Will Lose Their Home.

The Daughters of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe in Sore Straits.

The Globe today publishes a signed statement addressed to the newspapers of the country by the sister of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, the most widely known authoress America ever produced, whose masterpiece, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," was a tremendous factor in the causes of the civil war. This statement by Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, herself a famous writer, is made public for the first time through the columns of this newspaper, and should bring relief to the twin daughters of the distinguished writer and philanthropist. It might be proposed that a monument should be erected to the memory of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. There is no doubt, that every reader of her "Uncle Tom's Cabin," every negro slave and every descendant of a negro slave, who can trace their freedom to the influence of her work, every man and woman throughout the land who rejoices that the black bar of slavery has been removed from our escutcheon would unite in support of the proposition to honor Mrs. Stowe's memory by such a monument as that with which the city of Brooklyn has honored the memory of her brother, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

But in the meantime there recurs the old question of bread and store. During her lifetime, Mrs. Stowe valued the honor that had come to her from her work, valued the results that had logically, inevitably flowed from it, but public as was her fame, world-wide as was her fame, she valued more, loved more the modest home nook, in which she lived for so many years, valued more, loved more the children whose companionship made it home.

Now, it seems, this home is to be taken from them, and, in their old age, they are to be cast adrift. The home in which Mrs. Stowe lived and worked for so many years is to pass to strangers, to be torn down, perhaps, to be no longer the shrine to which so many lovers of freedom have wended reverent steps. And there arises the question: Will the American people allow this? Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, the distinguished sister of Mrs. Stowe, writes the following:

HARTFORD, July 15.—The possibility of saving to the daughters the residence of Mrs. Stowe in this city greatly interests me and her many friends will be much gratified by it. The facts in the case are briefly these. Mrs. Stowe's income, by the expiration of the copyright of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," had become much reduced some time before her death. She left three children, one son, Rev. Charles E. Stowe, settled in Simsbury, Conn., and two daughters, unmarried and about sixty years of age. These daughters have lived with their mother all their lives and during her years of failing health have given her the most devoted care. By her will, made ten or more years before her death, and when she doubtless expected to leave a more considerable property, she gave the life use of all her property in equal shares to her three children, and the whole property absolutely to her son after the death of the daughters. The settlement of the estate is in the hands of Charles E. Perkins Esq., of this city, a nephew of Mrs. Stowe.

I am confident that the shares of the daughters in the income that the property may be expected to yield, including the proceeds of the sale of the house, will not be sufficient for their comfortable support. It is reported that the house is now in the hands of a broker for sale. If by the generous interposition of their friends it could be rescued for the daughters it would, I am sure, be regarded as an act of great kindness, which those who have known and admired and loved Mrs. Stowe will feel that it is most fitting that the house should still remain in the family and be consecrated to her memory.

Isabella Beecher Hooker

The men and women of the present generation will with difficulty learn to understand the effect produced by the publication of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Edition following edition was published in rapid succession and through the whole country, North and South, it produced the most profound sensation. For years the abolitionists had been preaching, lecturing, writing against slavery, but more effective than all their productions of tongue or pen was the story of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The book was reproduced in England, and there also the name of Mrs. Stowe became known in every household. Translations made the work familiar to the people of the continental nations of Europe and their influence was aroused to support the abolitionists of the North in this country. To no other single influence can the final abolition of slavery in the United States be more distinctly traced than to "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

On the same block on which stands the home in which lived for so many years Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, stands also the home of Mark Twain. On its roof there have also fallen the shadows of evil fortune, but life and will and vigor still remain with him, and it is hoped that kindly humor's smiles may yet banish the frowns that darkened its deserted threshold.
