

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

A HEART IN SOCIETY.

Tribute to Helen Gould Might Be Passed on to Many Others.

If the war has brought to the front heroes it has also brought out heroines, and brought them from sources from which people do not usually look for heroic qualities.

charm, especially if she is pretty and innocent, and it may help an hour or two to pass pleasantly away, but there is nothing lasting in it, nothing that can hold a man and command his devotion.

French vs. American and English English critics are trying to account for the fact that American and English women are less conversant with their husbands' business affairs than French women.

age to others. Other writers have noticed this peculiarity of temperament in French women. It has been said that Americans have a certain degree of "degreco" which compels a constant civility, but that lack of true balance makes womanly energy in the Western continent flit and uncertain, while the Gallic women will be found to more equable natures.

True Aristocracy. The following little story from the Baltimore American contains a sermon for the girls who would be truly aristocratic:

Princess Louise, marchioness of Lorne, says the writer, is perhaps the most democratic of Queen Victoria's daughters, so far as a term can be applied to any royal princess. She has no sympathy with pretensions and affectations.

their mother's teachings about religion and made them think seriously. He says that during the time after the Santiago battle, when so many men lay wounded and comatose, less numbers were down with fever, he walked up and down the company streets and took a look at the men sitting outside their tents, and that ten out of every dozen were reading Bibles or some religious book.

It has been ascertained, therefore, to the secretary of the organizations throughout the state if they will forward to the editor of the department a statement of membership, object of association, methods of procedure and other pertinent information as will form a valuable source of reference to the department as well as to club women.

Hindu Wifehood. A Hindu child-wife divides her year in two intervals, one of which she spends with her parents, this being a sort of vacation time, and the other she spends at the house of her husband's parents.

FROM RANSOM AND HORTON. We want to say a few words to the public in general in regard to our reopening in St. Paul. We have concluded that St. Paul is a healthy business condition, and while it has had some hard blows, we find other towns all over the West have had their share, too, and a careful investigation has convinced us that the merits of St. Paul at present and its chances for the future are better than those of any other town in the West.

Closing our business last April, avoiding the inevitable losses of Spring and Summer business, and being enabled to thus break all our contracts for help, rent, etc., we are now able to start for the Fall under a largely reduced expense account and to some extent change our entire methods of business.

We shall handle reliable high-class goods, but at close profits and popular prices. And we wish to say right here that we are told that many people are afraid to come to our store, thinking we have only high-priced goods. And this largely because we have a handsomely equipped and decorated store.

We feel that St. Paul ought to support such a store, and, while asking no favors, we ask the citizens to show us by their presence in our store (you will not at any time be urged to buy) that we have made a wise decision in selecting St. Paul as the city for us to tie to, and we promise to give you as handsome and varied a selection of Fine Furs and Cloaks as can be found in any Eastern city, and we give you our word that in no place in either of the Twin Cities can you buy the same articles at less than our prices.

RANSOM & HORTON. N. B.—We are now open, with an elegant line of goods coming in daily. We have exclusive goods, to be found nowhere else. We will give you notice shortly of our Formal Opening. Attend to Fur Orders and Repairs NOW.

CENTRAL PARK SUICIDE. Jet Cross the Only Clue to Lead to Identification. NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—In one of the most frequented parts of Central park a woman, fifty-five years old and well dressed, committed suicide by shooting herself in the head. She was discovered by a park policeman immediately after the shooting, and was conveyed

MRS. LYNES ESCAPES The Hospital and a Fearful Operation. Hospitals in great cities are sad places to visit. Three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow-white beds are women and girls.

Why should this be the case? Because they have neglected themselves! Women as a rule attach too little importance to early symptoms of a certain kind. If they have toothache, they will try to save the tooth, though many leave even this too late.

was deserving of more credit in view of these obstacles. Finally a very prosperous, serious-looking man—one who was not only an honest lawyer, but a practical philanthropist, said:

"I have struggled more than you all. I have overcome difficulties compared to which those you describe are microscopic. For I was the only son of a rich man and a fashionable mother. I never knew what a care was what was petted and spoiled, and when my father died he left a large fortune on my hands. In spite of this, I learned a profession, and in the face of my comrades' ridicule I followed it until I have made it of service to myself as well to others."

The moral of this story has a happy application to those women who are reared in careless luxury have nevertheless responded to the call and taken their places in the army of labor. A few lines appeared recently in the Cleveland Leader and were very aptly said about their literary value, however sentimental one may think them in their individual applications.

HOME GLINTS.

It is the opinion of experts that it is impossible for an ordinary housemaid to care properly for Oriental rugs. They are too heavy for them to shake or to handle them in such a manner as to get the dust and dirt out of the pile. It is economy to hire a man once a month to thoroughly clean these fabrics, whose dirt toning, if properly cared for, add so much to the silent, restful elegance of a home.

The continued increase in the number of young women who have left various schools of domestic science after courses varying in length and thoroughness is beginning to have an influence upon the domestic-science problem. There is even a well-founded hope that the minds of many housewives that were waiting for the millennium of relief to come with a rush, it has begun, very slowly and without bare of trumpets, to dawn. It is possible and common now to find young women students who are willing to learn, and to undertake the conduct of an average household for about the wages of a fair cook. Such a student, however, should be given the opportunity of buying of supplies and the cooking, needing only an assistant for the dish washing and the mechanical work of the kitchen.

A FELLOW'S MOTHER.

"A fellow's mother," said Fred, the wise, with his rosy cheeks and his merry eyes, "knows what to do if a fellow gets hurt with that vivacity which is a fall in the dirt. A fellow's mother has bags and strings, bags and buttons and lots of things. No matter how busy she is, she'll stop. To see how well you can spin your top."

"She does not care—not much, I mean—If a fellow's face is not quite clean, and if your trousers are torn at the knee, she can put in a patch that you'd never see."

"A fellow's mother is never mad, and only sorry if you're bad. And I'll tell you this—if you're only true, she'll surely forgive you, whatever you do."

"In sure of this," said Fred, the wise, with a manly look in his laughing eyes, "I'll mind my mother's words, and I'll mind a fellow's baby that every day, .."

FROM THE SCRAP BAG.

Leele's Weekly is authority for the statement that Miss Mollie Atchison, of Opatka, Ill., weighs 600 pounds, has a waist measure of four feet seven inches, wears shoes and gloves No. 6, and is twenty-eight years old. Her mother says that she has broken down nearly every bed in the house, and has cracked most of the chairs, but, as she makes herself very useful indoors and out, milks the cows, hoes the garden and helps her father run a crosscut saw, these damages to the furniture are viewed with a "content eye."
