WEEK OF HOSPITALITY TO THE ELKS COMES TO A FORMAL CLOSE.

GUESTS HAVE DEPARTED.

ONLY A FEW STRAY VISITORS STILL REMAINING IN THE CITY.

MILL CITY TURNERS WIN.

For the Second Time They Capture the Championship—Minneapolis News.

The eleventh annual grand lodge session and reunion of the Elks has passed into history. The business of the body was concluded Friday morning, but the round of pleasure went on until midnight this morning.

If the attendance was slightly disappointing, the feature did not mar the extreme measure of gaiety that characterized the doings of the week. There were present at the annual reunion many who have followed similar gatherings for years.

The greater number of the Elks left the city during Friday night and yesterday. A scattering few will remain in and about Minneapolis for a time, loathe to take leave until the expiration of their ticket limit.

The Chicago boys were the chief of the enjoyable reunions of the order. Not a hitch occurred in the programme, with one exception that was not missed. All concerned to be the chief of the enjoyable reunions of the order.

There were many lady visitors in the local lodge rooms yesterday, but they were all entertained in a fitting manner by the members of the committee at that place. Over 400 lady visitors at that place.

related, but still there is enough difference to give the judges considerable trouble in making out their percentages.

The different societies were represented as follows on the apparatus: Minneapolis, John Arnesen, Peter Fisher, Alfred Amundsen, Christ Christoffersen, Theodore Sponness, Christ Thorwick, William Loege, Sigurd Hermanson, Chicago—Sigurd Andersen, E. M. Lee, Fridtjof Andersen, E. M. Bergendahl, Martin Arnesen, L. Rash, John Johnson, Henry Hoel.

The last number of the programme was the flying rings. Both societies appeared to the great advantage here. The Minneapolis team, however, showed more strength and familiarity with them than the visitors. In fact, the exhibition given by Turner all received that has never been excelled in this city. Three class and one free exercise was given on this apparatus, as on all the others. Nearly all the visitors imaginable were given in a manner that would have scored highly in their favor had not a heavy rain been falling. At the same time that it must be said that the exhibition given by the visitors was of a high order, the judges had to admit that their exercises were not in the same class with those chosen by the Minneapolis Turners. Neither were the combinations as happily effected as they might have been. The record in conducting the different exercises used at the afternoon's programme, it was the first exhibition of the day, and clinched the first prize for the Minneapolis Turners.

The horizontal bars was one of the best parts of the programme for the visitors. Although laxity in training had its results here also, the men showed that they had taken more interest in conducting the different exercises on this apparatus than any of the others. Both Fridtjof Andersen and John Johnson gave the giant swing in an acceptable manner. The latter was wished for, and certainly helped to bring their figures up. Some of the class exercises chosen were not difficult for several members of the class, but that the class percentage will not be as large as that of the Minneapolis class.

Pyramids is an exhibition in which the Norwegians excel, not even taking a back seat from the valiant Arab. Both societies presented different and marvelous compilations of human forms. The visiting team, led as the vortices, the local society having failed in its last pyramid, and was unable to rebuild it, after taking the second prize. The pyramids built by the Chicago boys were of the quick, agile order, with hardly a mistake or misstep. The turning was followed by field exercises, and which resulted as follows:

One-hundred-yard dash—Charles Hansen, of Minneapolis, first; Paul Peterson, Minneapolis, second; Johannes Johnson, Chicago, third.

Throwing 15-pound hammer—A. K. Ingalls, Minneapolis, first; P. Sponness, Minneapolis, second; Peter Fisher, third.

Lifting 100-pound dumbbell—Sponness, first; H. Hoel, Chicago, second.
