

SOLID COLORT

More of it to the square inch in a well-made Bicycle or Golf Suit than in any garment worn by men.

Bicycle Suits are designed primarily for comfort. In Boston Suits there is added a certain elegance, a general appearance of correctness in detail and material that makes them a source of joy to well-dressed men.

$6 to $5.

Made with strap bottoms and patent detachable kersey cuffs Extra Knickerbockers, $1 to $6.

BOYS' BICYCLE SUITS, $5.00 and upwards.

BOWLBY & CO. Sixth and Robert.

Have you seen the new Bicycle and Golf Gloves? Great! Cool, but protective.

SECOND WARD ENTHUSES

MEETING OF THE SCHIFFMANN-SMITH DEMOCRATIC CLUB

Every Seat Occupied in the Hall at East Seventh and Fauquier Streets and Close Attention Paid to the Speakers of the Evening.

There was no lack of enthusiasm at the meeting of the Schiffmann-Smith Second Ward Democratic club, held in the club rooms at East Seventh and Fauquier streets, last night.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

At 8 o'clock every seat was occupied by actual voters, who were in the best of good humor and gave close attention to all that was said.

DORAN AND HIS CHIEF CALL

GET THE GLAD HAND AT REPUBLICAN HEADQUARTERS

The Committee Finds Out That the Mayor Will Not Stand for Everything, Even to Help Kiefer Out.

No Chance to Allow a Gambling House to Run, Even to Help the Campaign.

Mayor Doran and Chief of Police Goss called at the Republican campaign committee rooms yesterday.

"Recd" Goss was there already. "The few members of the committee gave the mayor the glad hand," he doubted its being on the square.

"The mayor is pretty nearly knowing a gold brick when he sees one," Dar Reese showed him a new sample when he went to Mayor Doran Monday and besought him to attend the Kiefer mass meeting.

"So that he wasn't deceived any yesterday when the mayor handed one right back in the letter which he finally consented to write for Reese to read to the meeting."

Reese insisted on having the letter, and he got it. He could not, therefore, refuse to read it, although all who contained was an expression of gratification.

"The mayor (Doran's) administration had been a good one," he had a chance to dispose of it.

"So that he wasn't deceived any yesterday when the mayor handed one right back in the letter which he finally consented to write for Reese to read to the meeting."

"The mayor is pretty nearly knowing a gold brick when he sees one," Dar Reese showed him a new sample when he went to Mayor Doran Monday and besought him to attend the Kiefer mass meeting.

"So that he wasn't deceived any yesterday when the mayor handed one right back in the letter which he finally consented to write for Reese to read to the meeting."

"The mayor is pretty nearly knowing a gold brick when he sees one," Dar Reese showed him a new sample when he went to Mayor Doran Monday and besought him to attend the Kiefer mass meeting.

"So that he wasn't deceived any yesterday when the mayor handed one right back in the letter which he finally consented to write for Reese to read to the meeting."

"The mayor is pretty nearly knowing a gold brick when he sees one," Dar Reese showed him a new sample when he went to Mayor Doran Monday and besought him to attend the Kiefer mass meeting.

"So that he wasn't deceived any yesterday when the mayor handed one right back in the letter which he finally consented to write for Reese to read to the meeting."

"The mayor is pretty nearly knowing a gold brick when he sees one," Dar Reese showed him a new sample when he went to Mayor Doran Monday and besought him to attend the Kiefer mass meeting.

"So that he wasn't deceived any yesterday when the mayor handed one right back in the letter which he finally consented to write for Reese to read to the meeting."

"The mayor is pretty nearly knowing a gold brick when he sees one," Dar Reese showed him a new sample when he went to Mayor Doran Monday and besought him to attend the Kiefer mass meeting.

"So that he wasn't deceived any yesterday when the mayor handed one right back in the letter which he finally consented to write for Reese to read to the meeting."

HORST AND CITY'S MONEY

HIS RECORD MORE THAN HE CAN OVERCOME

Minnesota Savings and Allomanna Banks Deposits Bob Up at Every Meeting to Annoy Him—Isn't Facing the Music—Markham in an Unpleasant Fix—Supporting Ticket, Saving Horst's Bondsman.

The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks.

"This is the money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks," he said, "and it is the money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

HORST AND CITY'S MONEY

HIS RECORD MORE THAN HE CAN OVERCOME

Minnesota Savings and Allomanna Banks Deposits Bob Up at Every Meeting to Annoy Him—Isn't Facing the Music—Markham in an Unpleasant Fix—Supporting Ticket, Saving Horst's Bondsman.

The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks.

"This is the money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks," he said, "and it is the money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

Field, Schlick & Co.

TAILOR MADE JACKETS AND SUITS.

Who would buy trashy, ill-fitting, poorly-made garments when strictly first-class qualities made in the best manner may be had at prices like these?

A special line of Jackets in which are included all our finest silk-lined garments, go on sale today at $5.00 to $7.75.

A BARGAIN IN CAPES. Several lines of New Capes—Silks, Clay Diagonals, Unfinished Worsteeds, Kerseys and Camel's Hair Cloths, hand-somely braided or trimmed with Lace, Chiffon and Jet, all full silk-lined; actual values $8.50 to $11.50.

Tailor-made Suits in the newest and handsomest styles of the season, including Russian Blouse, two-button Box Coats, Eton and Cutaway effects, a large assortment of materials and colors, values up to $17.50. Choice for $13.50.

$1.00 and $1.25 Silks For 69 Cents, 73 Cents each today.

Wash Goods Sale. Three big lots of Wash Goods are to be closed out in the Domestic Room today.

5 Cents a yard all day today.

Lining Leaders. Best qualities are sold at lowest prices here.

2c 8c 10c

For Men. We picked up 118 dozen of Men's Fine Gauge Maco Cotton Socks at a low price.

15 Cents a pair.

FIELD, SCHLICK & Co.

Offering prices for the discovery of trees of this particular variety he has as pretty a specimen as grows anywhere.

FIELD, SCHLICK & Co.

CLAIMS TO BE AN ATTORNEY.

F. C. Harrison Arrested in St. Paul on the Charge of Dealing in Forged Checks.

It is alleged that Harrison passed a forged check for $5 on a street today.

CLAIMS TO BE AN ATTORNEY.

Dwyer Says the Californian Can Get Another Chance at Him.

Prof. M. J. Dwyer was told yesterday that Dan McLeod, the Californian wrestler, who defeated Tuesday night, wanted another match at catch weights.

TELEPHONE NORTHWESTERN TELEPHONE EXCHANGE COMPANY.

Extensions. A fair estimate is that during the year 1898 the above list will be increased to 10,000 subscribers and 500 cities and towns.

BUSINESS MEN Of Minneapolis and St. Paul, before signing long-term contracts for the service of another telephone company, should be guaranteed a service equal to the above.

POLIGY Of THE NORTHWESTERN TELEPHONE EXCHANGE COMPANY is to continue as heretofore to furnish the public with the best permanent system of telephone service known, at the lowest possible rate.

CASTORIA. The smallest medicine in the world.

PERSONAL—Many an interesting story is told in the personal column of The Globe.

CASTORIA. The smallest medicine in the world.

PERSONAL—Many an interesting story is told in the personal column of The Globe.

CASTORIA. The smallest medicine in the world.

PERSONAL—Many an interesting story is told in the personal column of The Globe.

Kaldunski, You're It.

Kaldunski, You're It.

Kaldunski, it's up to you to quit. Let's see about you!

You were elected by the Populist vote of the Eighth ward, weren't you? Didn't you throw down every Populist that you ever had anything to do with?

Don't you know that you couldn't get a Populist vote in the ward that has you charged up to it? And how can you have the nerve to ask a Republican to vote for you, when you are carrying favor with the Populists?

But about your aldermanic record? Did you ever do a single thing in the council that was beneficial to your ward or the city?

Was it not by your efforts that the action of the previous council, which had appropriated $12,000 for the repair and enlargement of the Gorman school, was reconsidered?

What were your motives in doing that? Did not the action contravene the desires of nine-tenths of the citizens of the Eighth?

Was it not done that you might open the way to the building of a school in the midst of a swamp?

Was your motive to help out the owners of that swamp or to benefit the people who live a mile away and have to send their children to that school?

Let us know something about you, Kaldunski. You have really been buried in the council long enough.

FOURTH WARD, REPUBLICANS. Open Headquarters at Sixth and Washington.

The Fourth Ward Republican club has secured the use of the room at Sixth and Washington streets, for its headquarters during the balance of the campaign.

Old traditions of the party were related by Capt. Gallick, Dar Reese, W. J. Donahoe and others.

Meetings will be held regularly until May 8.

A Long Look Ahead. The politicians are even now beginning to weigh the possibilities involved in the next presidential election.

The Audience Was Afraid He Was Going to Speak. "Don't go away; I'm not going to make a speech," pleaded Dar Reese as the remnant of what had been a fair-sized audience began to disperse.

Those Carpets, Draperies and Furniture neglect an unusual opportunity for satisfying their wants, their taste and their pocketbook.

SCHUNEMAN & EVANS, St. Paul.

HORST AND CITY'S MONEY

HIS RECORD MORE THAN HE CAN OVERCOME

Minnesota Savings and Allomanna Banks Deposits Bob Up at Every Meeting to Annoy Him—Isn't Facing the Music—Markham in an Unpleasant Fix—Supporting Ticket, Saving Horst's Bondsman.

The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks.

"This is the money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks," he said, "and it is the money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."

"The question of who will be the city treasurer has been settled. Things have come to such a pass that Horst, the Republican candidate cannot present himself at a meeting without half of the audience jeering him and asking for information—in a tone of voice that implies the utter lack of confidence on the part of the auditors in any answer that might be made—about what became of the city money that Mr. Horst put into the broken banks."