THE AMENDMENTS.

It will probably be true this year, as it has been every other, that the great majority of voters in Minnesota will give but a cursory glance at the constitutional amendments which are to be voted upon...

Instead of that, their columns have been filled, and the air about the stump has been made vocal with passionate declamations for and against the free coinage of silver, which, as an issue in state politics, is just about as important to us as whether the English parliament shall refuse or consent to permit a man to marry his deceased wife's sister...

Amendments to the constitution, on the contrary, relate to the actual practical conduct of our domestic affairs in important particulars. The Globe has already reviewed them editorially, and urged the attention of the public to them.

The act known as the Anderson bill, which is to be submitted to a vote of the people, is not properly a constitutional amendment, but really an instance of the referendum. Its proposition is to secure the taxation of unused railroad lands in Minnesota. There is only one practical question involved.

earnings tax, which has now reached a point where it is becoming burdensome to them and profitable to the state, we know. That the adoption of the Anderson bill might, in spite of the safeguards attempted to be cast around it, furnish such an opportunity, we fear.

The amendment providing that the income from the internal improvement fund shall be devoted to the making of public roads and the building of bridges seems to be a good one. The time has come when a movement for good roads must be carried ahead in Minnesota.

By far the most important of all the suggested additions to the constitution is the so-called home rule amendment, which confers upon cities and villages in the state the right, subject to legislative approval, to frame their own charters.

Better even, to our minds, than the money value of this market change, is the political lesson that it teaches. It would be well worth the millions that are now added to farmers' receipts to have them learn the falsity of the politician's argument that prices are the result of something other than the natural operation of demand and supply.

In a company of five gentlemen, last week, when the subject of registration was casually mentioned, it was found that two had registered last Tuesday and three had not.

Get out all the voters that you can. There is but one opportunity, and it is extremely unsafe to wait for that. A casual illness, a temporary forgetfulness, an absence from the city, or any one of a dozen things which may prevent a man from registering on that day, will be fatal.

THE GOLD RESERVE MARCH 3, '93. To the Editor of the Globe. Will you kindly answer the following question in the next issue of the Globe: What was the amount of money in the reserve fund in the hands of the treasurer at Washington at the expiration of President Harrison's term, March, 1893?

STILL GOING UP. Even the election excitement cannot push into second place the universal interest and congratulation arising in this section of the country out of the continued advance in wheat prices.

ing for that dollar mark which has been for so many years now the goal of the farmer's ambition. It may find it, but we would not like to be too sanguine about that. The Minnesota and Dakota farmer has a pretty good thing of it as it is. His wheat is at this moment worth more than twenty cents a bushel more than it was just one year ago.

AT THE THEATERS. Denman Thompson's "Old Homestead" was presented at the Metropolitan opera house again last night to a demonstrative audience. The success of this New England drama gives every expectation of success.

THE LORD'S DAY. Its Formal and Legal Observance. Dates From 321 A. D. To the Editor of the Globe. Dear Sir: The Sunday to the question, "When was Sunday first observed?" as given in a late issue of a St. Paul paper, being from the generally received opinion, reminds the writer of some records of history not very well known among people generally.

IT ARGUES ITSELF. Pithy Opinion From Reed on the Sound Money Question. CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Thomas E. Reed spoke tonight in the big Republican hall at Fifty-fifth and Pecora streets.

REGISTER. In a company of five gentlemen, last week, when the subject of registration was casually mentioned, it was found that two had registered last Tuesday and three had not.

WITH INTENT TO AMUSE. Faeolous Passenger—How often, conductor, does your trolley car kill man? Conductor (tarty)—Only once.—Commercial Advertiser.

THE earnestness of his earlier years, that put, sometimes, too sharp an edge on his partisan, sobered with the years into a candor and fairness of treatment that commanded the respect of those of his profession whose views of governmental policy differed from his.

AN ANGEL IN JAY

JOSEPH SMYTHE'S MISSION IN LIFE HAS BEEN TO EMPLOY LAWYERS.

BEGAN A SUIT BACK IN '85.

IT HAS BEEN DRAGGING ALONG UNTIL IT ROBBED IT AGAIN YESTERDAY.

IS HUMOROUS IN ITS DETAILS.

Except That It Recalls the Misfortunes and Decline of E. St. Julian Cox.

When lawyers become litigants, other people have a show. That is to say they have an entertainment. A case of this kind came before Judge Brill yesterday, when a dozen or more lawyers appeared in the court room to find out what there was left of some $2,000 collected by a lawyer more than six years ago.

The trouble, which grew out of a very simple transaction, has arisen from Mr. Smythe's penchant for employing lawyers. Mr. Smythe seems to have been impressed with the idea that they needed employment. He began his philanthropic mission in 1885 when he was a business partner with one John J. Davis.

Mr. Smythe called on John J. Davis one day, and then John cut in. The case dragged along like Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce until finally Mr. Cox collected that judgment amounting to $1,950 as per agreement. Then he proceeded with true brotherly spirit to turn the money over to Mr. Smythe.

Mr. Smythe concluded it was time to infuse a little fresh legal talent into the case, so he employed Louis Hastings. By this time, it has occurred to a few lawyers in its wake. The only missing attorney was the defendant, E. St. Julian Cox.

The next appearance of the case in the district court was noted last June, when it bobbed up before Judge Willis. But the records and vouchers and agreements were all missing.

END OF THE NUSHKA

ST. PAUL'S SWELL CLUB DETERMINES TO ADJOURN FOR A YEAR.

NEW QUARTERS ARE DESIRED.

AND WHEN FOUND THE OLD CLUB WILL BE REORGANIZED.

AS A MEN'S CLUB EXCLUSIVELY.

Old Ideas Have Been Outgrown and a Change of Policy Will Result.

While the old members of the Nushka club are reluctant to abandon the name and prestige of the organization which has commanded the social situation in this city for a period of eleven years, it was apparent at the meeting held last night that the organization as it exists at present would soon be a thing of the past.

It was the consensus of opinion that the present quarters were poorly adapted for the purposes of a club of the position of the Nushkas, and it was decided that it would be well for the club to adjourn for a year.

During the term of a year for which the club adjourned, the president or the executive committee may call it in special session for the purpose of reorganization, and the reorganization may involve the dropping of the women who have been members of the present organization, and perhaps of some of the male members, who are not considered acceptable.
