Heaven of Bicycles.

Dozens of Congressmen Learn to Ride the Wheel in Washington.

Special to the Globe.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The hull in legislation in the house while the senate was considering the tariff bill increased the number of wheelmen in Washington. Many a member from remote parts of the country learned to ride the wheel. Washington has been called the heaven of bicycles. It has over 300 miles of concrete pavements and the roads in its vicinity are far better than the average. It is the only city in the United States where streets are better than the sidewalks. A trip to Baltimore and back is no novelty. Wheelmen go there in large parties and return the same day. To a stranger the city seems to be alive with bicycles. Men and women, girls and boys fill through the streets like swallows, darting here and there between cars and vehicles. Some are bent on business, and others are out for pleasure alone. Thousands employed in the various departments go to and from their work upon wheels. The courts of the interior department, of the war and navy building and of the post office building are crowded with bicycle wheels. Every department provision is made for them. The crypt of the capitol is filled with them. There is a place set apart for them on the ground floor of the pension building. Theaters advertise them checked and stored without charge.

A congressman who is a member of the L. A. W. rode past the city post office recently at 7 o'clock in the morning. The streets in the vicinity swarmed with wheelmen in gray uniform. They trooped away from the building in platoons, north, south, east and west, making the morning delivery. These letter carriers run to the extreme limits of the city. They use the wheel in the delivery of letters. Collections from the street boxes are most all made by carriers on wheels. Some carriers ride to their field of delivery and leave their wheels at a pharmacy or a grocery while they distribute their letters. The congressman saw one of the carriers leave his wheel at the residence of Senator Stewart, and from there made deliveries on foot.

It is estimated that from 12,000 to 15,000 persons employed in Washington use their wheels in going to and from their work. Nearly 20,000 are employed in the departments alone, and of these it is safe to say that more than one-quarter use the wheel. The sight in the morning hours is exhilarating. Rosy-cheeked typewriters in natty costumes, natchists employed at the navy yard, department clerks, male and female, old and young, school girls and school marm, all dash to their work mounted upon wheels. Some sail along with charming grace and even abandon, while others nervously grip the handles of their wheels and dismount when in doubt. Many sit as straight as ramrods, with hands behind their backs, driving the wheels as though they were parts of themselves. Others maintain apparently thinking over the work of the day. A few bend to the low handle bars, and speed along as though suffering from curvature of the spine.

Darwin's theory is apparently reversed. Instead of the slow evolution through long ages of man from the simian, we have the rapid development of the simian from man. This evolution is confined to the lords of creation, for no lady has ever been seen on the streets of Washington riding a wheel with ram's horn handle bars.

Nor are the patrons of the wheel confined to the Caucasian. Though the Ethiopian cannot change his color, he proves extremely facile in changing his method of locomotion. The colored girl, whether octoon, quadroon, mulatto or Congo, is in the front on the wheel. She rides it gracefully, if not artistically. Often she is accompanied by a dusky boy. One of these admirers attracts universal attention.

THE CYCLE OF TIME.

Miss Antique—I have been in two centuries. Miss Guy—If you live until nineteen hundred, you will have been in three.

tention. Tall and slender, he rides at the side of his tinted innamorata, clad in a full bicycle suit. The suit is a stunner. He wears a blue cap with a long white peak and a snowy button on top. His blazer carries the Princeton colors, orange and black. His knickerbockers are of a navy blue, and his golf stockings are of a plaid that would throw a highland chief into convulsions.

The wheel is also a favorite with the members of the Chinese legation. Several of the attaches are experts. All ride ladies' wheels on account of their flowing robes.

In fact, everybody rides the wheel, the clergyman and the congressman, the lawyer and his client, the doctor and his patient, the mistress and the maid, everybody but the office seeker. He walks. Not long ago a congressman took tea on a Sunday afternoon with a family living in the northwest. The lady of the house was busy attending to the wants of those around the table. One of the children at the table asked its mother where Gertie, the servant girl, was.

"She and the cook have gone out on their wheels. This is their Sunday off," replied the mother.

"Has your servant girl a wheel?" the congressman asked in astonishment.

"No," was the reply, "she hires one for fifteen cents an hour."

She then told a story of her washerwoman, who comes here every Monday. "The lady said, 'to do the washing. Last Monday I waited all day for her and she never came. She appeared bright and early on Tuesday knickerbockers, a negligee shirt, sack coat and golf stockings. The costume was complete, with the exception of the headgear. The gentleman wore a blue slouch hat. The breeze was blowing his silver sundrery whiskers. He had a magnificent presence, and rode the wheel with the ease of an admirer. He was Rear Admiral John G. Walker of the United States navy. The admiral was just to sight in a bevy of young ladies, who crossed his track and fluttered under his bows like children's silver dandies. Two beauties away the congressman met another object of interest. It was Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire. He was smoking a Danville Stimulid. He had clips on his ankles, sat firm and upright, and was making good time.

A quarter of a mile behind him came Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, the past and prospective chairman of the committee on appropriations. He wore a hat and a gray business suit, and was smoking a Danville Stimulid. He has been riding the wheel for several years, and it is said that he was the first man who ever induced Speaker Cannon to mount the wheel. Whether this is so or not, it is certain that the statesman from Maine never uses a wheel in Washington. His form is familiar to the Pennsylvania avenue. He usually walks to the capitol, rolling to and fro, like a sailor on leave. Those who have seen him astride the wheel in Maine say that he presides in an interesting appearance. Mr. Cannon takes his wheel with him on entering the capitol, and deposits it in his committee room, as do several other congressional wheelmen.

Representative Babcock, of Wisconsin, is a new addition to the wheelmen. He was chairman of the committee on the District of Columbia in the last house. If he succeeds himself his advent among the wheelmen will be hailed with delight. A new criminal has been developed in Washington. He is a kidnaper, and he kidnaps ladies' dresses by throwing vitriol upon them. He scatters chunks of broken glass in places frequented by wheelmen. His victims are the grand old ladies who ride to the capitol. The chairman of the district committee to the commissioners might secure his apprehension and conviction. In his excursions upon the wheel Mr. Babcock is accompanied by his wife, who is a graceful rider. Nor is he the only congressman whose wife accompanies him in his expeditions. Mrs. George B. McClellan frequently rides to Alexandria and back with her husband.

In riding about the city you often meet Representative Shafer, of Colorado; Senator Bacon, of Georgia; Senator Tillman, of South Carolina; Senator Elkins, and Faulkner, of West Virginia, and Senator Kyle, of South Dakota. The latter has as a companion a daughter, who usually sets the pace for her father. Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, now absent in Europe, is greatly missed by the wheelmen in Washington during the present session.

Representatives Foss, of Illinois; Taylor, of Ohio; Lister, of South Carolina; Sherman, of New York; Curtis, of Kansas, and others belong to the congressional bicycle brigade. All are enthusiastic wheelmen. Representative Sprague, of Massachusetts, has won more than the usual notoriety by appearing on the floor of the senate in a wheelman's costume. The costume fits him to perfection, and is evidently the work of a Boston tailor. Jerry Simpson is an old rider, and one who understands the ethics of wheeling. He was not ashamed to wear 'squeaky' bicycle shoes, and he was, however, the suit of Col. William G. Sterrett, of Texas. He appeared on the floor of the house the other day with golf stockings and a buttoned roundabout. The suit is unique and characteristic. The wheelmen have come from the plains of Texas, but the stockings are a symphony in hosiery. The services of no Boston tailor were required. It recalls the story of a well-known captain in the navy, of whom it is said that he made his own clothes and cut his own hair.

A conspicious figure in quiet streets of a cool afternoon is Commodore Sampson, of the ordnance bureau. He rides a high frame wheel with aplomb and dignity. In days gone by the commodore was a favorite of the tennis court with Secretary Olney, of Massachusetts. They played on the adjoining residence of Mrs. U. S. Grant. The commodore is full as graceful on the wheel as in the tennis court. The Conduit road and the shady drives about the soldiers' home are favorite courses for wheelmen. Toward night they appear here by hundreds. Accidents are comparatively few, because scorching is strictly forbidden. The ordinance is enforced by a bicycle squad of uniformed police officers. Those standing upon the esplanade of the capitol on the last night of the session in the city evening, Pennsylvania avenue presented a fairly like spectacle. It was filled with wheelmen, and their lights were as numerous as fireflies in summer. The avenue was fairly phosphorescent with them, and the scene was made more animated by the music of the bands in the distance. The scene was a grand and august procession. The day was a fine one, and the lights were as numerous as fireflies in summer.

"You are crazy," was the reply, "it is simply a fad. Within ten years it will die out, and you will not see one wheel where you now see a hundred."

STREET CARS STOPPED.

City and Company Involved in Trouble at Saginaw.

SAGINAW, Mich., July 17.—The city's street railway system is completely tied up today as a result of a several months' fight between the city and the Union Street Railway company, which culminated recently in a decision by the supreme court, sustaining the right of the city to take any measures to compel the railway company to settle for certain special improvement taxes.

Following this the common council declared the company's franchise forfeited. Action like that of today was not expected, however, until next week. During last night the police placed a big steam road roller across the car tracks leading to the main line, and are guarding the machine against any molestation. The bondholders and stockholders of the company have vainly tried to agree on a basis of settlement for the trouble, the bone of contention being a debt of $45,000, which the bondholders were unwilling to assume.
