

The Globe's Busy People's.

THE LABOR WORLD.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM ALL THE TRADE SECTIONS.

No cause worth the winning was ever won without some effort. Come to the meetings of your unions, and if you have a thought that you believe will help the cause of labor, express it. It may be the key which will solve the difficulty.

The Midland Mechanic, published at Kansas City, Mo., the largest general weekly labor paper in the world, as an advertising medium is highly appreciated by not only the business men of that city, but throughout the entire country. Thirty columns of advertisements out of fifty-six of printed matter is not an uncommon occurrence with the Mechanic. It also has a sworn circulation of 5,000 copies per week, and still increasing. Who says the laboring classes do not read?

There are 40,000 organized from molders in the United States. Over 7,000 have united with the unions during the past year.

Reports from officials in attendance on the Retail Clerks' National Protective Association at Denver, Col., show that the organization has been instituted during the past year, and that the membership of the order is now over 30,000.

The Houston (Texas) labor council has adopted the socialist labor platform in its entirety.

Hundreds of Italians are daily landing at Castle Garden. They are the kind that are bringing the wages of American labor down to fifty cents a day. It is better to prevent their coming now than to take the chances of a revolution in the future.

A steel plant is to be started in Russia. It will be under the control of the government and operated by American workmen.

There are 190,750 organized labor men in the state of Illinois. Of these 113,240 reside in Chicago. There are 370,300 persons dependent for their support upon the 113,240 unionists in that city.

So long as the United States is made the dumping ground of labor from other countries just so long will the wages of the American artisan be threatened. Stop immigration and the solution of the wage question is easy.

A convention of delegates from all the Brewers' unions in the United States and Canada will be held at Cincinnati, beginning Sunday, Sept. 20.

A large number of representative students and advocates of social reform are profoundly interested, says the Coming Nation in the proposed organization at St. Louis on Friday, July 24, of the "Brotherhood of the Co-operative Commonwealth," the principal object of which will be to educate the people in the principles of industrial freedom. The promoters of this grand idea believe that it is patent to the world that the present condition of warring interests, misaligned civilization, has reached the climax of its development, and that until a new social order expressive of the central law of universal life, the brotherhood of man and solidarity of human interests is evolved, the cause of the nation, as of all others, will be steadily downward. Some of the most prominent people in the country will take part in the deliberation of the convention, and it is expected that great good to the common people will result therefrom.

Among other important measures passed at the eighth annual convention of the International Printing Pressmen's union at Chicago was the doing away with the individual death benefit assessments and increasing the benefit cap to twenty-five cents per month to pay the assessments hereafter levied. A new card system was also adopted and the board of directors empowered to declare a strike of after eight weeks' duration.

The federated trades of Milwaukee will pay a fine of $100 to the circuit court recently sent out by President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor. In his letter President Gompers called attention to the resolution adopted at the late convention of the federation to the effect that "politics shall have no place in conventions and that the declaration is the policy and principles of the American Federation of Labor, and should be so construed." When the letter was read at a meeting of the trades council of that city the president expressed the opinion that his advice was not called for, and that it was only through "party" action that labor could better its condition personally. Socialistic doctrine isn't it?

Coves & Co., manufacturers of overalls at Indianapolis, Ind., have unionized their factory from cellar to garret on condition that they give the use of the United Garment Workers' label. Another grand victory for organized labor.

The shoemakers' trade is represented in the ranks of labor by 110 unions. The Midland Mechanic is working in the interest of the largest labor day parade in Kansas City ever held. It wants 10,000 men in line on Monday, Sept. 7, and believes this to be the year above all others when the common people should show their strength.

The department of labor, in conjunction with the bureau of labor statistics in the various states, will make an investigation as to the economy of municipal ownership of gas and electric light plants. Every gas and electric light plant in the United States which is owned by the municipality will be reported upon, and also a sufficient number of private plants to afford a basis of comparison between the two classes.

After Jan. 1, 1897, convict labor in New York state will be limited to articles needed by the inmates of the various state institutions. If such a law can be enacted in New York, what is the reason it cannot be in other states?

Men Clever Women Marry.

Bluestockings Prefer Not to Wed Husbands With Brains. 'Why do clever men almost invariably choose wives of inferior intellect to themselves? They select gentle, caressing, doll-like little persons, as a rule, who never read anything above a three-volume novel, and cannot talk about any topic more exciting than their babies and their bonnets. The reason is very evident. They want a brain rest at home, not a brain strain, and the woman of mild intellect has very often specially womanly characteristics and ways about her which the clever man cannot resist.

There are the Spencer-Joneses, for instance. He is a fellow of the Royal society, and has a string of letters after his name. She is a pretty little person, with a passion for smart frocks and for fancy work. She yawns if any one discusses science in her presence, and if her husband should by any chance happen to mention a five-syllable word before her she makes a little grimace, and says pathetically, "How dreary you are, dear!" Yet Spencer-Jones seems to like it in her, and adores her to an unlimited extent.

So it is with the clever woman—the woman who has discovered she has a mind, and is working it to the utmost of her power. Does she select a husband of her own caliber? As a rule, she gets engaged to the rowing man, or the cricket man, or the champion tennis player.

The lady doctor doesn't marry the masculine practitioner—except in modern novels; the lady who speaks upon platforms doesn't marry the politician of the day. As an almost invariable rule, she marries a man of a lower grade than the more commonplace is her husband.

To tell the truth, it is the intellectual woman who finds the greatest charm in the athletic man. Just as the clever man prefers a womanly wife to one of science? Not she. The Gerton girl who has come out at the top of the list seldom marries the master of the college.

When she does, the circumstances are quite exceptional. As a rule, she gets engaged to the rowing man, or the cricket man, or the champion tennis player. The lady doctor doesn't marry the masculine practitioner—except in modern novels; the lady who speaks upon platforms doesn't marry the politician of the day.

Woman does not want, but she may often find, a man who is a choice in marriage is greatly tried by the selection of herself. She is more frequently wooed by the man of inferior intellect to herself, for whom she has a positive fascination.

And do marriages of this sort turn out well? The woman who has seen a vast amount of the world and has a wide experience was speaking on this subject the other day to the Editor of the Coming Nation. She said, "to marry a man less clever than herself, for certainly by far the happiest marriages in this world are those in which the intellect is on the woman's side." And facts bear out the statement. Where there is an inferiority in the man's superiority for her far better be the woman.

Where the husband is the cleverer he does not make a companion of his wife. She may be his plaything, his amusement, she is never his friend. He goes outside his home for intellectual companionship, and as time goes on she becomes less and less necessary to him.

This is never the case with a woman, however talented she may be. She never lets her husband; she never lets him feel his inferiority; nay, rather, if she loves him, she draws him up to a pedestal and sits at his feet.

This position is delicious to a man who secretly feels that he is in his relation and gratitude he goes on loving her more and more every day they spend together. A man always develops himself as a woman through life. If he cannot help recognizing his wife's powers it makes him feel that he is to feel he surpasses even that high standard.

Only One Drawback. Washington Star.

The old lady took off her spectacles and wiped them contemplatively. "Was you in here when Elvira read that piece she's-a-goin' to speak on graduatin' day?" "Yes," replied her husband. "She knows a terrible sight, don't she?" "I've heard 'er talk, an' I've seen the picture in the books she's studied, an' it's my opinion that Elvira's a better girl than there is to be knowed—exceptin' how to make good strawberry shortcake."

Preconception. New York Press.
