

error of the State of Minnesota, will cause to be paid out of the treasury of said state the sum of Three Hundred Dollars ($300) for the arrest and conviction of the perpetrators of said crime or for such information as will lead to the arrest and conviction.

A full description of the murderers can be secured at the St. Paul and Duluth offices of the St. Paul & Duluth Railroad Company. Dr. M. C. CLOVER.

When Mrs. Foster learned of the tragedy, despite her physical condition, she hastened to the city and joined her husband at St. Joseph's. Her great grief was that the doctor had not tamely submitted to being held up.

Both Paul and Hayes were shot in the head by the man who stood at the door keeping guard. The man who beat Dr. Foster about the head with his weapon did not fire a shot.

The St. Paul and Duluth officers, the officers of Washington County and operatives of all the local detective associations were all men at work on the case.

From telegrams received by Chief Goss there seems to be some doubts as to just how many were concerned in the hold up and murder.

Dr. Foster stated that only two men and as both of the thugs he had dealings with were masked no particular description of them can be secured.

The doctor noticed that the man who was engaged in searching him was smaller than the one who stood near the door but as to any more minute description he is not able to give.

Persons who were attracted to the scene of the murder say that three men were seen to run down the railroad track after the shooting.

at that point. The men put out, but when they returned to the shore and made for the woods. The fact that the oars in the boat at the time could not be used to row with was supposed to be a coming do with their return to the shore.

The fellows who disappeared in the woods in the direction of the shore were supposed to be a large and a small man. The taller of the two was of a heavy build, broad shouldered, and dressed in dark clothing.

WILLIAM SCHEFFNER SHOTS HIS SON PAUL, AND THEN KILLS HIMSELF.

LOVE MATCH OF A DAUGHTER

PRECIPITATES A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN A FAIRFIELD AVENUE FAMILY.

IN DEFENDING HIS MOTHER Paul Scheffner Receives a Possibly Fatal Wound at the Hands of His Father.

William Scheffner attempted to murder his wife and son Paul yesterday morning, and although he did not succeed in the attempt he successfully fired a bullet into his head a minute afterward, and died the death of a suicide.

The scene of the attempted murder and suicide was the one-story frame dwelling at 75 West Fairfield avenue on the street corner.

William Scheffner, who was 48 years old, came to St. Paul from Germany five years ago. A year after he came here his wife and four children followed him.

The family had resided on the west side since coming to the city, and in the immediate neighborhood of the place where the crime was committed.

The family included Scheffner, his wife, two daughters and two sons. For the past two years Scheffner has not done much work, or, at least, he has not worked at anything for more than a few weeks at a time.

His youngest daughter obtained, through the efforts of her father, a place as domestic on a farm near Mendota.

Since securing the place the youngest son, a lad of 12 years, also went to the farm. This left Scheffner, his wife and son Paul, about 22 years old, in the city.

Paul, who was a bright and energetic young man, had secured a position as clerk in a restaurant, and was working at restaurants washing dishes.

Scheffner attempted to raise chickens, and had a small plot of ground in the rear of the house in which the industry was prosecuted.

He had a young son, Paul, who was 22 years old, in the city. Paul, who was a bright and energetic young man, had secured a position as clerk in a restaurant.

quest was unnecessary, and the body was taken to Henry's undertaking rooms. Mrs. Scheffner was unwept by the affair, and while not appearing to bewail the death of her husband in any great extent, labored under the impression that her son had been killed and refused to believe that he was not dead.
