

WOMAN'S CROWNING BEAUTY.

It is the Artistic Decoration of Her Wealth of Tresses.

Special Correspondence of the Globe NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—We have serious to face a serious matter, and it will be difficult, anatomically almost impossible, save through the medium of the looking glass. The back of the hair must be decorated. While at the theater the other night I observed that those women who looked the best dressed, really smart, wore something in their hair. Two of them contented themselves with a twist of white tulle, fastened at one side with an erect bow, of the spider description of bow, made in colored velvet. This was not particularly pretty—I am not advocating its popularity for one moment, but what I wish you to attend to is the fact that some decoration is essential. A remarkably pretty one I met with the other day was formed of cut steel, in the shape of a bow, and this could be worn with or without an osprey. Fascinating aigrettes, with little drop diamonds upon them, you may buy it prettiest of all was a white bodice with a double knitted frill of tulle from the neck, shimmering with rose leaves, the top of the bodice edged with chinchilla, employed on many of the white lace bodices, carried round the epaulettes and down the fronts. Stripes, especially satin on moire, are the fashion, but they are invariably treated so that in the skirts they form a series of angles; this was charmingly illustrated in a mauve and white satin. Black embroidered thin materials are made up a great deal over white, and violet and peach tones form a capital groundwork for handsome jet embroidery. Many of the bodices for evening wear have high collars attached to reverse, which turn backwards to show a full lace bodice underneath. Some of the most graceful are draped with a new form of killed thin material, presenting the aspect of a honeycomb. This in white had been mingled with rare and beautiful lace in one deep scallop, a tall upstanding bow of yellow and white ribbon, wired, introduced at one side, and exceedingly portion. The white veils are made of white cloth braided in black and edged with black satin ribbon pleatings. The neck is filled in with darker green velvet and the velvet collar is finished with braided points of the white cloth.

your purse permits. Of all the head-dresses I have seen, however, one worn in Francillon by Mrs. Brown Potter, now playing in London, is the most fascinating. A swell hairdresser of New York has just introduced it to our society women. He says it has been adopted by several of the most elegant, and will be worn by them until its inevitable imitation by lesser lights renders the style too common. Mrs. Potter parts her hair at one side, puffing it out very much over the right ear, very little over the left, which she decorates with a huge bunch of violets with the stalks setting upwards, while the back of her hair at the side which is puffed is decorated with diamond combs—three, I think, there are in all; one in the shape of a child's comb, with a glittering row of diamonds at the top, a sort of diamond slide just to keep the short hairs in at the nape of the neck, and then a smaller diamond comb peeps at you between the violets. It sounds elaborate, doesn't it? But somehow or other, the effect is by no means overdone. For a young face and well-shaped head the coiffure we illustrate is the most artistic. The Potter coiffure is for older women, married, but still in their prime.

A general look round at the fashionable modistes' and milliners' discover a wealth of charming models. The evening gowns are particularly gorgeous. A light peach velvet, with a full front, was trimmed with black lace over white, and a yellow velvet dinner gown had gigantic white flowers embroidered on the skirt in silk, with diamond centers, and these appeared also on the baby bodice. A lovely evening dress of shaded red had a couple of black lace flounces reaching from the waist to the feet. The new bodices are singularly becoming. A white corded silk one was trimmed in crossway fashion with lace and tulle combined, drawn into the figure at the front of the waist beneath a diamond buckle; others were embroidered not only with gems intermixed with fine gold cord, but with Venetian shells and pearls. SOCIETY FLOCKS TO SHOW.

Wealth, Beauty and Fashion Return to New York for the Annual Tan-Bark Parade.

Special Correspondence of the Globe. NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—From the clubs and drawing rooms where bloom and blossom and fade the most exclusive people in Greater New York will come trooping this week a handsomely dressed crowd, haughty in manner, horsey in talk, well-fed, well-bred and gloriously indifferent to the question that occupies most men's minds—how to get the wherewithal to live tomorrow and many successive days. Society calls the occasion "The Opening of the Horse Show," and society is popularly supposed to gather in rustling gorgeousness in order to do homage to the useful animal that adds to the importance of wealth and the ease of the wealthy. Like many more popular suppositions, however, the idea that society meets to pay homage to the horse is so far wide of the mark as to be almost an absurdity. Society attends the horse show to pay homage to itself. What is the glossy skinned equine, who, splendidly formed, pranced and shows his paces in the horse show ring, compared with the still more carefully groomed men and women who will meet each other in the boxes and in the promenade at Madison Square garden tomorrow, while treating the rest of the show with the utmost indifference.

Saddle horses have increased from 139 a year ago to 155 this year. The quality is very high, and it will take a great horse to win. Nearly all of the old exhibitors have entered, while among the new ones may be noted Dr. T. Gallard Thomas, Andrew W. Smith, and Mrs. William C. Whitney will run over to the show from their residence on Long Island, and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney T. Smith have reopened their town house on Washington square purposely for horse show week, as have also Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs their town house, No. 1 East 67th street. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney have come to their pretty establishment at Fifth Avenue and 57th street, purposely to join in the horse show revels, and Mr. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes reached town with the fixed intention of making the coming week at the show a prelude to some of the most lavish entertainments New York has ever known. It will be a brilliant company on the finest of stages, with the horse as a disinterested spectator. But that some one looks after the horse's interest, after all, is shown by the unusually large number of entries—one hundred more than last year. There are many new exhibitors on the list, among them Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson, of Hull, England, who have numerous entries in the saddle and harness horse classes. Of the exhibitors one will be raised is Oliver H. Belmont, who sold all his exhibition horses a few weeks ago. They will be exhibited, however, by the new owners. As usual, the represented class is light, owners not caring to risk their horses on long railroad journeys, most of the breeders of this class being in the South. The herd prize for trotters has filled with Chimes, Island Wilkes, Alfonso and Quartermaster being entered, and with four of their get, will make the ring full. The breeding classes for trotters show a material increase in the number of entries, the new class for brood mares, with two of their get, having filled well. The driving classes promise to be interesting. Among the racing stallions the list shows as Burlington, Keeble, Ren Jr. and Dare Devil. There is a fine lot in the class for stallions of any age in harness, among them being Silvery Chimney, Wisconsin, Warren Wood, Wickliffe and Judge Westing. Among the horses which have shown 2:30 or better may be noted Silikon, 2:13 1/4; Hattie R., 2:17 1/4; Alice Leyburn, 2:24 1/4; Rival, 2:29 1/4; San Pedro, 2:12 1/4; Emolita, 2:24 1/4; Addie Lee II., 2:23 1/4; and May K., 2:24 1/4. The produce prize, for which the association adds $1,000, will contain the get of Mambrino King, Quartermaster, Ruses, Lord of the Manor and Pawnee. In the roadster class for horses four years old and over, there were nineteen entries last year. Now there are twenty-four, and the exhibitors are: C. M. Reed, J. W. Cooke, W. H. Clark, Robert Goetel, C. J. and Harry Hamlin, Col. Kip, H. N. Bain, William V. Hoffman and C. F. Bates, while the same horses in the same class for pairs.

There will be a close contest in the class for horses and best appointed pairs. Col. Kip is the favorite, his closest rivals being E. T. Stobersbury and Messrs. Hoffman and Reed. C. M. Reed's special prize for the best yearling will have ten competitors, among the represented being Alcantara, Red Wilkes, Mambrino King, Electioneer, Hummer, Island Wilkes and Chimes. There is a noticeable falling off in the hackney class. In the herd class Berserker, Cadet and Erithorpe Performer are the only entries. The number of entries in the class for harness crosses varies but little from that of a year ago, while the owners entering are changed a little, some of the old ones having disappeared from the list, and new ones being added in their places. Among those who will show list Eldridge T. Gerry, John Robinson, S. O. Vanderpool, E. D. Jordan, John Jacob Astor, J. Clinch-Smith, G. E. Holme, J. Ruppert Jr., Wm. L. Purroy, J. E. Widener, E. G. Bourne, R. F. Carman, W. L. Elkins, Mrs. Francis Lee Morrell, Mrs. T. Sufferer Taylor and Harry Payne Whitney, with new and promising horses and older ones with reputations hard to beat. The same people will be found showing in the pairs of light, middle and heavy-weight horses.

this year, as they are at Balmacaan, where it is attained the finest shooting in Scotland, from which the Martins seem slow to part. But Mrs. Astor will be there, as she will be at nearly all the important social functions this season. Mr. and Mrs. William C. Bennett and Miss Burnham. About the same exhibitors and about the same horses will be found in the jumping classes. There is little change in the entry list for the municipal and park police horses and the street cleaning department class. Sixteen have been entered for the Waldorf-Astoria cup, which has to be won three years in succession before becoming the property of any one. The carriage horse classes for light and heavy weight animals have the same number of entries as last year. An interesting class among them is for horses, carriages, and appointments, the new-comers in the class being T. Wyman Porter, S. C. Stevens, Mrs. Francis Leo Morrell, and P. W. Roush, the older exhibitors being Dr. Gagnon and Messrs. Wormser, Bates, Elkins and Widener. For the carriage horse championship Coxy and Aladdin are already entered, and there will be post entries. For the small tandems there were five entries last year and twelve this. In the large tandems there are about the same number of horses as last year and the same exhibitors. The newcomers in the small class are E. D. Jordan, T. M. Hilliard, E. H. Weatherbee, Miss Martha Cameron, and Miss Edith Colford. There will be two more fours than last year. In the small fours there are the same exhibitors, but there is a great improvement in the quality of the horses. In the big fours, Tichenor & Co., F. C. Stevens, C. A. Baudouin, E. D. Jordan, Louis T. Wormser, J. Dickman Brown, John Arthur, J. S. Bratton, H. P. Whitney, W. L. Elkins, R. F. Carman, and C. F. Bates are represented. Messrs. Carman and Bates are the only ones entered to try for the cup for coach appointments, and with the quickest change of horses in the ring. In the classes for high steppers, light and heavy pairs and singles, among the old and well known winners are Surprise, Coxy, Actor, Governor Brown and Aladdin, together with a lot of new blood of which the owners are hopeful. The new exhibitors here are Tichenor & Co., of Chicago; C. R. McLeod of Canada; S. P. Hughson, of Philadelphia; C. A. Baudouin, of New York; Harry Payne Whitney, James man, Tom Shanley and R. F. Carman, owner of Walsingham and A Stranger, in New York.

NEW YORK SOCIETY'S GREAT HORSE SHOW.

There opens tomorrow in Madison Square Garden the greatest function of New York society. It has even arisen to the dignity of an annual event of national interest. Society people from every city visit Gotham to see the famous Four Hundred place themselves on exhibition. Among well known society people who are expected to shine there this week will be Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, George W. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer, Chauncey M. Depew, Mrs. William C. Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer, and in fact, the cream of the most exclusive set in America. It is considered but fair to mention the horse, who plays such a minor role. Our artist has observed this idea. The late Mr. Shakespeare might well inquire what intrinsic value a name possessed.
