WHO MAY NOT VOTE MAY NOT HOLD OFFICE, SO RULES ATTORNEY GENERAL CHILDS.

DILEMMA OF MANY VOTERS. WHO HAVE HITHERTO BEEN GOOD CITIZENS, AGGRAVATED BY THE DECISION.

CLAIMED IT IS EX POST FACTO. The Charge Is Made That the Amendment of 1896 Conflicts With the Constitution.

Since Dec. 1, and even before that, the attorney general's office has been flooded with correspondence asking light on the intricacies of the constitutional amendment adopted at the recent election affecting the elective franchise.

second papers in time for the summer elections in July, there not being any court there now until May or June. One of the towns which is seriously affected by the new amendment is Eden Prairie, Hennepin county. The situation there is this: Nearly one-third of the 215 voters are disfranchised by the constitutional amendment. They are willing to take out second papers, but there is not time enough between now and election day, the law declaring that reasons of thirty days in the district is necessary, and the voter must have become a full citizen at least three months before election.

There are several men holding office at Eden Prairie who cannot vote at the coming election because of this. The people want to elect them again, and raised the point whether these men should not take out the second papers and be elected to office, even though they could not vote.

Attorney General Childs says that the point has been decided so many times that there is no room for argument. In the case of Taylor vs. Sullivan, 45 Minn., it was decided that a man must be a legal voter to hold an elective office.

Another objection that has been made to the present amendment is that it is in substance and effect an ex post facto law. The objection is quite clearly stated in the following letter from William O'Neill, of Currie, Murray county, which is as follows:

As our late amendment, requiring men and women who are not citizens to take out such three months before they can vote at any election hereafter, is a move in the right direction, and one which we all advance with pleasure, I am glad to see that a member of the committee on resolutions in our state Democratic convention of 1886, in Eden Prairie, Minn., was a resident of that town at the time of the amendment.

It would have been simple enough for the young woman in the case to have moved over into—say Grant—county for a day or two, so that she would be a resident of that county at the time the license was issued, and the trouble would have been at an end, but the clerk who wished to get married felt some compunctions about what would have the appearance of an elopement and did not like to do this.

The attorney general has ruled that there is nothing in the law to prevent a clerk of the court from issuing a license to himself, provided neither he nor the woman in the case is married before, and accordingly the nuptials will be no longer delayed.

Thus the attorney general not only endears himself to two fond hearts, who will no doubt show their gratitude politically in the future, but he establishes a precedent which for all time will remove the last obstacle which has been in the way of unmarried men accepting the nomination for clerk of the courts.

SHE OBJECTED TO TIGHTS. How Miss Royce Came Near Spoiling Her Career. Miss Louise Royce, of the "Wizard of the Nile" company, is a California girl and a native of San Francisco, that is, she is a genuine workmanlike. She was educated for a church choir, graduated from a church choir to the stage six years ago.

She is a member of the Philadelphia Harmonic club, and Miss Royce, who as she had taken part in a number of important amateur productions of comic opera, for which the club had acquired a reputation, she was engaged to play the part of the Tivoli girl of me through these performances, for one day they sent for me. It was the old, old trouble.

The prima donna had been suddenly taken ill and there was nobody to assume her role. "You may be sure I jumped at the opportunity, and though I had practically no time to prepare, I went on and the performance was saved. Even then I had no idea of a professional career. But once the glare of the limelight shone upon me, I was overcome. I found I had only one business in life—to adopt the stage as a business."

In the next opera produced the prima donna reappeared, and I was offered a boy's role. When I found I must wear tight-fitting I almost refused the part, and after thinking it over, I accepted, and in that way stumbled upon my particular line of work. The managers and the public seemed to think my role were worth the part, and I was wearing something after that to me to wear skirts.

I remained at the Tivoli for some time and was then engaged by David Henderson for reading the title role in "Sinbad" and "Aladdin," and later replaced Louise Mortgagne with Eddy Foy. At the close of that season I went to New York, seeking for the first time a Metropolitan engagement.

My lucky star directed me to Managers Lashelle and Clark, who had just discovered that the lady engaged for Abydas would not do for the role. I was engaged in ten minutes after having sung for them and began rehearsals the same day. There were only about 50 lines in the part at first, but it afforded good opportunities for good business, inasmuch as it had a great deal to do with the plot.

My success in the part was so great that I was pronounced from the start. I never will forget the first night in New York. I hadn't a thing to sing in the first act and I suppose all American audiences are familiar with the very largely into the piece. But when the second act opened with that beautiful serenade, I thought the roof would be lifted. Eight times it was encored, and even then the audience wanted more. The critics said next day that I was a very self-satisfied young woman, and you can blame me. The musical comedy of the opera has been my specialty.

Miss Royce is one of those exceedingly healthy persons who cannot fail to radiate amiability. Her magnetism undoubtedly, and it is this magnetic quality which wins for her the favor of theatergoers of all classes everywhere.

LAW'S DELAY IS OVERCOME AND THERE IS NOW NO OBSTACLE TO THE HAPPY WEDDING.

CLERK MAY LICENSE HIMSELF. If the Woman He Desires to Marry Is a Denizen of His County.

Attorney General Childs has been called upon to decide a knotty point in law—nothing unusual, except in so far as this particular point is unusual. The law of the state of Minnesota regarding marriages requires that the license shall be issued in the county in which the bride-to-be resides, at least for the time being. Ordinarily this would cause little inconvenience, but the attorney general recently received a letter from the auditor of one of the counties in the Seventh congressional district, to the effect that the clerk of courts in a neighboring county desired to get married, and felt some delicacy about issuing himself a license.
