatives than any one in the institution of the country. He fought in the last war for four years and never saw a battle, but the strain of his relationships was such that he was usually told refuge in the soldiers' home. One time he had the following paternal and maternal relatives: Own father, own mother, step-father, step-mother, three fathers-in-law and three mothers-in-law.

This complication of relatives is due to the fact that his mother and mother separated and married again, and that he has had three wives.

Minnie Wants a Convention.

The business men of Minneapolis, headed by the Commercial club, are to make an effort to secure for this city one of the three Republican state conventions which are to be held the coming spring. The Commercial club proposes to go right to work, and the first move will be to get in touch with members of the state committee by letter. For the benefit of the plan a circular will be issued, signed by President Calderwood and Secretary Danforth, giving the reasons why Minneapolis thinks she is entitled to consideration.

WONDERS OF VINO KOLAFRA IN AN AFRICAN NUT.

NATIVES WHO CHEW IT NOTED FOR MUSCULAR DEVELOPMENT AND ABILITY TO ENDURE HARDSHIP.

U. S. ARMY EXPERIMENTS.

Athletes Adopting It—A Specific for Inebriety, an Antidote for Opium and a Remedy for Many Human Ills.

The unbounded success which has attended the use of VINO KOLAFRA by colonial athletic trainers and the beneficial results derived from it by whole battalions of troops on march, and the recently reported experiments made by United States army authorities, is attracting the attention of the leading medical scientists of the world.

VINO KOLAFRA is a preparation from a nut called steraculia (also named Kolafra), a product of the West Indies and Africa. This nut is the fruit of a tree which grows from thirty to sixty feet in height. It is of darkish hue, irregular contour and about half the size of an egg. The fresh nut is constantly carried and used by the natives of the West Indies. These benefits are direct and potent. These nut chews are noted for their muscular development, symmetry of physique, power to endure hardship and toll, and apparent exemption from sickness and disease. They are bright, active and athletic, and attribute their condition to the use of the nut.

This article, in the form of VINO KOLAFRA, is now extensively used in this country by athletes in training, and physicians prescribe it in their treatment of patients.

It has been largely experimented with in army circles. A modified form of Kolafra, which is exactly the same in effect, has been adopted by the French and German armies as part of their marching rations, and it is now being tried in the United States Army with the view of adopting it for the same purpose, as in the language of Trainer Murphy, of the New York Athletic Club, "It is impossible to make a man die" while taking Kolafra, its tonic properties being invaluable.

Dr. A. G. Ghon, Medical Director U. S. Navy, Washington, in a detailed report of the action of this remedy made to the Naval Medical Service, says that he "had occasion to use it in the treatment of neurasthenia. The patient was a lady. Her nervous system was seriously deranged, she suffering with excruciating headache, nausea, insomnia, great nervousness, palpitation, intercostal neuralgia and impotence. After treatment with quinine, arsenic, iron, bitter tonics, guarana, etc., the symptoms were not mitigated. He then administered a prescription made from this nut with remarkable effect. The headache disappeared entirely, the appetite was restored, muscular vigor regained and mental depression relieved, refreshing sleep produced and the secretions became normal. The remedy caused no gastric disturbance or constipation, as had attended the prior use of Chocoma. The remarkably satisfactory result of this case induced him to recommend the remedy as a tonic, invigorant and invigorant and waste-producing agent in other neurasthenic cases. It produced its effects without marked excitement, and consequently with no after-effects of depression or exhaustion. It is a mental exhilarant, overcoming despondency and brightening the system without resultant languor. It imparts tone to the muscular apparatus and secretory organs."

In a subsequent article Dr. Ghon relates his opinion of the therapeutic value of this remedy, and cites the case of a physician's wife, who was a sufferer from neurasthenia, sick headache, great prostration and other nervous phenomena. The success in this case was as pronounced as in the one first stated. A few doses of the remedy was followed by a speedy abatement of the final disappearance of the customary monthly attack of headaches, which had been in all previous cases exceedingly persistent and intensely painful. These are only two of a long list of successful experiments with the article detailed in the leading medical journals.

VINO KOLAFRA is the form in which the nut is generally used, it being most palatable and agreeable to take. Its action on the system is that of a powerful tonic invigorant and stimulant. In the case of soldiers, athletes and persons undergoing unusual physical hardships, it stimulates the heart, causing a strong, regular pulse beat, producing an even stimulation of the whole muscular system, and at the same time, by its tonic and invigorant action, it produces a prolonged strength and endurance; allaying hunger, preventing all waste and restoring energy. Indeed, it may be called the "VINO KOLAFRA" of the system, leaving no detrimental reaction, as in the case of alcoholics, but generating and developing nervous force and muscular strength in Nature's own methods, penetrating to every part of the body, acting on every cell of blood, muscle and bone tissue until all portions are alike benefited.

As a stimulant in athletic training it is highly recommended by M. C. Murphy, trainer of the N. Y. A. C. and Yale College, by Arthur T. S. Jones, editor and proprietor of the New York Illustrated News, and numerous other athletes and trainers. The intense thirst provoked by athletic exertion is only aggravated by alcoholic stimulants. In VINO KOLAFRA is found a remedy which not only allays this thirst and alcohol craving, but prevents nausea, so often attendant upon overtraining. It maintains the equilibrium of the heart-beat, producing free and unlabored respiration during long tasks of active service.

The use of VINO KOLAFRA is also indicated in alcoholism. Dr. James D. McLaughlin, of Jamaica, N. Y., writes: "For inebriety it is a specific; a single fresh nut ground up and made into paste with water or spirits will cause all signs of inebriety to disappear in half an hour." It produces no bad effects, causes a sense of lightness and well being, nervous depression ceases and the mental condition of the patient is at once changed. It does not produce a habit, and the use can be discontinued at any time. It quickens the action of the digestive organs. It counteracts the effects of alcohol, opium, etc., and satisfies the inordinate craving for such stimulants, producing a feeling of contentment and rest.

In the recent athletic games between our representative athletes and those of England, the Britons acknowledged the superiority of training of the Americans. An important part of the superior system was the use by all our contestants of VINO KOLAFRA during training. The result was a long line of world record-breaking victories for our boys.

In the London Practitioner, Surgeon R. H. Firth, speaking of the remedy, says: "It favors increased oxidation of the tissues, has a peculiarly stimulating action on the nervous system, and, though not in itself a food, yet possesses qualities inherent which guard against exhaustion."

Kolafra has some properties analogous to those of coffee, tea, etc., but its remedial value is due to other and different powerful principles, vastly superior in effect, which facts point to the possibility of its superseding tea and coffee as a table beverage. Its medicinal use is indicated in anæmia, in chronic affections of a debilitating character, in nervous troubles, in convalescence from severe ailments, dyspepsia, biliousness, diabetes, diarrhoea, headache, etc. As before stated, the most convenient form for use in any case is VINO KOLAFRA, now being sold by druggists, and which is prepared by Johnson & Johnson, No. 32 William street, New York, the chemists who prepared the product for the Yale athletes and for the Government authorities.
