What Makes Mama So Cross?

A Child's Question Answered by a Famous Specialist.

The mother had one of her "nervous spells" and the little boy had been warned to be very quiet. The restless little fellow moved on tiptoe about the room trying to amuse himself, but almost every move he made was followed by the querulous cry of the mother: "Willie, don't make so much noise."

Many grateful letters come from husbands who have been cured by the wife's new health and happiness. "For five years my wife was in an almost helpless condition, suffering from female weakness, nervousness, indigestion, etc."

no answer. He did not know how to answer. He could only wonder that in a few years the gay and sprightly girl he had married had lost all her spirits and faded in face and fallen in form, and had developed an irritability of temper and an irritability of disposition which was generally ascribed to "nervousness."

But there was something else that papa did not know. He did not know that every such nervous outbreak was the result of a woman's mental suffering because of her own weakness. He did not know that even now behind closed fingers that hid her face the mother was weeping because of her own nervousness and her tears were the cause of the irritability with which she looked at the world.

"What makes mama so cross?" It is a pitiful question. In the little child's eyes the mother is the most salient feature in the failure of marriage. It is not the case of one woman but the case of thousands. The result is a home that is a place of gloom, and the children's love for the mother adulterated with fear. The husband, tired of tears and scolding, drifts to the village store or the city club to spend his evenings. The poor wife sits and looks up at the motto, which she hung on the wall with a wifely pride in her heart and a womanly prayer on her lips: "God bless our home." She feels that the home is cursed instead of blessed.

Poor woman! She is not to blame for her nervousness and her tears. It is the natural and necessary result of her condition. The finest musician in the world could get nothing but strings with irregularity in one of the most salient features in the failure of marriage. It is a condition peculiar to her sex and common to wifehood. Perhaps this condition began long ago in girlhood, but it was not until she became a mother that it was fully developed.

When the coroner's jury arrived at the stockade, they were accompanied by Hon. J. W. Patton, of Springfield, who is Manager Lukens' attorney, and also by a representative of the legal department of the Chicago & Alton road, who is here looking after the interests of the road.

Col. Young, the militia commander, stated the charges during the day and had a consultation with the manager, Lukens. It was at first arranged to continue the coroner's inquest at the stockade, and take the coal company witnesses to the city for the coroner's court. This order was countermanded by Col. Young, who instructed the coroner to adjourn to the stockade and the company with the coroner.
