That event caused a burst of like affairs, for, reasoned the socially ambitious, every one that is any one is going to give one also, just to show that they are as good as any one who is some one The result is easy to guess, though the most healthy imagination could hardly have prepared its owner for the arrays of costumes that resulted. The decree was set for historical get-ups, and there was a rush for old prints and paintings. Then there was another rush to the dressmakers, and therein was the mis-To do the thing correctly, a costumer is the one who should supervise, for the usual dressmaker simply will not duplicate a historical gown; she will adapt. That means that she will modernize it and take all the character out of the gown.

A favorite period for these ambitous attempts was the early part of the eighteenth century, and good Queen Anne was often the model. She seemed especially attractive to the aspirants because of the beautiful dressing of her hair. IN CUPID'S REALM.

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place Tuesday morning last at St. Joseph's church, when Thomas Francis Loughran and Miss Anna Rose Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark, of this city, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, the ceremony being performed by Father Walsh. The bride was gowned in a beautiful costume of white organdie over white silk, while her attendant, Miss Ida Loughran, a sister of the groom, was attired in white organdie made over light blue silk. The best man was M. J. Clark, a brother of the bride. After the ceremony the bridal party and relatives proceeded to the home of the bride's parents, where dinner was served. The floral decorations at the house were artistically arranged. In the evening the young couple left for Chicago and other points, from where they expect to return about March 15, and will make their future home in Minneapolis.

Miss Margaret Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzgerald, and John Galvin were married at St. Michael's church Tuesday morning. The bride was attended by Miss Margaret Galvin, and Dennis Sullivan was best man. The bride wore a gown of novelty goods, trimmed with velvet and lace. Rev. Father O'Neill performed the ceremony. The music was under the direction of Father Simon. After the marriage, a breakfast was served to the relatives of both parties, covers being laid for twenty. The guests at the house were: Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Galvin, Mr. and Mrs. D. Galvin, Mr. and Mrs. D. Galvin, Mr. And Mrs. T. Nagle, Mrs. Mallory, Miss Bambury, Miss May Mallory, Miss Helen Crowley, T. J. Queen Anne and these queenly dumplings were a comical lot. When the lines were not drawn closely the dancing did not harmonize at all, one with another, so that even were individual mistakes absent, the results were not very attractive. But individual blunders were plentiful enough, and when it wasn't a dressmaker's modernized rig, it was, perhaps, a failure to make coiffure and gown harmonize. Altogether such a motley lot of Britomartes, Unas, fairy queens, queens of Scotts and so on has not been seen in many years, and it is to be hoped that it won't be repeated for many seasons to come.

The women that did not lose their heads to this craze for fancy dress parties, and who steered clear of alleged historical costumes in the dances they organized, are to be congratulated on their good sense. Of course those their good serise. Of course those dancers who were correct and tasteful in their reproductions are deserving of much praise for escaping all the blunders that might so easily have been mice. It is blueful, and the Misses Belie O'Rourke, and the Mi
