And Hence They Give Good Advice About How to Make Life Happier.

Above are the pictures of two wellknown and noble gentlemen. One is the Rt. Rev. Bishop Edward Wilson, D. D., LL. D., and the other is Rev. J. E. Rankin, D. D., LL. D., president of Howard University, Washington, D. C. These gentlemen have secured the high positions they hold and the confidence which every one has in them through the fidelity they have shown to humanity and the cause they represent. cities gathered at the annual Washington birthday celebration as guests of President Monfort and of Mrs. Monfort. The stars and stripes were used effectively about the rooms of the club house. Over the mantels and doorways great flags were draped in graceful folds and smaller flags were used here and there on the walls and tables.

A wood fire burned in the large open grate and in the smaller rooms, opening from the main reception room, small tables of refreshments were in charge of lady members of the club. The St. Anthony Hill orchestra gave its services for the afternoon and a delightful series of popular and familiar melodies was the result.

Over 400 men and women called dur-

In speaking upon this subject, Dr. Rankin says: "I have known of many who have been permanently cured of diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs by the use of Warner's Safe Cure. I know, too, of its being used in simpler cases by physicians of the high ilar cases by physicians of the highest standing. This remedy I want in the cause of humanity to recommend."
Men like Bishop Wilson and Dr. Rankin do not speak hastily or of things of which they are not fully aware. They love men and women and desire to see them made, physically as well as morally, better. Thousands of dollars could not for a moment tempt them to that both these gentlemen have found great help and assistance from the same source, namely one of the great rule.

The choir boys of the Christ-church tendered their friends from the choir of St. James an evening at home last evening in the guild room of the church.

The ladies of the parish also graced the affair by their attendance. Games of all sorts were played during the evening, after which the ladies served refreshments, and a general good time was enjoyed by the boys. It was the last social event among the choir boys until after Lent.

The members of the Ladies' Social Circle of Plymouth Church, St. Paul, gave a New England supper last evening in the church parlors, Wabasha and Summit avenue, and the entertainment was enlivened with a programme of music and literary exercises by pupils of Miss Emma Rubbs. The singers were accompanied by Prof. Yapp. A novel feature of the entertainment was the singing of the "New Hall Columbia."

It was not until the banquet hour came shortly after 11 o'clock when any reference to the day was made. Then in a number of informal toasts George Washington was mentioned, and was made the subject of many complimentary speeches. The women of People's church gave a novel evening party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wattrous, on Portland avenue, last evening in celebaration of Washington's birthday. The rooms were decorated with flags and r'bobons and all of the guests, which included most of the members of the church, came in Colonial attire. The gathering was very attractive. There was an informal programme of music. Mr.Luther Newport led the cotillion given in Elks' hall last evening by the German club. The affair was exceedingly pretty, as all the club's affairs are, and there were several new figures introduced during the evening. The chaperones were Mrs. Luther Newport and Mrs. C. E. Furness. Pretty and novel was the Washington's birthday entertainment given by the Standard club last night under the supervision of Miss Riett Haas.

The programme of the evening opened with music by the orchestra, after which the curtain rose on a pleasing comedictta in one act, entitled "A Cup of Tea." The plot contained a number of very delightful situations, the characters of the piece being interpreted by Louis Frankel, Fred Plechner, Miss Doria Buchman and Miss Josie Lowenstein. The piece was a translation from the French of "Une Tasse de The."

"The Loan of a Lover" was the rather generous title of the next piece. It dwelt with the predicaments of one Capt. Amersford, who lived on a canal near the Utrecht. The impersonation of the characters was executed by Leo Goodkind, Miss Flora Wirth, Miss Laura Goodman, Isador Cohn, Norman Goodman and Dr. Haas.

As a fitting climax to the evening's diversion, several numbers were danced through after the dramatical part of the entertainment had been executed. Supper was also served by the club's caterer. Miss Pauline Thauwald and Philip Heck were married yesterday at 5 o'clock at the bride's home, on Ramsey street. A reception followed the ceremony.

delivered a short and appropriate address. Mr. Noyes said:

"One hundred years—less one—have passed since Washington spint, most happilly, his last birthday on earth, a wedding in the family marking the event.

"Since then no recurrence of the day has failed of increasing notice. Today in all civilized lands, his praise will be spoken and more good Americans will gather to do him honor than ever before. We do well to cultivate respect and reverence for all the great and good, the heroic men and women, of the past, whose lives were a blessing and an honor to their race, for it is the

"Tidal wave of such nobler souls, which Into our inmost being rolls, And lifts us unewares
Out of our meaner cares.
All praise then to those whose words and deeds
Thus help us in our dally needs,
And, by their overflow, raise us from all that's low."

"Washington was a man of like passions as ourselves, strong and vigorous in his youth, plenty of warm, red blood coursing in his veins. If, when older, he became grave before he became gray, and, later still, was called dry and cold, we need not wonder. I have sympathy with those who would give his faults undue prominence. His character far transcended that of any other public man of his time, and I know of no peer among his predecessors. Of those who followed him in public life there is only one whose prime and fame can compare with his. No nobler figure, battling so long and honestly for 'the just and true,' ever stood in the forefront of a nation's life.

"I trust that respect for our rulers is not dead yet. United England honors its royal ruler and even distracted Austria, its emperor.

"Let us seek to elect only those whom we can honor, and then we can honor.

not dead yet. United England honors its royal ruler and even distracted Austria, its emperor.

"Let us seek to elect only those whom we can honor, and then we can honor those whom we elect!

"When the war of independence closed Washington was universally acknowledged as the captain who had steered the ship of state in to its safe harbor, and he it was who thus afforded to the 3,000 000 of his country men the opportunity to become the 70,600,000 of our fellow countrymen of today. What was the secret of his success; a success so marked that when he died. Dec. 14, 1897 the channel fleet, of England, lowered its flags and the banners of the army of France were draped in black! And this, too, for the man who had wrested an empire from the one; and was preparing to defend his country from the other.

"The answer, I think, must be that it was to his resolute soul, his indomitable will, more than to any other personal trait or gift, that his success was due for "There's no chance, or destiny, or fate Can circumvent, or hinder, or control The firm resolve of a determined soul. Gifts count for nothing—will alone is great; All things yield to it either soon or late. What obstacle can stay the force Of the sea-seeking river in its course, Or cause to wait, the ascending orb of day? Each well-born soul must win what it deserves.

At the conclusion of President Noyes' remarks all the school children in the gallery rose and sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" in a manner that thrilled the hearers. They were led by Prof. C. H. Congdon and Prof. William Browne presided at the organ.

essays on patriotic topics written by pupils of the high schools of Minne-sota. President Hurd said in substance:

Such is the mission of the Sons of the Revolution, and of its brother society, the Sons of the American Revolution, and such is the mission of the magnificent society of the Daughters of the American Revolution is the mission of the magnificent society of the Daughters of the American Revolution in their blessed and far-reaching work of organized, intelligent patriotism.

Here in Minnesota we can do everything as briefly outlined except erect revolutionary monuments and memorials. Fortunately, the Minnesota Society of the Sons of the Revolution found a plan in which to invest its funds and interest its members and the public. The plan was to enlist the patriotic services of the youth of Minnesota, by inciting them to research in American patriotic essay contests on subjects assigned by the society and rewarding the winners with silver and bronze medals made from a die furnished by the general society. To make the competition equal and fair we opened it to the students of the high schools of the state.

The plan was really very simple, as it was only a combination of the required exercises in writing, temposition and history, and should have met with a hearty and instantaneous support of teachers, principals and superintendents.

You have heard of the plan and doubtless realize its value.

It is with patriotic public opinion whether this state society shall continue it as a state affair, or confine it to the Twin Cities, or abandon it altogether.

If the "Stars and Stripes" and this unique and beautiful flag proclamation of Secretary Townsend cannot arouse more interest among the high schools of the state, we must find some other ways and means to employ our time, labor and money.

The subject this year is a glorious one—"The Stars and Stripes."

I have the great pleasure of presenting and decorating with our compliments and congratulations the winner of the prize medal, Willard Ackerson, of the Minneapolis South Side high school.

The bronze medal for second prize was won by George M. Brack, of St. Paul Central high school, and I take great pleasure in presenting and decorating Mr. Brack with his medal.

As the recipients of the prizes stepped to the platform, they were applauded and when George Brack turned to leave it he was greeted by a crowd of fellow schoolmates in the rear of the church with the Central high school

"The New Hail Columbia" was sung by the school children and then the Rev. Andrew B. Meldrum, D. D., de-livered the address of the day.

livered the address of the day.

"Once more," said Dr. Meldrum, "this busy nation stands still to honor the memory of the man to whom, more than to any other man, it owes its independence. Poor in human sensibility is he to whom this day is barren of strength and patriotism. "I might tell of the long and flery trial through which he led the people of this land. They turned to him as of the world. He never despaired. He believed the God of the Nations had chosen him for a commission, and he was right.

"It was not Blucher or Wellington that defeated Bonaparte. It was the shadow of God's hand that hovered over Waterloo. God was passing by over this country, and George Washington was equipped by God for his marvelous destiny. The young republic was sacred as a child of God.

"I have read many times that wonderful document known as Washington's farewell address, in which he gives to the American people the maturest results of his life-long experience. Let me ask if in the annals of this nation there is a nobler passage than that wherein that stainless hero, having fought through the great wars, one of which ended in the independence of his country; having in posts of high responsibility assisted in bringing about two organic changes of government; having been twice called unanimously to the chief magistracy; now with victory on his helm, with the proud affection of the army, with the idolarty of the whole nation—humbly lays his honors down that he may retire to the unambitious walks of a private citizen in the quiet shades of Vernon?

"What other conquerer like him?

"What Bonaparte of human greed and selfishness would have let silp such an opportunity of seating himself on a throne and building for himself an autocratic dynasty for his own house?

"With what dignity of language, with what tenderness of soficitude, does he urge the necessity of ever deepening loyalty to one who, though dead, yet speaketh:

"The unity of government which constitutes one people now dear to you. It is justly so, for it is the main pillar in the edifice of your real independence. The support of your tranquility at home, your peace abroad, of your safety, of your prosperity, of that very liberty which you so highly prize.

"These are words which though uttered 100 years ago, were spoken for all time."

Loyalty, Loyalty, Loyalty.

"This is the thought he would have burn its way into the conscience of every citi-

"That if it was worth while that men brave and true, should suffer and die for the sake of American independence and nationality those who are the inheritors of privileges purchased at so tremendous a cost should live in grand fidelity to the idea of a true democracy. And if we ask how this loyalty should find expression, we find the answer in that immortal message—'respect for its authority, compilance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty."

"Here, then, we find the spirit of loyalty and devotion projected into one word, and "The sense of duty is the life of patriotism.

"There is no idea more great the spirit of loyalty."

and devotion projected into one word, and "The sense of duty is the life of patriotism." There is no idea more grand than that of true freedom. But what is it? Many a man will tell you that freedom is the right to do as one pleases. This idea left unchecked would dry up the very springs of the nation's nobleness. Liberty is the right to do as one pleases only when one pleases to do what is right. To be free is not synonymous with infinite facilities for getting drunk. The prime essential of freedom is obedience to law. Rights and duties are indissolubly joined together. They balance each other in complete and sublime equilibrium. In proportion as we fall in duty we forfeit our rights. A man's liberty ends and ought to end when that liberty ends and ought to end when that liberty ends and ought to end when that liberty becomes the curse of his neighbors. I ask you, then, whether there is any one thing more needed today than just this-reverence for law, obedience to law. This is the patriotism of peace whose requisitions are no less sacred or imperative than those of war.

"Let me call your attention to one other of war.

"Let me call your attention to one other element of Washington's conception of patriotism. Again I pray you to listen—
'of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensible supporters.

"Here speaketh no person, priest, or bishop; no narrow-minded special pleader in behalf of effect nations. The philosophy of history, revealed to him that the controlling forces which shaped events and determined destinies were the love of freedom and the fear of God.

"It is true that here there is no union of church and state; true that the state does not dictate to the church and that the church dare not dictate to the state; but the state is neither aetheistic nor agnostic.
"Before it can be either it must go backward and blot out its whole past history as it goes; it must change the character of its laws and the very genius of its institutions, which are but the culmination of the co-operation of the spirit of liberty and the spirit of religion which through the ages have been making for righteousness and peace—righteousness based on the eternal law of God—peace founded on the inalienable rights of man."

There was a prolonged applause when Dr Meldium concluded

The Pretoria is the crowning triumph of the extensive ship-building establishment of Blohm & Voss, at Hamburg, Germany, and adds another success to the many already achieved by years. She has a length over all of 586 feet, a breadth of 62, a depth of 42, and a displacement of 23,500 tons. No steamship in the world has a greater carrying capacity. The Pretoria, measured as buildings are, is seven stories high, and above her seven docks, and 70 feet above the surface of the water is the captain's bridge. The Pretoria has capacity for 20,000 tons of freight, an amount which it would take twenty-five railroad trains of twenty-five cars each to transport by rail. To facilitate the handling of this cargo she is equipped with fourteen steam winches of the most powerful type, twenty-eight heavy derricks and eight steam cranes, or booms, as they are called in ship parlance. With these modern appliances these tons of freight are picked up from the wharf as if they were but so many pounds, and swung upon the upper deck, and then lowered to their proper place through some one of the nine wide hatches.

She has accommodations for 328 cabin passengers, and comfortable and roomy quarters for a large number of travelers by steerage, as well as for the large crew necessary for handling her.

NO MORE DIFFERENTIALS.

Great Northern and Northern Paeific Will Hereafter Oppose Them. CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—It is now reported hat the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads have joined hands to bring about an abolition of all Canadian Pacific differenan abolition of all Canadian Pacific differentials, and will insist that that be an indispensable element in the settlement of the present transcontinental rate war.

These differentials are at the bottom of the trouble. They have been the source of annoyance and friction since they have been in existence, and now it is claimed the present war offers an excellent opportunity of getting rid of them once and forever. It is urged that there is really no reason for their existence. Any disadvantages to which the Canadian Pacific may be subjected to in competing for transcentinental business on the one hand are more than offset by advantages it enjoys on the other.

It may be that all the matters now in dispute between the roads may be submitted to arbitration for settlement. In that case the question of differentials would have to abide by the result, same as all the other matters in dispute. Should the war be fought out to a finish, however, it is said the two roads named will insist on the abolition of all differentials.

Long and Short Haul Clause. WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.-The interstate commerce commission has suspended the operation of the long and short haul clause of ation of the long and short haul clause of the interstate commerce act in favor of rall-read lines in the United States in competition with the Canadian Pacific railread, as to passenger business between points in the province of Manitoba and contiguous territory and points upon the Detroit and St. Clair river and easterly thereof in the Dominion of Canada, and in that portion of the New England states reached directly by the rails of the Grand Trunk railread.

It is said that the American roads will-tomorrow ask the interstate commerce commission to extend the scope of this relief so as to take in additional competing points, conditions being similar. DAKOTA RATE CASE.

Testimony on the Connection of the Old Company and the Present. The North Dakota rate case was resumed yesterday at the Northern Pacific building. The railroad commissioners of North Dakota

The railroad commissioners of North Dakota were present. Chief Counsel Grover, of the Great Northern, and Chief Counsel Peck, of the Milwaukee road, and Chief Counsel Peck, of the Milwaukee road, and Chief Counsel C. W. Bunn, of the Northern Pacific, were also in attendance.

Attorney General Cowan, of North Dakota, cross-examined Comptroller Gray, of the Northern Pacific, concerning the bonds, stocks, securities and finances of the road. The object of Mr. Cowan was to show how far the holdings of stock and securities of the old company and the reorganized one were identical and what securities, held by the present Northern Pacific Railway company, were other than legitimate liabilities and assets of old company. Another line of questions was directed to the object of ascertaining whether or not permanent improvements of the system have been charged up to operating expenses.

St. Paul & Stillwater Annual. The annual meeting of the St. Paul & Stillwater road, a branch of the St. Paul & Duluth Railroad company, was held yesterday.

The stockholders elected as directors B. Somers Hayes, A. B. Plough, James Smith Jr., D. A. McKinley, James D. Armstrong, Emerson Hadley and A. V. Williams.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.—D. McNicoll, general passenger traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific railroad, says that the cut in the local passenger rates is not made because of the Grand Trunk's cut, but because the Grank Trunk is conspiring with the Western roads to undermine the general business of the Canadian Pacific.

Delegation From Fergus Falls. F. J. Pefferlee and H. P. Bergman, of Fergus Falls, called on President Hill, of the Great Northern, yesterday, and discussed with him plans of the Great Northern road for improvements of the Lincoln avenue bridge in that city.

The Society of the Sons of the Revolution was organized to stand before the public as a practical patriotic association worthy or respect, honor and attention.

Absolutely ignoring politics, religion, wealth or social rank, it gathers together the worthy descendants of the fathers and founders of the nation, that by their honored names the patriotic services these descendants may be stimulated and inspired to a high appreciation of their patriotism, devotion, heroism and sacrifices. That by this appreciation they may educate themselves and their fellow countrymen to a high standard of loyal, unselfish, watchful patriotism.
