MOSCOW IN A BLAZE OF GLORY.

Bells Pealed and Cannon Thundered to Do Honor to the Newly Crowned Czar.

MOSCOW, May 26.—His majesty, the Emperor Nicholas Alexandrovich, autocrat of all the Russias, and her majesty, the Empress Alexandra Feodorovna, were solemnly crowned today in the Cathedral of the Assumption, with the utmost ceremony and in accordance with all the religious forms and ancient rites. At 7 o'clock this morning the ceremonies commenced with a salute of cannon shots, marking the opening of the day, and at the same hour the bells of the Cathedral of the Assumption began ringing. Half an hour later the court dignitaries and distinguished persons who were to take part in the imperial coronation began to assemble in the halls of the palace and in the cathedral. The ladies were in court dress, and the dignitaries wore full uniform. The envoys extraordinary and the time had arrived for the departure of the imperial cortege, and the latter moved toward the cathedral. The grand procession was headed by the heavy guns of the ex-Empress Marie Feodorovna. These were followed by Cossack soldiers and people, delegations from the nobility, the senate and the clergy, with banners and insignia, borne by high court dignitaries. Included the collar of the order of St. Andrew, of the czarina, the sword, the standard and the seal of the empire; imperial mantles of their majesties, the globe; the scepter, and the crowns of the empress and emperor. As their majesties approached the entrance of the metropolitan of Moscow pronounced the usual allocation, the metropolitan of St. Petersburg presented the cross of their majesties, and the metropolitan of Kiev presented them with holy water. Entering the cathedral, their majesties bowed to the knee three times before a holy door, and venerated the saintly images. They afterwards took their seats on the throne of the Czar, Michael Feodorovitch and John III. The archbishops, archdeacons and officiating clergymen placed themselves in two ranks before the throne and the holy door, and the choir chanted the psalm "Misericordiam ad iudicium Cantabo Tibi, Domine." The dignitaries carrying the imperial mantles stationed themselves on the first step. Other auxiliaries to the paganant sword of the empire stood on the second step of the throne, while the bearer of the standard occupied a position on the third step. Other auxiliaries to the paganant sword were grouped about in order. The ceremony of the coronation and anointment was then accomplished as follows: The metropolitan of St. Petersburg mounted the steps of the throne, placed himself in front of the emperor, and invited his majesty to make before his faithful subjects, and in a loud voice, his profession of orthodox faith, and presented him with the open book from which the emperor recited the symbol of the faith. After this the metropolitan of St. Petersburg pronounced the ritual. The metropolitans of St. Petersburg and Victims Were on Their Way to Attend a Sham Battle at Macaulay Point.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 26.—A bulletin just received from Victoria by the Post-Intelligencer says sixty bodies have been recovered at 10 o'clock. VICTORIA, B. C., May 26.—A terrible accident occurred here today. A sham fight and review was to take place at Macaulay Point this afternoon, and crowds were making their way there by every route. All the tram cars were packed. Two cars left Government street with more than 100 people. The first got over Point Elliot bridge, which crosses Victoria Arm, safely, but when the water was about half way over, the middle span of the bridge, about 150 feet in length, gave way, and the car plunged into the water some 150 feet below. The car was completely submerged, and all on board were drowned, with the exception of some of those who were standing on the platform, and who, escaping injury from falling timbers, managed to save themselves by using the floating ruins of the bridge, and thus got ashore. Numbers of the bodies have already been gotten up, and the work of identification is proceeding. It is a difficult matter, as a great many of the bodies are those of visitors. So far as known the dead are: James McCurdy, Port Townsend. Mrs. Adams, widow, Victoria. Frank Adams, her son. E. B. Carmichael, of Victoria, and his wife. J. B. Gordon, of Vancouver, representative of Bradstreet's. Mr. Edmond, of Victoria. James Logan, of Spring Ridge. Mr. Boss, a storekeeper, of Victoria. Arthur Fullerton, son of W. E. Fullerton, Spring Ridge, Victoria. Mrs. Heatherbell, wife of William Heatherbell, Victoria. Mr. Wilson, a prominent citizen of Victoria. Van Bokkell, Port Townsend. Miss Annie Keast, daughter of Arthur Keast, deputy registrar of the supreme court, Victoria. Charles Leverage, of Spring Ridge, Victoria. G. L. Post, Victoria. E. B. Carmichael, commission agent. Master Post, son of G. L. Post. Miss Biggar, aged six, son of George W. Biggar. Miss Biggar, aged five, daughter of George W. Biggar. Rank Orestat, bootblack. Miss Minnie Robertson, daughter of W. A. Robertson. Mrs. E. B. Carmichael. Holmes, bookkeeper of Sayward Milling company. Miss Sophia Smith. Miss Birt Ancoates, Washington. William Pearson. Miss Thelma. Miss Misses Bowne. Miss Jackson. Misses Bowne. A son of Sergeant Major Hutchney, Emma Olsen. Miss Van Ilford. James M. Patterson. Gabriel Matera. George Deane. Mr. Jackson, a cattleman. Mrs. Woodhouse, Seattle. Miss Jackson, a nurse. H. T. Talbot, motorman. George Farr, conductor. Misses Bowne. Misses Bowne. Miss Ida Goodacre, Tacoma. Miss Ida Goodacre, known to have been on the car and are missing. Aldus Tupper, above. Victoria, head buty cut; Canon Paddon, of Victoria, bruised and badly cut; W. Biggar, bruised and badly cut; Dr. Lange, badly bruised. When the bridge broke there were several carriages on the structure, and these were also precipitated into the water. Supt. Wilson was driving one of these, and had his five children with him. The children, the fifth, a little boy, was wedged between some iron bars and was drowned. The sad affair has cast a deep gloom over the city. As soon as the news of the accident reached McCallay the review was brought to an speedy termination as under the circumstances was possible, and the sham fight was abandoned.

ONE OF IDAHO'S MARSHALS

RECOVERS A KIDNAPED GIRL IN AN EAST ST. PAUL HOME.

SAGE BRUSH, SAND AND SENSE

Unite in the Instrument Which Returns a Stolen Baby to Her Mother.

"I will start for Idaho with that little girl and her mother tonight. I will see that she gets there all right, or there will be some shooting on the way. If it comes to that I can probably get my iron out as quickly as any man who tries to take the girl away from me." That was the way Deputy United States Marshal Sidney J. Roberts expressed himself to a reporter of the Globe yesterday at the Astoria hotel, talking about the final trip in an interesting case of kidnaping which he had finally run to earth in St. Paul. Roberts wasn't talking to hear himself either. He is built differently. For years he has been in the service of the United States government. He has traveled around the sage brush of Idaho and earned the reputation of being a fearless officer and a good man for a criminal to keep far away from as possible. He is known throughout Idaho as "Sid" Roberts, and he is just as determined as some of the desperate characters whose bullets have left scars on his arms and body. Roberts has heretofore been called upon to look after a different class of criminal work. But last January James City, Idaho, had a sensation, caused by James Dowling, Dowling formerly lived in St. Paul, but went West some years ago and finally opened a saloon in Salmon City. He married the daughter of a pioneer of that place, and things moved along much the same as they usually do for a year or two. Then Dowling fell out with his wife, and the case went to a divorce. A pretty little girl who had been born to them, which was two and a half years old. The court decided that Mrs. Dowling should have the little girl. That was Jan. 6 this year, and at the particular time that the judge made the decision Salmon City had had one of the biggest sensations that it had had for many years. Dowling is a nervy and determined character. He drew a revolver when he heard of the decision and walked out of the court room with his little girl. He managed to slip the little one out of the state, but was himself captured and sent to jail. He, however, broke out of jail and is now a fugitive from justice. With the disappearance of the little girl began a search on the part of the mother for her. Three months passed before any trace of her was found. Then there went an inkling to Idaho that the little girl was in Montana, and Mr. Roberts was started out to try and find her. "It was all new business to me," said Mr. Roberts yesterday. "I have been used to prowling around in the sage brush. I've chased Indians and been in some pretty tough places. My arm is covered with bullet wounds, and I've been shot frequently, but when it came to taking hold of a kidnaping case I didn't know much about it. I had never been in a city before till I came to St. Paul four days ago on this hunt. But I did the best I could. I first got track of her in Great Falls, Mont., four weeks ago, and then began the chase. She was in care of a woman who is traveling around with a commercial traveler. From Great Falls I followed them to Janesville, Wis.; then to Zanesville, O.; back to La Crosse, then to Janesville again, and at last to St. Paul. Here I found her at the home of her grandmother on Conway street. As soon as I had located her I kept her close watch on her house and wired to her mother, after consulting the governor, wired that her mother was necessary, and said to hold the little child until she came. She CAIRO, Ill., May 26.—A hurricane and cloud-burst struck this city this morning. Thirteen lives are known to have been lost by the sinking of a steam ferryboat. Numbers of trees were destroyed and signs blown down, but no houses were destroyed, nor lives lost in the city. REMEMBERED IN GERMANY. BERLIN, May 26.—Emperor William and staff, in the presence of the Russian embassy, this afternoon reviewed the Alexandra dragons and Alexander guards. The emperor afterwards exhorted the regiments to be worthy of the honor of having the czar and czarina in their commanders. He then called for cheers for their majesties.

CORONATION CROWN OF THE EMPRESS OF RUSSIA.

Empress Alix, of Russia, has a crown of her own, and was crowned by the emperor as well as the crown upon the head of the empress. Then the czar put on the czarina her imperial robe and her diamond collar. The czar and the czarina, the ladies also arrange. The empress then returns to her own throne and the emperor returns to the orb and scepter.

THE CROWN ASSUMED.

One of the assistants of his majesty adjusted the imperial mantle. His majesty received the pontifical benediction of the metropolitan of St. Petersburg, who placed his hands on the czar's head in the form of a cross, reciting the two prayers prescribed by the ritual. The prayers terminated, the emperor ordered that the imperial crown be presented to him. Thereupon, the metropolitan of St. Petersburg took the imperial crown and handed it to the emperor, who took it in his hands and placed it on his head. The metropolitan then in a loud voice pronounced the prescribed allocation. In a similar manner his majesty caused to be presented to him the scepter and the globe, and having taken the scepter in his right hand and the globe in his left hand he seated himself on the throne. A few moments later his majesty arose and placed the scepter and globe in the hands of the archbishop who called upon his majesty, the empress Alexandra Feodorovna, to approach, and who knelt beside him on a velvet cushion, richly embroidered with gold. His majesty thereupon seated himself on the throne, and his own head and touched with it the forehead of the empress. He then replaced the crown upon his own head. His majesty afterwards took up the crown of the empress and placed it on the head of her majesty. Her majesty's imperial mantle and the collar of the Order of St. Andrew were next presented with the same ceremony. The empress and her majesty took the throne, while the emperor again took the scepter in his right hand and the globe in his left. The archdeacon next proclaimed the imperial title in extenso. The bells of the cathedral and all the other sacred edifices throughout Moscow were rung, and a salute of 101 cannon shots were fired. The emperor then arose, handed the scepter and the globe to the archbishop, and came down to recite from the book presented him by the metropolitan of St. Petersburg, the prayer prescribed for the occasion. The prayer terminated, the metropolitan of St. Petersburg read a short allocution in the emperor and the choir intoned the "Te Deum" to the sound of the bells of all the churches of the Kremlin. During this ceremony the czar stood with his hands joined. The reading of the Holy Gospel followed, and two of the archbishops presented the Holy Book to their majesties to kiss. The anthem terminated, and the officiating clergy intoned the "Kyrie eleison." The holy door was open, the two archbishops, assisted by archdeacons, advanced from the altar towards his majesty to announce to the latter that the holy ceremony of the anointment was to begin. Thereupon his majesty having handed his sword to one of his august assistants, descended from the throne, and, preceded by the scepter, the globe and the crown, went towards the holy door, followed by the Empress Alexandra Feodorovna. On both sides of his majesty were his assistants. HOLY UNCTION. After the holy unction, his majesty placed himself on the right, in front of the image of the Saviour, and the empress approached the holy door, where the metropolitan of St. Petersburg anointed her on the forehead, pronouncing the words of the ritual. The metropolitan of St. Petersburg afterwards introduced the emperor into the sanctuary by the holy door, the other prelates officiating holding up the imperial mantle from the moment he passed the door. Subsequently the emperor received the holy communion as it is prescribed in the ritual. Continued on Third Page.
