

THE ST. PAUL GLOBE

TUESDAY, MAY 31, 1898. Published Daily, Sundays and Weekly. NEWSPAPER ROW, Fourth and Minnesota Streets, St. Paul, Minnesota.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. Table with columns for 1 mo, 6 mos, 12 mos and rates for Daily, Sunday, and Weekly.

Address all communications and make all remittances payable to THE GLOBE CO., St. Paul, Minnesota.

BRANCH OFFICES: New York, 10 Spruce St.; Chicago, 100 N. Dearborn St.; St. Louis, 100 N. 2nd St.; Minneapolis, 100 N. 2nd St.

HOW TO ORDER: Orders for the delivery of THE ST. PAUL GLOBE, either residence or place of business, may be made by postal card or through telephone.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Subscribers ordering addresses of their papers changed must allow their former address as well as present address.

TELEPHONE: GLOBE Publication Office, 1063; Editorial Rooms, 1063.

TUESDAY'S WEATHER: Fair, Light Southerly Winds. By the United States Weather Bureau.

YESTERDAY'S TEMPERATURES: St. Paul, 50; Duluth, 48; Minneapolis, 50; Chicago, 50; New York, 50.

YESTERDAY'S MEANS: Barometer, 30.28; Mean temperature, 50; Relative humidity, 65.

RIVER AT S. A. M.: Danger Gauge Change in Station. Line Reading, 24 Hours.

TODAY'S EVENTS: Democrats meet, Swiss Casino hall, 8 P.M.; Irish-Americans meet, Oxford hall, 8 P.M.

ATLANTIC LINERS: NEW YORK-ARRIVED: Mch 1, from London; City of Rome, Glasgow; Spaarndam, Rotterdam; Bova, Liverpool.

THE ST. PAUL GLOBE: Livestock News, Latest News, Reliable News—No Fake War News.

And for once it did not rain. The American fleet without doubt is a "corker."

Even Mr. Foraker sings "All flags look alike to me." It is reasonably certain that Cervara pronounces it "sly."

The St. Paul club may have remembered the Maine. Schley may have read the rule, "First catch your hare."

Madrid's victory zone in future will be decidedly circumscribed. Soldiers who write letters home on hard tack may be considered ill bred.

In spite of war times patriotism and road races divided the day pretty evenly. Spain is getting where she can see the writing on the wall without the aid of a field glass.

Gen. Blanco would be glad to call off "at home" at Havana which Uncle Sam proposes to attend. Yankee soldiers celebrating Memorial day in Georgia are final proof that the old war is forever over.

The capture of an English steamer off Havana shows that John Bull, like the rest of the world, must keep off the grass. The next Spanish admiral who sails from Cadiz will be told the story of the parrot who talked too much, before he starts.

It is calculated that the oratory expended yesterday would have supplied the pneumatic guns of the Vesuvius after the war. Exhaustive instructions which, according to the dispatches, have been mailed to Gen. Merritt will probably make August tired.

Preparing Fresh Memories. From now on for another generation Memorial day will resume the somberness of its earlier days. The nation is preparing another stock of sad memories, and the work of mourning will be for years to come more prominent among the participants in the exercises of the day than it has been for several years.

Had peace continued, it would be but a few years before the day would be given over almost entirely to relaxation and enjoyment. Addresses would still be made in which patriotism and sacrifice would be the theme, but through them all would run a note of enjoyment. The somber shadows of the war cloud would have vanished. But we are again in war time.

One of the Implacables. The orator of the day at the G. A. R. memorial exercises in the Auditorium yesterday was "Gen." I. N. Walker, of Indianapolis, ex-national commander of the organization.

A Muffled Fire Alarm. Senator J. B. Foraker wants the captured flags returned now, eleven years after he gained the sobriquet of "Fire Alarm" by his ferocious assault upon President Cleveland for his flag order.

IN WOMAN'S REALM. Thomas Davidson, in his article on "The Ideal Training of the American Girl," published in the June Forum, says: "A woman is first of all a human being."

THE EDUCATED WOMAN. Miss Mary Ellen Sigbee, daughter of Capt. Sigbee, has received the scholarship awarded annually to the best female student of the Washington League of Washington.

Charles Murphy Dead. Charles Murphy, well known in typographical circles, was killed in a fall from his home, Richmond, Wis., yesterday.

Baron Playfair Dead. Distinguished chemist and a prominent parliamentarian. The late Lord Playfair, who was a son of George Playfair, chief inspector general of Bengal hospitals, was born at Meerut, British India, in 1819.

Three New Warships. To be completed under heavy penalty, within two years. NEW YORK, May 30.—The navy department will call upon shipbuilders today to prepare to build the three battleships authorized by the present session of congress.

Strikers on Board St. Louis Return to Work. NEW YORK, May 30.—The auxiliary cruiser St. Louis sailed from the American pier today, just as the ship was drawing out from the pier.

Illinois Naval Reserves. En route to Key West to be assigned to vessels. BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 30.—A trainload of naval reserves from Illinois passed through Birmingham today en route to Key West.

Big Day at Chaska. Decoration day was celebrated by a memorial service in the public park this forenoon. The orator of the day was Hon. Albert H. Hall, of Minneapolis.

Agreement with Canada. Negotiations quickly concluded and the result will now be submitted to the Imperial Government for approval.

Commission Will Settle All Future Controversies. WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Canadian negotiations which have been in progress here for the last week were concluded tonight.

No Shortage in Troops. Minnesota furnished every man she was asked to. Entanglement between the War Department and the Governor Turned out to have been purely clerical.

Senate Committee Turns Down a Batch of Amendments. WASHINGTON, May 30.—The senate committee on finance was in session for three hours today considering amendments which have been suggested to the war revenue bill.

Trade Discussion with France Successfully Closed. WASHINGTON, May 30.—The trade discussion with France, which began directly on the appointment of Mr. Kassin to take charge of reciprocity negotiations.

Leisurely Notations. When one reads of the superstitions that prevail on the high seas and then listens to the learned arguments going to show the superstitions of women when compared with men, the eye is struck by the fact that all sailors are womanish or all women are sea-sick.

Miss Charlotte Hill and Mr. Theodore Griggs Win First Prize. Walker Entertained at Dinner by Capt. and Mrs. J. J. McCarty.

Leisurely Notations. When one reads of the superstitions that prevail on the high seas and then listens to the learned arguments going to show the superstitions of women when compared with men, the eye is struck by the fact that all sailors are womanish or all women are sea-sick.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court, the king's son, the prince, was dressed as an innkeeper, welcomed the czar, the czar's personage, the descendant now owns two large estates, from which he is said to derive a revenue of $150,000.

When Peter the Great was traveling in disguise through Europe he refused to stop anywhere but at an inn. To illustrate this within the king's court,