

ALL HEARTS AFIRE

Continued from First Page. By the time the Second had passed there was no man or woman in the crowd who did not assume that the Minnesota boys would do their full duty to the nation's cause.

The First regiment followed close on the flank of Col. Bobleter's command. Col. Reeve and Maj. Bean rode side by side just as they did when the regiment fell in earlier in the morning.

Directly following the First regiment in order of march, came Col. Van Duzee at the head of the Third regiment. Francis Bidwell, E. S. Person and Chas. M. Schaefer commanded the three battalions of the Third.

The field officers who rode with the regiment were Adj. Robert L. Winne, Chaplain William Colbert, Surgeons A. B. Cole, A. Law and A. H. Rowe, and Quartermaster A. B. Cox.

The St. Cloud company, recruited by Sheriff McKelvey, had no uniforms, but they were all of them big strapping fellows, and looked every inch the typical Yankee soldier, despite the absence of blue.

At the corner of Lexington the troops halted for a rest of fifteen minutes. During the march several men out of each regiment were compelled to drop out because of the weight of their equipment.

Departure of the Troops Was a Solemn Occasion. It was hardly a "happy gathering." Most of the fun was indulged in before the companies began to arrive.

Excited young women whose men friends had enlisted, nervously watched their hands, and looked at the excited girls of the school girls was to be heard on one side and the audible criticism of one or another's gown or hat by groups of women, on the other.

Parts of the crowd crushed up the capitol steps only to be turned back again by the all-important blue coats, who were keeping this point clear for the descent of the governor and his gaily uniformed staff.

The crowd ceased its restless surging and formed itself into compact masses on either side of the streets surrounding the state building and vented its enthusiasm in great cheers for the bands of men who were approaching with even tread and unsmiling faces.

The newsies had found the desired lamp posts, and, having "shined" up, were watching "de army" with dazed eyes, meantime hugging their particular lamp posts with arms and legs.

some of the boys did not know exactly how to manage the heavy knapsacks, they unrolled their rest just as much and furnished something for the veterans in the crowd to talk about.

The wives and mothers of many of the men were among the spectators and when the order to rest came they pressed forward, with little words of advice and dual farewell.

Friends of all were there in abundance. But the men were very serious. There were not many smiles and there were many white faces, and when, at 11 o'clock, the order came to fall in, there was little cheering and many eyes were wet.

The governor and his handsomely uniformed staff rode pompously round the building, and turned out for field practice. The slight of hundreds of prancing horses, mounted by fine-looking uniformed men, stirred the spectators up to an intense pitch of enthusiasm.

"The soldiers took good care of the cars of the Omaha line, and I was surprised when inspecting the same at the end of the trip at the good condition they were in. The colored men seemed to appreciate the fact that they were being afforded the best equipment of any of the troops that were transported, and showed their appreciation by keeping the cars in the best of order."

"The blacks were finely disciplined, and would only leave the cars when commanded to do so by the white officers. The officers marched to the army. It had 117 men in line, of whom 57 were new men.

The company of the First in appearance and efficiency in the First regiment. The men marched in splendid form up the street, and the band played "The Star Spangled Banner," presented by the ladies of Red Wing, who had assembled at the depot to see the company off.

Every One Wanted to See the Arriving Troops. The volunteers from outside the Twin Cities began to arrive at 7 o'clock, and by 10:30 all were here except the St. Cloud company. Great crowds were on hand to greet even the earliest.

The Duluth companies were the first to arrive. Companies C and G were on an special train over the Eastern Minnesota, reaching the depot at 7:05.

The special trains bearing the companies of the Second from New Ulm, Albert Lea, Winona, Austin, Faribault, Fargo, Worthington, Red Wing, Tracy and other points came rolling into the union depot about 10:30 o'clock.

The seven companies from O. V. I., Le Roy, Park, Anoka, Ferguson Falls, Crookston, Long Prairie and Zumbrota arrived later on the Milwaukee and G. & E. Northern trains and were also escorted to the place of rendezvous by the band.

The four companies formed in line in the following order: Company C, Duluth, Capt. C. C. Teare—102 volunteers and recruits.

Company M, Princeton, Capt. L. C. Patterson—85 recruits without uniforms.

Company A, Duluth, Capt. H. V. Eva—101 men.

Company E, Merriam Park, Capt. G. S. Holmes—106 men.

Company B, Anoka, Capt. George D. Bartlett—80 men, mostly recruits.

Company K, of Stillwater, was the most enthusiastic on its arrival. All the men wore buttoned bouquets, given them before leaving home.

The Prison City turned out 6,000 people to see them start. The band of that place serenaded the boys before the train left, and the local G. A. R. was out in a body.

Commander of the Second Regiment.

amidst the intense interest of the people the lines fell in. Nobody had a great deal to say. It was not a happy gathering.

The hundreds of flags of all sizes, which fluttered gaily from the breasts of the people or floated with regal dignity from the tops of the neighboring buildings, were all that enlivened the scene. Here and there a few enthusiastic ones made a spluttering of applause, but the majority watched the retreat with sad hearts and even a dash and swing of military music could not dispel the feeling, "fat perhaps was indeed 'fare well.'"

ON CLASSIC CHICKAMAUGA. George H. McKee Says the Troops Look Fine. George H. McKee, assistant general passenger agent of the Omaha road, returned yesterday from Chickamauga. Mr. McKee accompanied the Third cavalry there from St. Paul, that regiment having been transported via the Omaha line.
