The czar of Russia seems to have captured Moscow. Oklahoma cyclones are now issued in weekly editions. There is trouble in Minneapolis every time a real ball team appears there.

Ex-Gov. Boies will find that free silver boat very full of holes before he sails it far. The political horizon is beginning to clear. Horace Boies is for Horace Boies for president.

Why does the burglar get in his perilous activity in the Seventh ward? There are other wards. By the way, the 18th of May and several other days have passed, and congress has not adjourned.

The czar of Russia has a beautiful "crest." He couldn't be elected to anything in this country on that. There is even now no danger that McKinley will make an "Alarm" Foraker secretary of anything.

Buffalo ought to locate a few feet further back from the lake. A four-story building tumbled down there yesterday. St. Louis hotel proprietors are laboring under the impression that people visiting the fine old Southern town in June want to buy hotels.

A Missouri parson is going to do gospel work on a wheel. He ought to start in by preaching to some of the "scorchers" of St. Paul. The grocers and butchers of Chicago are going to wage war on the ice trust. If it were earlier in the season they might use snow balls as weapons.

The majority in the Iowa Democratic convention will learn some day that "the stone which the builders rejected is become the cornerstone of the temple." Mr. Hanna's plan is to have McKinley nominated before the platform is reported or adopted. Thus will be carried to the end the "reticence of self-respect."

South Dakota's experience with ex-treasurer Taylor led the state to the conclusion that a good dollar is a good thing. Hence the preponderance of sound-money sentiment. "Give the people of this city plenty to eat, decent weather and fair sanitary conditions, and you'll find little sickness," says City Physician Weston. Then why don't you do it?

Iowa has three favorite sons for president in James B. Weaver, Horace Boies and William B. Allison. Iowa might come to the relief of the public a little by stating which is the favorite of her favorites. William McKinley should close up his place at Canton and betake himself to the mountains without leaving anybody his address. He is in danger when the Queens, Clarksons and Plattes start on tours to his home.

The intense and unexpressed satisfaction with which Republican papers greeted the adoption of free coinage resolutions by Democratic convention, should not set the members of the party yet.

Evan P. Howell, major general of the silver forces in the South, is talking through his hat after the manner of Tillman. He says: "If we cannot get what we want in Chicago, we will walk out and go off and form a party of our own." Why form a party? Why not bolt right into the Populist party?

CZAR TO HIS OWN

TRIUMPHAL ENTRY INTO MOSCOW BY THE IMPERIAL AUTOCRAT OF RUSSIA.

POMP BEYOND PARALLEL.

PRINCES, POTENTATES AND PRELATES CONTRIBUTED TO THE GLITTERING PAGEANT.

AT THE ASHES OF HIS FATHERS.

Memory of the Dead Czars and Russia's Sacred Relics Venerated by the Living.

MOSCOW, May 21.—The czar and czarina made their triumphal entry into this city this afternoon, amid the thunder of batteries of artillery, the clanging of countless bells and the cheers of a vast multitude of loyal Russians and equally enthusiastic visitors from all parts of the world. Probably never in the history of nations has there been such an assemblage of people. Possibly the gorgeous scene may never be repeated in its grand entirety.

At 1 o'clock, in anticipation of the coming of the czar, the entire route from Petrovski palace to the Kremlin was so densely packed with people that movement, except on the outskirts of the immense crowds, was out of the question. From 7 o'clock in the morning the route to be followed by the procession had been guarded by troops of infantry and cavalry, police on foot and on horseback, in uniform and in plain clothes, until the road may be said to have been lined by row after row, thickness after thickness of blood and iron. The weather was delightfully fine, a great relief after the bitterly cold and damp experiences of the past few days. The sunshine, however, had not had time to dry the muddy roads and streets, but everybody in a good humor.

The signal for the commencement of the day's movement was a salute of nine guns from a battery outside the city. This was followed by the dull booming of the big bell of the Cathedral of the Assumption, and the assembling of the troops at their various mustering points. Then the countless high dignitaries of the empire and of the foreign countries began to gather at the Petrovski palace, to take their places in gala equipages, or to escort on horseback the carriages of their imperial majesties. There were grand dukes and grand duchesses, princes and princesses, Asiatic potentates, innumerable representatives of every country under the sun, assembled to do honor to the czar of all the Russias, the ruler of the mighty empire which half circles the globe. Generals with their staffs, aides-de-camp riding at a break-neck speed, orderlies galloping furiously, were to be seen everywhere. The clash of arms resounded on all sides, and most impressive was the gathering of the hosts of the mighty emperor.

At 2:30 there was a thundering of cannon, this time from the direction of the Petrovski palace, and the living mass of men and women gave a great sigh of relief, for it was the signal that the czar had started on his journey to the Kremlin. The march was a joyous pealing of bells, the dull boom of the monster bell pleasingly muffled the clear, silver-like ring of the smaller bells, and giving forth welcome to the czar and czarina, their guests, to Russia and to the world in general, as represented in and about this old city.

The imperial procession was headed by a squad of mounted gendarmes, led by a master of police. After the police came a portion of the czar's bodyguard of Cossacks. Then came the grand marshal of the court in a state phaeton, drawn by six horses, bearing the insignia of his charge, and a squadron of the regiment of chevaliers of the guard of the Empress Marie Feodorovna. His majesty, the czar of Russia, on horseback, followed, and after him came the minister of his household, the minister of war, the aide de camp general commanding the military household of his majesty, an aide de camp general, one of the czar's aides de camp and other generals. Next in order came the Grand Duke Michael, Alexandrovitch, Cyril, Vladimirovitch, Boris, Alexis, Demetri, Nicholas, Nicholas, Michaelovitch, Alexander, Michaelovitch, Sergius Michaelovitch, the Princess Eugenie and George Maximilianovitch, Romanovsky, the Duke of Luchtenberg, the Princess Alexandra Petrovitch, Peter Alexandrovitch and Constantinovitch of Oldenburg; Duke George Mecklenburg-Strelitz and all the important foreign princes present, all on horseback. The aides de camp general in charge of the czar's military household, followed by a number of generals and aides de camp of the czar, the generals attached to their imperial majesties, as well as their aides de camp and the military suites of the foreign princes, all on horseback.

Her imperial majesty, the Czarina Marie Feodorovna, and her daughter, the Grand Duchess Olga Alexandrovna, came next in the imperial carriage, surrounded by the imperial suite, the czar's aides de camp, and the aides de camp of the czar, the generals attached to their imperial majesties, as well as their aides de camp and the military suites of the foreign princes, all on horseback. Her imperial majesty, the Czarina Marie Feodorovna, was in a state carriage, drawn by eight horses, each horse led by an equerry and with equeries riding and walking on both sides of it, preceded by an officer of the imperial stables on horseback, having pages right and left of the box and guarded by four Cossacks in state uniform. The vehicle was followed by six pages of the chamber and two equeries of the court, all on horseback. Her majesty, the queen of Greece, her imperial highness, the Grand Duchess Anastasia Mikhaelovna, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, her imperial highness, the Grand Duchess Maria Alexandrovna, Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and her imperial highness, the Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna, were in a state carriage, drawn by six horses, each horse led by an equerry and having equeries on horseback right and left of it, valets on foot on both sides and followed by two pages of the chamber and two equeries on horseback.

RECEPTION OF THE CZAR. After leaving the palace, the czar was received by the commander-in-chief of all the troops, the Grand Duke Sergius, and then the latter, with a most brilliant staff, joined in the procession. When the cortege entered the city a salute of seventy-one guns was fired from the top of the triumphal arch, amid the ringing of bells. Upon entering Moscow, his majesty was received by the czar's staff and aides-de-camp, and they joined the procession.

At the Resurrection Gate the czar dismounted from his horse, and the empress descended from their carriage in order to worship at the shrine of the Iberian Madonna, the most sacred of the many holy symbols in Moscow. At the shrine their majesties were received by the grand vicar of Moscow, who presented them with the cross and sprinkled them with holy water. Their majesties entered the chapel and knelt in prayer before the image. At the conclusion of their devotions, the czar remounted his horse, and the czarina entered her carriage, and they passed through the gate of the Saviour-Spasskiavorota into the Kremlin, where they were received with all the ecclesiastical pomp possible. After having venerated the holy relics and the holy images and prayed before the tombs of their ancestors, their imperial majesties went toward the Cathedral of the Annunciation, preceded and followed in the same manner. Upon leaving the Cathedral of the Archangel Michael their majesties found assembled at the door all the ladies of the court, who had accompanied the czar and czarina from the Cathedral of the Assumption. They followed their majesties to the door of the Cathedral of the Annunciation without entering it, although they were invited to do so by the imperial party to the palace of the Kremlin.

At the gate of the Cathedral of the Annunciation their majesties approached the holy images and relics in the same manner as before, and eventually left the sacred edifice for the palace, traversing the principal halls in state and being received everywhere with the highest ecclesiastical, military and civil honors.

At the moment their majesties entered the palace of the Kremlin an artillery salute of 101 guns was fired, and throughout the journey of their majesties the bells in all the belltowers in Moscow were tolled. The czar and czarina will remain at the palace in partial seclusion until May 25, when there will be a grand review of the troops, and the ceremony of the coronation of the imperial standard, which always occurs three days before the coronation. On May 22 and 23 the czar and czarina will receive the congratulations of the foreign ambassadors and other high dignitaries in the throne room of the Kremlin palace.

No money has been spared to make the coronation festivities memorable in Russian history, and up to the present, all efforts have been crowned with success. The Russian government is said to have spent $30,000,000 on the fetes up to the present time, and the city of Moscow is understood to have expended nearly as much money and more expenses have to be met. The illuminations will last for three evenings in succession, and will cost several millions of dollars to the government alone without counting what the city will contribute towards this portion of the expenses. Besides these, the czar and czarina will receive the congratulations of the foreign ambassadors and other high dignitaries in the throne room of the Kremlin palace.

A curious fact is that the three ancient thrones to be used in the coronation have been found up until they look as good as new in spite of their centuries of age. The ivory throne of Ivan III. had a careful washing and polishing. The first Romanoff's throne and the throne of Alexis Michailovitch have both been rubbed up as good as new.

It was understood that it was the emperor's intention to cancel all ministerial warnings against Russian newspapers and give them a new lease of life. It must be explained that the third warning given by a Russian newspaper by the press censors carries with it a single suppression. There is not a single newspaper of importance in St. Petersburg or Moscow that has not had two warnings hanging over its head for some years past. Consequently, editors who are afraid of being ruled by a third warning are careful to exclude from their papers everything except the most innocuous literature. It was understood that the young czar would relieve the press of this sword of Damocles hanging constantly over its head, but his ministers caused him to change his mind. Criminals and political prisoners will, however, not be forgotten.

The crowds of Americans expected to attend the ceremonies have not appeared. American Minister Brockbridge has a beautiful and comfortable house. Admiral Selfridge, of the United States navy, whose flagship, the Minneapolis, is lying in the roads at Cronstadt, has arrived, accompanied by the members of his staff.

QUEEN WILHELMINA BETROTHED. Prince Bernhard Henry of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach to become consort.

LONDON, May 21.—The betrothal of Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands to Prince Bernhard Henry of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, is announced here today. Prince Henry is a grandson of the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach. The girl queen of the Netherlands is very popular in England. On the occasion of her visit to London the press was unanimous in expressing the hope that she would choose some one of the English princes to be her consort. She is only sixteen years old and succeeds to the throne on the death of her father, King Wilhelm III. The Princess Emma was her mother. Emma was the daughter of Prince George Victor of Waldeck. Queen Wilhelmina's education was matter of great solicitude on the part of her father. The king hated Germany and the Germans cordially and never permitted his daughter to learn the German language. This fact serves to give the marriage of the young queen a tinge of romance, which had otherwise been lacking. Her betrothal, Prince Bernhard Henry, is the second son of the late Grand Duke Charles, who died two years ago. He is eighteen years of age and is a lieutenant in the Fifth Thuringian infantry.

SPECIAL JAIL REGULATIONS. They Will Apply to the Pretoria Prisoners.

LONDON, May 21.—Joseph Chamberlain, in the house of commons, today stated that he had just received a telegram from the British agent at Pretoria, to the effect that President Kruger had promised that special jail regulations would be formed and made applicable to the Johannesburg reform prisoners, and also that proper accommodations would be provided for them. Mr. Chamberlain added that it was probable the prisoners would not be separated.

Indemnity Paid. CONSTANTINOPLE, May 21.—The British, French and Russian embassies have each received checks of £10,000 as indemnity for the outrages at Jiddah in May last, when the British consul and vice consul, the Russian acting consul and the French consul secretary were attacked and shot by Bedouins, outside the town.

Rice County Boy to Be Middy. Special to the Globe. MONTGOMERY, Minn., May 21.—Patrick McEnlee received a telegram from Annapolis, Md., informing him that his eldest son, William, had passed a favorable examination and had captured the prize of the naval cadetship from the Third congressional district of Minnesota. Mr. McEnlee is an old resident of this place and one of our substantial business men. His son was born in Erin town, Rice county, nineteen years ago, and was educated in our public school. He will sail for England on a tour of the world in about a month.

FARMING IN THE RED LAKE COUNTRY.

VAST INLAND SEA. MILES UPON MILES OF THE RED RIVER COUNTRY UNDER WATER.

SITUATION IS DISCOURAGING. UNDER BEST OF CIRCUMSTANCES FARM WORK WILL BE MUCH DELAYED.

THE DAMAGE WILL BE SLIGHT. Flood Already Receding—High Water at Cloquet and at Other Points.

CROOKSTON, Minn., May 21.—Although the flood in this section of the country has begun to recede, the situation is truly discouraging. There has been nothing like it for years. Shallow lakes cover the prairie for miles in every direction. Many farms are almost entirely under water, and where they are not the soil is saturated to such an extent that it will be weeks under the most favorable circumstances before any farm work can be done. The extent to which the country is covered with water can be guessed at from the fact that one can start from Warren, Minn., in a boat and row to Hallock, forty miles north, and not be obliged to portage the boat to exceed three miles for that distance. Or, to put it another way, it would be unsafe for an inexperienced man to drive three miles in any direction from the Great Northern track between Warren and Hallock. When it is remembered that this country is usually dry prairie, too dry at times for the best crop results, it is possible, perhaps, from these suggestions to catch a glimpse of the condition in that section at this time.

The crop outlook is exceedingly unpromising in the northern counties. The reports of soil condition have in no way been exaggerated; there is mud wherever the water has left a place uncovered, and it must not be understood that this mud is the ordinary kind. It is almost a quagmire, so deep that no driver ventures upon it except in favored places. The streets of the towns are impassable, and they are in large part deserted.

The seeding has been practically completed in all this section, though some of it is late. The water is not putting a stop to farm work in this section, generally speaking, but it is threatening the life of the seed in the ground. The opinion is that not much damage will be done, however.

The Red Lake river at Crookston is pouring its flood over the town, and not since in the seventies has anything like it been seen. Nearly a hundred residences are under water, some buried to the eaves. The property loss has been heavy, many poor people being deprived of all they had in the world—their modest home furnishings. The more fortunate residents have opened their doors to the flood sufferers. The city council voted to feed the people until homes could be secured, either in new places, where old ones had been hopelessly wrecked, or until the old ones could be again occupied.

The water reached from the river toward the business center of the city nearly three blocks. Whole streets are under water and the sidewalks are floating around in the motionless pool like so many rafts. On the west side of town the big dam at the Walker mill is entirely submerged, and the river flows smoothly over it with no suggestion in its surface of a fall. The streets are practically impassable, even above the flood line. The heavy clay bed has been soaked until it has become a mire on which only an occasional driver ventures. There is no such thing as a pleasure drive in this whole country.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., May 21.—More rain yesterday and last night makes prospects for the Red river valley look still more dubious. The high water of the Red river has reached here and the flats are flooded, but nothing serious. Another day's rain will put the city under water. PEMBINA, N. D., May 21.—The river was rising rapidly yesterday. The same sea of mud is observed here as further south. The main business street is closed for two blocks because of the mud and danger of miring.

CLOQUET, Minn., May 21.—The C. N. Nelson Lumber company and Cloquet Lumber company's mills have shut down for a week because of high water, and may not start up this week. Several thousand ties on the Kettle and Moose river drives have gone into the woods, the streams being so swollen that they could not be held together. One small stream, usually twenty feet wide, is now a quarter of a mile in width in some places.

NEBHE, N. D., May 21.—High water in the Pembina and heavy rains prevent the farmers from seeding. The country is in a very bad condition. The number of acres of wheat will not be one-third of previous years. Mr. Mayer, of Wallhalla, lost 200 hogs through the high water at that place, the river going up six feet in one night.

ST. PIER, Minn., May 21.—The Tamarac river is overflowing its banks and the country is, in many places, under water. The railroad has been washed out in several places between here and Warren. It was reported this morning that Jerry Murphy, a farmer living east of here, was drowned last night while attempting to rescue his hogs from the flood.

MILACA, Minn., May 21.—The five-year-old son of Eric Blomberg was drowned in Rum river Tuesday evening. The log drives are all coming along in fine shape, and the Foley-Bean mill is running night and day.

ST. VINCENT, Minn., May 21.—From Saturday noon until Sunday night there was a steady rain. Farmers from different parts of St. Vincent and Clow townships all agree that the land is drowned worse than any time in their experience in these townships. Two farmers are already reported to be dead in the wet places will be killed, second, that the sun will bake the land and turn the soft wheat blades yellow.

SILVERITES MAY BOLT. Secret Meeting of the Faction Held at Aberdeen.

Special to the Globe. ABERDEEN, S. D., May 21.—Only vaguest rumors are afloat regarding the actual proceedings of the free silver conference in this city early this morning. Local Democrats were not invited, and trains left so closely upon the adjournment of the meeting that no opportunity was given for interviews. It was a secret meeting of a very few of the faithful, headed by such leaders as Lynch, of Beadle, and Fellows, of Aurora. It is rumored that a contesting delegation was actually named, but no Democrat in the city has a list of the alleged delegates, and does not positively know that any were elected. There are strong reasons for believing that the conference was more to discuss methods and plans for another state gathering of the free silver wing of the Democracy for the purpose of electing a straight delegation to Chicago. Col. Lynch declared in favor of this plan, and it is known others viewed it as he did. The silver Democrats present at the convention, but for the fact that the entire Black Hills was practically in control of three gold men, who were headed down with proxies, and that the convention permitting them to vote put the silver forces in a minority. Had the silverites bolted on the admission of these proxies, and they now regret they did not, they claim they could have broken up the convention and made a strong case. The convention attracted widespread interest. Probably 200 telegrams were received here from members of congress and government officials, urging their respective factions to stand pat and make no compromise.

DOMINION TO RETALIATE. Minister McDonald Will Propose a Contract Labor Law.

Special to the Globe. WINNIPEG, Man., May 21.—In addressing electors here tonight Hon. Hugh John McDonald, minister of the interior, said he would give immediate attention to the influx of Chinese and Japanese immigrants into the United States government through alien labor law and would endeavor to have placed on the Canadian statute book an act worded precisely the same as the United States law, and would do this on the ground that "what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." This announcement was received with cheers.

IT HAS THE GLITTER AND ASSAYERS CLAIM THAT IT IS THE GENUINE YELLOW METAL.

GOLD ON THE EAU CLAIRE. ORE FOUND WHOSE ATRIFEROUS QUALITIES WARRANT ITS BEING MINED.

COMPANY WILL BE FORMED. Capital and Latest Improved Machinery Needed to Work the New Field.

Special to the Globe. EAU CLAIRE, Wis., May 21.—The latest news from the gold mines, in the town of Seymour, on the Eau Claire river, established the fact beyond all peradventure that gold ore, which can be worked at a profit, exists within twelve miles of this city. Messrs. Sharpless & Winchell, of Minneapolis, have recently made an assay of specimens sent from Big Falls, on the Eau Claire river, which yielded $11.88 to the ton in gold and 22 cents in silver.

W. Lehman, of St. Paul, assayed one specimen, which yielded $1,262.50 to the ton in gold and $1.62 in silver, and another specimen which showed $20 per ton in gold and $3.40 in silver. Prof. Appleby, of Minneapolis, an expert on mining and metallurgy, found traces of gold in a specimen sent to him for examination.

Ten years ago ore which yielded $20 a ton would not have been considered worthy of attention; but, with improved methods of extracting, conditions have changed. Within ten years processes have been invented which make profitable the mining of ore that does not yield over $7.50 a ton. Gold was first discovered on the Eau Claire river some ten years ago by James Patrick. He had no means, and tried to induce Eau Claire capitalists to invest, but without success. He came at an unlucky time. They had just emerged from a bitter experience in iron mining shares, which, like the money in the Eastern fable, turned to leaves. Many a galled jade here still winces at the mere mention of ore, or traces, or indications, or veins, or anything of that sort.

About a year ago J. D. Morgan & Co., of St. Paul, who have had experience in developing mines and quarries, took hold. They have proceeded quietly to develop the mines, using their own means, and have established the fact that gold ores in paying quantities can be had in the region stated.

Twenty-dollar ore may be taken out and hauled a long distance. The amount expended for carriage would bear too large a proportion to the value. What is needed here are plants of the best sort for treating the low-grade ores. High-grade ores may be taken to the mill, but low-grade ores must have the mill taken to it. There is no special boom at present, but when the fact becomes known that paying ores exist here, investment will undoubtedly follow. It takes gold to get gold everywhere.

MERRY CYCLE WAR ON. Duluth Ordinance Not Well Received by Wheelmen.

Special to the Globe. DULUTH, Minn., May 21.—At the last meeting of the city council an ordinance was passed limiting the speed of bicycles, requiring the use of bells and lanterns and keeping bicycles off the sidewalks. Today the ordinance went into effect and as a result there is war between the cyclists and the police. Early this morning cyclists with cow bells, whistles and other instruments of torture came out and paraded the streets. They were ordered to stop or they would be arrested for disorderly conduct, and some obeyed. One boy fourteen was arrested, but was released later. Tonight gangs, cow bells, engine headlights, common stable lanterns and other facetious ideas are being sprung, and police this afternoon chased several cyclists with the idea of arresting them. As the police had no wheels their prey escaped.

Given Up by the Waves. Special to the Globe. ASHLAND, Wis., May 21.—Ever since E. P. Redden disappeared last fall while on a hunting trip his friends have been searching for his body. It was always supposed he was drowned, and this was confirmed this afternoon, when his body was found floating in Chocomaugon bay.

Burglars Got the Cash. Special to the Globe. JAMESTOWN, N. D., May 21.—Burglars entered the office of the Andrews & Gage Elevator company at Pingree and stole $340.

FOOTPADS TAKEN IN

RONDO STREET OFFICERS CLEVERLY CAPTURE A BRACE OF HIGHWAYMEN.

EACH HAD A GUN AND A MASK.

WERE LYING IN WAIT FOR A VICTIM WHEN POUNCED UPON.

THEY ARE MINNEAPOLIS MEN.

Believed to Be Two of the Three Who Terrorized the Hill Monday Night.

George Harris and Frank Hill are locked up at the Rondo street station. They are supposed to be two of the trio of footpads who held up three St. Paul citizens within an hour last Monday night.

The two prisoners are tough men beyond question; and the police say there is not the slightest doubt but what they are the "gun grabbers" for whom the law has a rod in soak.

Harris and Hill were captured while lying in wait for a victim, and were rounded up by as clever a piece of police work as has been done anywhere. Capt. Lowell and his officers have good reason to congratulate themselves on the quick success of their efforts, and deserve a great deal of credit for last night's work.

For several nights back half a dozen officers have been detailed in citizens' clothes to patrol the hill district. The territory was so divided that no two would cross each other, yet all would be within hailing distance. After the encouraging hauls made Monday night the robbers evidently considered it the part of wisdom to lay low until the excitement had died out. Hence the waiting officers did not even get a glimpse of their quarry until last evening at 10:30.

At the hour named Officers Smith and Meyers were near the corner of Grand avenue and Avon street. They noticed two men walking north, a block away, and a once began to shadow them. When Harris and Hill reached the corner of Avon street and Ashland avenue they lay down behind a tree on the grass, between the sidewalk and the curb. The place where they lay is slightly raised above the sidewalk, and from this vantage point they had a clear view in four directions.

When they planned themselves they evidently did not notice Officers Mellale and Schilling, who were leisurely approaching; or, if they did see them, the highwaymen were going to let the two pedestrians get right up to them, or pass them, before calling a halt. One of them had partially risen and the other was resting in a handy position on one arm, so that he could spring to his feet in a moment. No doubt it was surprise that prevented them changing their positions when the two officers quickly stepped from the sidewalk and accosted them.

"What are you fellows doing here?" asked Mellale sharply as he laid hands on Harris. "Just resting," responded the thief, but before he had finished his answer the place officers had a safe hold on his man, Mellale taking Harris and Schilling grabbing Hill. Instinctively the officers put out a hand to feel for the hidden weapons of their prisoners. And they found just what they were looking for. Harris had a 38-caliber bulldog revolver, fully loaded, in the right hand pocket of his coat. Hill had a similar weapon in his hip pocket. They collapsed as soon as the shotguns were taken from them; but as soon as these had been safely put away Mellale noticed something about the neck of Harris. He reached for it and pulled out a mask, which was tied in such a manner that it could be instantly raised to cover the upper part of the face. While Mellale pulled the mask up Harris' face to see how it looked Schilling was looking for a similar bit of paraphernalia on Hill. He found it in a coat pocket. It was exactly like the one Harris had; in fact, the two masks are but two halves of a pair, and when they are placed together and the upper part of the face is covered, the two masks are but two halves of a pair, and when they are placed together and the upper part of the face is covered, the two masks are but two halves of a pair.

Just as the footpads had been landed by Officers Mellale and Schilling, Officers Smith and Meyers joined the group, and the prisoners were questioned. Harris did most of the talking. He had just been taking a walk. They claimed to have been in such a place which was tied in such a manner that it could be instantly raised to cover the upper part of the face. While Mellale pulled the mask up Harris' face to see how it looked Schilling was looking for a similar bit of paraphernalia on Hill. He found it in a coat pocket. It was exactly like the one Harris had; in fact, the two masks are but two halves of a pair, and when they are placed together and the upper part of the face is covered, the two masks are but two halves of a pair.

The badly wanted pair was marched down to the Rondo station, where Detective Sweetney sized them up as Minneapolis thieves. In their pockets were found poker chips marked "Brown's," and there in such a place in the Hill City. They had no money worth mentioning, and very likely they have gambled away what they secured from Messrs. Harris and Schilling. Fortunately, however, if they are the men who did the work Monday night.

Both prisoners are smooth shaven, though in need of the services of a barber. They are intelligent looking, and wise enough to talk very little. Harris is about thirty-three years of age, and stands fully six feet high. Harris is only of medium height, but he is an athletic, determined-looking chap.

When they were locked up Hill undressed and lay down, but did not go to sleep. He lay on his back, with the bed clothes pulled up under his chin, staring through the bars at the flickering gas jets. In the next cell to him was an uneasy party who had evidently been drinking so much that he was inclined to be cranky when woke up. Across the narrow aisle Harris had thrown himself on the bed without removing even his coat or shoes. He lay on his side, with his Derby hat partially covering his face. When spoken to he was "dead to the world," and not a word could be gotten out of him.

Lieut. Pendy was very much regretting last night that they had not also caught the third robber. He is thought to be the one who was with Harris and Schilling, and who knocked out and badly injured J. R. Warner. The gentlemen who were held up and robbed Monday night will be asked to take a look at the two prisoners this morning, and if they are identified. Fortunately, the masks can be put on, and thus rigged out the men will not be able to escape identification. If they are really the ones wanted, and no person who saw them last night seems to have any doubt on this point. It is hardly likely that the men will be arraigned in court today, as they may be prevailed upon to tell who the third man is.
