

LOVE AND LUCRE

TWO MINGLED TO A NICETY IN THE WHITNEY-VANDERBILT AFFAIR.

COURTSHIP WAS ROMANTIC.

HOW YOUNG HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY CUT OUT MOSES TAYLOR.

UNION OF TWO RICH HOUSES.

Families Pleas'd With the Alliance—Characteristics of the Young People.

Special Correspondence to the Globe. NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The marriage of Henry Payne Whitney, eldest son of ex-Secretary William C. Whitney, and Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, eldest daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt, which is to occur Aug. 25, is not only a matter of great moment to that part of the people called society, but of unusual interest to the general public, for this union will bring into close relations two of the richest families on the American continent. Its importance to the world of wealth and fashion is thus easily accounted for, but the great public is attracted by another and a better consideration, the fact that the ceremony will be the fitting finale of an ardent, old-fashioned courtship—that is to say, people recognize this as a love match, and they are pleased with it.

The story of Harry Whitney's fair but untiring and finally victorious rivalry with young Moses Taylor, a year or so ago, is known, and the world continues to love a lover. Comparisons are also made between the course of true love as discovered by young Whitney's prospective brother-in-law, Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. and the not too arduous path which is now leading the ex-secretary's to the altar. The sympathy which went out to Cornelius Jr. and Miss Wilson was not unmix'd with depreciation of the unflattering attitude which his persistency assumed. But no shadows of parental antagonism mar the brightness of the coming event. There is complacency and approval in the minds of the elders record of William K. Vanderbilt has not been a source of pride to his staid and scrupulous brother, nor has the law proceedings and weddings of the once Mrs. Willie K. added to the comfort which he formerly found in contemplating the immaculate respectability of his family name. But Gertrude has been dutiful and wise. He will dower her well.

ABOUT MISS VANDERBILT. And what of this girl of whom society, when she has married and become an entertainer, will expect so much? Well, she is gay, frank, and fresh faced, every inch a Vanderbilt, and hence not pretty. But she is young, not yet twenty, and youth is a sweet and glowing thing. Her chief and rare charm is said by her intimates to be entire freedom from affectation, coupled with a generous nature, which finds pleasure in the happiness of other persons. There is a warmth in her eyes and a cheerfulness in her presence which combine to give her a most attractive personality. She is also somewhat distinguished looking. Her hair is dark and forms a favorable foil for her rosy complexion. Her formal introduction to society was made a year ago last August at a large party given in the superb mansion of her father in West Fifty-seventh street.

Immediately after that event a death in the Van der Bie family interfered with the many festivities planned, and Miss Vanderbilt went abroad. Last summer at Newport Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt gave a superb ball at The Breakers, which was in one sense the reintroduction of their daughter to the fashionable world. Their plans for last winter were again unfortunately changed through another death in the family; so that since her formal introduction Miss Vanderbilt has been comparatively little in society, except at dinners or the opera.

Miss Vanderbilt has been most carefully educated under the direction of her mother and is talented in many directions, being fond of music and a fine linguist. She has made many trips abroad with her parents.

In the season in Newport and again in Tuxedo Miss Vanderbilt enters into the social whirl with all the spirit natural to a girl of her station. Nevertheless she finds time for study and for the pursuit of the more serious duties of life. She has inherited a good deal of the old commodore's solid sense, and already shows much more business capacity than might be expected of one of her years and sex.

WHITNEY IS LIKE HIS FATHER. Mr. Henry Payne Whitney, the bridegroom elect, is nearly twenty-four years of age. He was graduated from Yale in the class of 1894, and later completed a course in Columbia College Law school. In character and appearance he greatly resembles his distinguished father. During his college days at Yale young Whitney made a brilliant record, politically and socially. Although he of each household, and all goes merrily. The world at large applauds, because in this alliance at least there is no taint of the bargain and sale infection which has found its way into many of the recent matrimonial transactions of the rich.

Harry Whitney and Gertrude Vanderbilt have known each other from childhood. Their love grew up as they did, before they knew. The palatial Vanderbilt mansion on Fifty-seventh street, New York, is only across the way from the noble residence of the Whitneys. The association of the children of these families has always been intimate. At Yale college Harry Whitney was the faithful friend and chum of Willie Vanderbilt, the brother of the bride to be, and so he finished his college with the same intimacy. The close friendship of these schoolmates made young Whitney a constant visitor at the Vanderbilt house, where he and his favorite girl friend, Gertrude, saw much of each other.

The romance of the story comes in when young Taylor commenced his devotional exercises, with Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt as his shrine. Taylor had also been a great chum of Willie Vanderbilt, and came to know his sister very well. The better acquainted he became with her the more he was attracted by her. He made no secret of his feelings, and she made no secret of her interest in him. When he arrived, he at once sought Miss Vanderbilt. She was at the sumptuous summer home of the Vanderbilts, The Breakers, and was glad to see him. There were no more of those unpleasant rumors, and gossips who whispered that these young people spent a great deal of their time together began to talk of another engagement, and this time their guess was correct.

But, however, the younger and more sentimental minded may speculate concerning the ephemeral matter of fact people insist on entertaining themselves by consideration of the financial aspects of the case. And, indeed, there is something stupendous in the thought that to these young people there is to be intrusted the ownership and care of $50,000,000. This is a rough estimate, but hardly an exaggeration, for the wealth of Cornelius Vanderbilt can't be less than $100,000,000, and as his daughter Gertrude is his favorite, it is not improbable that her share will be not less than $25,000,000, and young Whitney's inheritance will be little less than that sum.

Desirable from all points as this prospective alliance seems, it should afford particular satisfaction to the father of the bride to be, as the Vanderbilts of late years have not all been unqualified successes. Besides the recent heart wringing disobedience of his son, his namesake, he has experienced much mortification and displeasure by reason of the marital maneuvering of others of his kith and kin. The matrimonial was handicapped by being the son of one of the richest and most prominent men in the United States, his head was never turned. He was as plain and unassuming as any man who ever trod the campus, and, being affable, bright, active and sympathetic, his popularity grew to be tremendous. He had a liberal allowance, but made no show of spending it, and in this has always shown the true "Yale spirit." His rooms in Lyceum, one of the "Old Brick Row" buildings, were comfortable and well located, and that was all. He prepared for college at the Groton (Mass.) school, a small but famous institution. In his sophomore class, in nearly twenty-four years of age, he was graduated from Yale in the class of 1894, and later completed a course in Columbia College Law school. In character and appearance he greatly resembles his distinguished father. During his college days at Yale young Whitney made a brilliant record, politically and socially. Although he

Whitney was not a hard student, but had the reputation of being the brightest man in his class. He wore the coveted Phi Beta Kappa key, which is bestowed on the highest standing men only. He was also an editor of the Yale Daily News, a position which required six months of hustling competition to obtain. These social honors which have been named in connection with Yale men are not of importance in themselves, except that they are all awarded by popular vote and show how a man is estimated by his fellows.

Harry Whitney is what girls call a manly fellow. Many of those whom he met in vacation might have fallen in love with him had he been poor. They liked his reckless riding and skill at polo and the way he handled his four-in-hand. In connection with his polo playing he has recently become interested in the turf, and has imported a number of valuable polo ponies, hunters and steeple chasers. Among the polo players which he has in training is Adelbert, a gray horse bought from the Preakness stables last year for $5,000. Mr. Whitney rode a hunter in the horse shows of 1894 and 1895, and last year he made his first appearance as a polo player. He played at Newport and Hempstead, as a member of the Meadowbrook Hunt club, in which he was handicapped at 5.

Mr. Whitney has been interested in yachting for several years and is a member of the New York and Sea-ward Yacht club. He has imported Dorothy, a 21 footer, was built for him two years ago, and this year he had a new Herreshoff fin keel 30 footer built, also called the Dorothy.

In business circles Harry Whitney is as popular as he is socially. Already he does a large part of the work that formerly devolved upon William C. Whitney. It is only reasonable to suppose that in the fullness of time he will assume entire control of affairs to succeed to complete proprietorship of the business in which he is now his father's associate. Extensive preparations have been made for the wedding ceremony, which will take place at The Breakers, Newport, in the country home of the Vanderbilts, erected a year or so ago on the site of the original mansion, which had been burned to the ground, is perhaps the most superb residence of its kind in America. It stands alone on the stony crags of Ocher point just where it projects farthest into the ocean and where the roar of the rock-ribbed cliff, with a sullen patch of green, with a sullen moments of calm, crooningly lap the

HOKE HAS RETIRED. RESIGNATION OF SECRETARY SMITH IN THE HANDS OF THE PRESIDENT. A SUCCESSOR VERY SOON. J. M. REYNOLDS TALKED OF FOR THE PLACE IN THE CABINET. ANNOUNCEMENT IS NOT OFFICIAL. In Official Circles, However, There is No Doubt as to the Rumor's Truth.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—For some time rumors have appeared in print on the probability of the early resignation of Secretary Hoke Smith. There can now be no doubt, but that he has resigned, and that his resignation has been accepted. For some days past shipments have been made to Atlanta of his books and papers, and it is learned that he has declined to set any departmental business to be heard by him for a date later than this month. It can safely be assumed that a successor will be in charge in a very short time. After the nomination of Bryan and Sewall, it became known that Secretary Smith was the only member of the cabinet who announced the purpose to support that ticket, and that this action on his part, while not in any way affecting his personal relations with the other members of the cabinet, seemed so material to him that he felt constrained to tender his resignation. The secretary declines to discuss the subject in any way. Ever since the rumor of the probable resignation of Secretary Smith, there has been more or less gossip concerning his probable successor, and at the interior department the name of John M. Reynolds, second assistant secretary of the department, has been mentioned frequently for the place. Mr. Reynolds has been an excellent executive officer. He has had charge of the difficult work of the review of the pension decisions of the pension bureau, and has given general satisfaction. He is a native of Pennsylvania. The new cabinet officer will have only a little more than six months to serve, and it is regarded as probable that Mr. Cleveland would prefer to fill the vacancy from the department rather than fill the place by appointing some one who would be new to the work, which involves acquaintance with a great variety of matters, affecting directly the public welfare. NO SURPRISE. ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 22.—The ru-

TWO NOTED CROOKS. Said to Be Dying in an Eastern Jail. NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Detectives connected with a private agency profess to have found in the two dying burglars in the Mount Kisco jail men who are known all over the country as criminals of the most desperate character. The one previously identified as Peter James, who had two bicycle repair shops in Brooklyn, is alleged to be Edward Jacques, who has operated extensively in Philadelphia and New York, and who not long ago was in the Westchester Pen. The other man, known as John Jenkins, is alleged to have a Western record. It is said that twelve years ago he killed a sheriff's deputy in St. Louis, and for that crime was sentenced to twenty-five years imprisonment, but was released after eight years. He is said to be an expert burglar and to be known as "Reddy Jenkins." It is not possible for either man to recover. BUILDING TRADES STRIKE. CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—After a long session the executive committee of the building trades council finally decided to order out all other artisans now at work on buildings where the contractors attempt to replace the striking hod carriers with non-union laborers. As a result, several thousand mechanics, carpenters, iron workers, bricklayers and workers in kindred trades will probably be ordered to strike. Peter McHugh, of the hod carriers union, said last night that over 1,500 hod carriers are already out.

Letter from Him Expected at the Indianapolis Convention. CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—There is excellent authority for saying that President Cleveland will write a letter to some friend at the Indianapolis gold national convention opposing the endorsement of McKinley for his reelection, and favoring the nomination of a Democrat who believes not only in the maintenance of the present gold standard, but in a tariff for revenue only. It is said, however, he may include a suggestion that it may be advisable later in the campaign to with-
